

A CENSUS OF GREEK MEDICAL MANUSCRIPTS FROM BYZANTIUM TO THE RENAISSANCE

Alain Touwaide

Medicine in the Medieval Mediterranean

A CENSUS OF GREEK MEDICAL MANUSCRIPTS

Manuscripts containing Greek medical texts were inventoried by author and work at the beginning of the 20th century by a group of philologists under the direction of Hermann Diels. Useful as it was—and will continue to be—Diels' catalogue omitted authors and works, misidentified manuscripts, and overlooked codices. Furthermore, since the publication of the catalogue, some libraries have adopted a new system of classification, manuscripts have been destroyed, items have changed location, and new ones have come to light.

The present Census is a checklist of the Greek medical manuscripts currently known in collections worldwide. It is both an amended and updated index of Diels' catalogue, and a list of the items missed or overlooked in Diels, or located since. Although it does not supersede Diels' catalogue, it is the indispensable instrument for a New Diels, and will be the reference for years to come for any new critical edition and medico-historical research based on manuscripts, besides providing the basis for a broad range of other historical inquiries, from codicology to the history of medicine and science, including Byzantine intellectual history, Renaissance studies and humanism, history of the book and early printing, and the history of medical philology and learning.

Medicine in the Medieval Mediterranean is a series devoted to all aspects of medicine in the Mediterranean area during the Middle Ages, from the 3rd/4th centuries to the 16th. Though with a focus on Greek medicine, diffused through the whole Mediterranean world and especially developed in Byzantium, it also includes the contributions of the cultures that were present or emerged in the area during the Middle Ages and after, and which interacted with Byzantium: the Latin West and early vernacular languages, the Syrian and Arabic worlds, Armenian, Georgian and Coptic groups, Jewish and Slavic cultures and Turkish peoples, particularly the Ottomans.

Medicine is understood in a broad sense: not only medical theory, but also the health conditions of people, nosology and epidemiology, diet and therapy, practice and teaching, doctors and hospitals, the economy of health, and the non-conventional forms of medicine from faith to magic, that is, all the spectrum of activities dealing with human health.

The series includes texts and studies. It will bring to light previously unknown, overlooked or poorly known documents interpreted with the most appropriate methods, and publish the results of cutting-edge research, so providing a wide range of scholarly and scientific fields with new data for further explorations.

Foreword

As many other catalogers of ancient manuscripts—this has been my profession for more than 40 years—I sometimes need to describe Greek codices containing medical or related treatises. To this end, I have regularly consulted the well-known catalogue compiled by Hermann Diels and his collaborators, which has, and will continue to be, extremely useful. However, as Alain Touwaide appropriately reminds us in the Introduction to the present work, its limits, its shortcomings and its mistakes have long made it desirable to have, if not a completely revised edition of Diels' catalogue, at least a list of the many corrections and complements made possible thanks to the scholarly research over the past 60 years. The author of the present Census provides such a list.

Having followed for several decades—though episodically—Alain Touwaide's painstaking and time-consuming investigation, I can bear witness to the perseverance with which he has performed and completed his endeavor. Now having carefully and patiently read his impressive volume, I can attest to the extreme accuracy, as well as to the sheer magnitude, of his accomplishment. His work is the result of long and difficult research in the catalogues of manuscript collections and scholarly literature, completed by personal in-situ inspection of many codices. With the present volume, all the data resulting from this quest are made available to the scholarly community.

The present Census is not a New Diels, but the indispensable foundation for such a new catalogue. To compile such a work, all the Greek treatises, compilations and medical fragments contained in all the manuscripts that can be traced through history or that have been preserved through present day should be identified and described precisely enough to be distinguished from any other (be it in their original form or in later rearrangements). Then, their presence in all the manuscripts in which they are said to be found should be verified or negated on the basis of a direct analysis of the codices. Alain Touwaide's Census provides two major instruments toward such a new catalogue: first, his Census is an index that makes it possible to trace all the mentions of all the manuscripts listed in Diels. This index goes further, however, as it provides verification of the identification of all the manuscripts listed in Diels' catalogue (location and shelfmark), and also of their contents. His work does not supersede Diels' catalogue, however, as it does not repeat Diels' data once it has established their accuracy. Second, Touwaide's work lists a great number of manuscripts omitted by or unknown to Diels, together with a short, yet precise, description of the medical texts they contain.

The most significant contribution of the Census—one that I cannot stress enough—is that, in the many cases where Diels' catalogue provides incorrect information, Touwaide goes from one clue to another like a detective, and succeeds not only in catching the culprits of manuscript misidentifications in literature, sometimes going as far back as the Renaissance, but also—if not above all—in rescuing their victims and establishing the correct identity of the manuscripts misidentified in the scholarly tradition up to Diels and his collaborators. Those who work in the field know how much talent, flair, intuition, and patience such inquiries require.

I will not expand on the astute presentation of data in the Census, which deftly combines and clearly distinguishes between Diels' material reproduced ad litteram and Touwaide's own corrections and additions. I stress instead some of his strategic choices, aimed to make consultation of the work straightforward. For the many manuscripts incorrectly cited several times in Diels' lists, correct data are provided only for the first occurrence, instead of using cross-references which, in the footnotes of some publications, force readers through annoying gymnastics. Also, abandoning 19th- and even 20th-century scholarly usage, Touwaide provides an English translation for all the library and collection names originally in other languages, although one might regret that nowadays this is useful, if not necessary. For the identification of the contents of the manuscripts, however, Touwaide maintains the traditional usage of authors' names and titles in Latin, something that will be particularly useful in the future for catalographic purposes. In the bibliography, he deliberately applied the adage quod abundat non vitiat which, by way of consequence, causes pleasure when reading the endless titles cherished by 16th-, 17th- and 18th-century classical scholars.

Working from Touwaide's Census, it will be interesting to evaluate Diels' data and to make some statistic approximations. This could be done, for example, with the number of apparently different manuscripts listed in Diels which refer, in fact, to the same codices or are simply incorrect. One could also do similar evaluations about wrong or inaccurate locations of manuscripts, erroneous shelfmarks, or inexact identification of contents. Similar quantitative evaluation could be applied to the number of manuscripts added to those listed in Diels' catalogue by Touwaide.

As an example, and limiting myself to the first 250 manuscripts mentioned in Diels, I have calculated the number of codices newly introduced and analyzed by Touwaide: they total 194, that is, a number equivalent to 78 per cent of the sample of 250. Bearing in mind that the 250 items do not correspond by any means to 250 actual manuscripts, but to a smaller number because of inexact, inaccurate or redundant information in Diels' catalogue, it becomes immediately clear that Touwaide's Census richly increases the number of Greek codices with medical contents currently known.

If we add to this all the supplementary data and corrections provided by the Census, we can only acknowledge the magnitude and the accuracy of Alain Touwaide's achievement, congratulate him for his contribution to scholarship, and thank him for such a magnum opus.

Introduction¹

In the study of ancient Greek medicine, manuscripts are of fundamental importance as they provide the primary sources without which no documented history can be written. In spite of centuries of activity,² no comprehensive inventory is available. The present volume aims to compensate for this lacuna and offers a world census of currently known Greek manuscripts with medical content.

This census is not entirely unprecedented as lists of Greek medical manuscripts have already been compiled in scholarship, from the Bibliotheca botanica and the Bibliotheca medicinae practicae by the Swiss physician, naturalist and encyclopedist Albrecht von Haller (1707–1777), published in 1771–1772 and 1776–1788, respectively, to Die Handschriften der antiken Ärzte, Griechische Abteilung, edited by the German historian of ancient Greek philosophy and science Hermann Diels (1848–1922) and published in 1905–1908 by the Berlin Academy of Sciences. However, these and similar compilations list only the manuscripts containing the treatises of a select number of ancient physicians. In addition, they do not offer in all cases exhaustive lists of manuscripts for the works under consideration, and even the most recent, Diels' Handschriften der antiken Ärzte, is now obsolete because new manuscripts have come to light since its publication, others have changed location, and further still, others were destroyed during the two World Wars of the 20th century.³

An attempt toward a systematic inventory of manuscripts was made in mid-19th century by the French librarian and historian of medicine Charles Daremberg (1817–1872). In order to compile a Catalogue raisonné des manuscrits médicaux,⁴ Daremberg traveled extensively so as to personally inspect entire manuscript collections and identify all relevant items.⁵ In spite of his efforts, however, he could not complete his project.

The present census departs from previous work in two ways: not only does it list the manuscripts of all currently identified Greek medical texts—authored or anonymous—produced in the Greek world from Hippocrates to the fall of Constantinople, but also it aims to be up-to-date and to reflect as closely as possible current knowledge of Greek medical literature and manuscripts. It is not a New Diels as the time has not yet come for such a new catalogue in spite of substantial progress in the inventory and description of ancient manuscripts worldwide, and the introduction of computerization in the humanities.

² For a history of the search of Greek medical manuscripts in scholarship, see Touwaide 2009.

³ On these limitations of Diels' catalogue, see Touwaide 2009: 509–524. The conclusions presented in this article are based on an analysis of the manuscripts that were either listed by Diels as being preserved in libraries of the United Kingdom and Ireland, or are presently located in those libraries. As further study has revealed, these conclusions can be extended to the whole work.

Building on available literature, the census presented here is largely an index of the manuscripts listed in Diels' Handschriften der antiken Ärzte. This index includes a full discussion of the not-infrequent manuscript citations that are incorrect in Diels (be it in toto or in parte). Examination of the contents, history or cataloguing of such items does not aim to replace Diels, even though the results provide data towards a New Diels. The aim is only to allow for proper identification of these manuscripts by providing correct shelfmark, collection, library or location according to the cases. The census goes beyond this corrected index of Diels: besides providing the current name of the cities and libraries mentioned in Diels in the original language and according to current English usage, it introduces many new items as a result of an expansion of the field in two directions: medical topics and chronology.

Medicine is understood here in a broad sense that encompasses many components during the period of the texts contained in preserved manuscripts: not only the canonical works of the so-called "Founding Fathers" Hippocrates and Galen, but also treatises of Christian anthropology,⁶ analytical medicine,⁷ psychology including oniromancy⁸ and physiognomy, lists of materia medica and illustrated botanical reference compilations,⁹ pharmaceutical formularies and hospital pharmacopeias, and literary works medical in nature.¹⁰ Translations into Greek have also been taken into consideration, mostly from Arabic and Persian, but also from Latin. Lexica (mostly botanical) are included as a corollary of the translations, since they were tools for the practice of medicine in a multilingual and multicultural society. Manuscripts are also included for forms of medicine that may be deemed non-scientific by present standards, but were a part of contemporary medicine, medicinal practice, or world of medicine, health and disease. This is the case for iatromathematics, for example, the Cyranides, and the different forms of what is called the Physiologus.

Timewise, Diels is limited to the period spanning Hippocrates to Paul of Aegina, from the 5th century BCE to the 7th century CE. Although a few later physicians are present in the 1906 issue and the 1908 supplement, they are not numerous.¹¹ Many major and minor authors and works of the mid- or late-Byzantine periods are omitted, such as Theophanes Chrysobalantes, the Efodia, Symeon Seth, Nicephorus Gregoras, Nicephorus Blemmydes, Demetrius Pepagomenus, the many translations from Arabic or Persian, hospital manuals, or Johannes Argyropoulus to note just a few. I have tried to include as many post-7th-century CE physicians as identifications of authors and descriptions of texts in catalogues, relevant publications or personal inspection of collections in situ made possible.

For economy's sake, Diels' and new data are merged in a unique list. Several devices have been created to facilitate consultation: cross-referencing where appropriate, running titles on top of the pages, graphic presentation and organization of data on the pages, and also an index. All such finding aids are explained in the Notes for consultation that follow this introduction.

This census is the result of three decades of research in persona in libraries all over the world, of constant and repeated travels (including to remote locations), of innumerable contacts started in a time when neither the Internet nor email existed, of long hours spent over catalogues in search for information that could not be found at first glance, of patient scrutiny of ancient and more recent lists of manuscripts, of tenacity and sometimes also of serendipity, and of active collaboration, the admirable erudition of many of my contacts, and most generous sharing of information.

I have been fortunate to receive help from many colleagues, curators, experts in auction houses, antiquarian book dealers, and specialists across the globe whose names appear in the Acknowledgements that follow the Notes for consultation. The length of the list is an eloquent witness to the generosity with which all of them have replied to my many questions. Also, I have benefitted from the services of the often-anonymous personnel in reading rooms of libraries worldwide who made it possible for me to consult the many manuscripts I requested. Without all of them—known or anonymous, named in the Acknowledgements or not—I would not have been able to collect the information presented here. All are in a certain way the co-authors of this volume, though they do not share the responsibility for its imperfections, imprecision or mistakes, all of which are mine.

For the preparation of this census, I have collected information from available bibliographies, indexed relevant literature, made or acquired images of manuscripts, and, with the development of computerization, increasingly stored relevant information on digital media, and generated computerized databases allowing for multi-criteria retrieval. All this material is held and curated by the Institute for the Preservation of Medical Traditions in Washington, DC, where it is available for consultation by any scholar interested in Greek medical manuscripts and the history of ancient and Byzantine medicine. Likewise, scholars working on specific manuscripts, texts, or ancient physicians are invited to share their discoveries and communicate the results of their investigations—published or not—so that the inventory and description of manuscripts, together with the identification of their texts, will improve, making it possible to shorten the time until a complete New Diels is compiled. In the meantime, all material received by the Institute for the Preservation of Medical Traditions will be deposited in its library and will be made available for study to the scholarly community.

Notes for consultation

1. Identification of manuscripts

Throughout this volume manuscripts are designated by means of four identifiers according to standard codicological practice:

- name of the city where they are preserved;
- name of the library;
- name of a collection when applicable;
- shelfmark.

City names are followed by the two-letter code of their country.¹ They are cited in the original language and script, followed by their English form. Similarly, library names are in the original language and script, and translated into English. All such additional elements appear between parentheses.

The graphic presentation of data reflects the four-level system of identification of manuscripts with four levels of indentation. For example:

Wrocław (PL)
Biblioteka Uniwersytecka we Wrocławiu (University Library Wrocław)
Rehd.

2. Special scripts

City and library names that are not originally in the Latin alphabet are cited in their original writing (Greek, Cyrillic, and Armenian), followed for the latter two by a transcription into the Latin alphabet according to standard tables of conversion, and in all cases the commonly accepted English form or translation, respectively.²

The spelling of Greek terms, author's names and publication titles reflects both the evolution of Greek language (especially the 1982 legislation sanctioning the passage from poly- to monotonic spelling) and the use of single authors, even though such use may contradict contemporary legislation.³

¹ This is the ISO 3166-1 alpha-2 code defined in ISO 3166-1, as a part of the ISO 3166 standard published by the International Organization for Standardization (ISO).

² For the Greek alphabet, ISO 843: 1997; for the Cyrillic alphabet, ISO 9: 1995; for the Armenian alphabet, ISO 9985: 1996.

³ On these questions, see Adrados 2005: 296–297.

3. Index of Diels

For the manuscripts cited in Diels, city and library names exactly reproduce the form provided in Diels. Since it is in German in most cases, I provide the original name and its current English form. For the sake of accuracy, incorrect locations, possible mistaken identifiers, and misspellings exactly reproduce Diels' data. Abbreviated library and collection names have been spelled out.

An index at the end of the volume lists all the library names in the form they have in Diels, in the original language, and in their English form.

Shelfmarks have been treated in the same way and thus reflect all peculiarities present in Diels. As a consequence, shelfmarks possibly differing by minor variants (including Roman numerals instead of Arabic, for instance) have been considered as different items.

All elements of manuscript identification reproduced from Diels are printed in boldface to be easily distinguished from any other information provided in this volume.

All mentions of manuscripts cited in Diels are followed by references to their occurrences. References are made of two elements: a Roman number I or II indicating the volumes of Diels (I for the 1905 issue and II for the 1906 one), or an N for the supplement (Nachtrag, published in 1908). This first element is followed by one or more Arabic numbers corresponding to the page or pages where the manuscripts are mentioned. When manuscripts appear several times on the same page, references are followed by an Arabic number between parentheses indicating the number of citations. A reference as I.90 (3), for example, indicates that a manuscript cited in volume I (1905, on Hippocrates and Galen), page 90, appears three times on that page.

Lists of occurrences are followed by reference to the catalogues where the manuscripts are listed and/or described. In most cases, these catalogues are those consulted by Diels' collaborators.

Manuscripts that are iatrosofia (medical manuals of the Greek-speaking populations in the Ottoman Empire) or humanist/scholarly copies (such as extracts, anthologies or indexes by post-16th-century scholars) are identified as such, possibly with an indication of their period of copy and/or copyist/author.

If manuscripts have changed location, current ones are provided. No such indication is provided for iatrosofia or recent humanist/scholarly copies, as special catalogues for these manuscripts will be published in the future.

4. Census

The census lists manuscripts on the basis of their current location. However, for those cited in Diels, it also cross-references the index.

For the many newly introduced manuscripts, a brief summary of their content is provided with the identification of the folios in which the texts appear. Both identification of texts and references to folios reproduce data provided in available catalogues or relevant publications. References of these works follow the summary.

For the manuscripts that have not been previously described and are listed on the basis of a personal inspection, Latin author's names and titles have been created according to standard cataloguing practice.

5. Cross-referencing

To facilitate cross-referencing between Diels' index and the census the following elements have been introduced:

- all manuscripts listed in Diels are identified by means of a number from 0001 to 1859 between brackets;
- these numbers are placed in the lefthand margin of each page so as to be easily distinguished;
- the numbers attributed to the manuscripts listed on each double page appear in the running titles of the pages on the right side (odd numbers);
- similarly, the names of the cities for which manuscripts are listed on each double page are mentioned in the running titles of the pages on the left side (even numbers).

6. Bibliography

All references to catalogues and relevant publications in the body of the volume are abbreviated. Only the name of the author(s), the year of publication, and the page numbers on which the references are found are provided. In the case of a reference to notes, the page number is immediately followed by the number of the note preceded by the letter n (without space) (e.g. 127n3). Full identification of publications is provided in the bibliography that follows the list of manuscripts. Abbreviated references are listed in alphabetical order of authors' last names and, for each author, in chronological order of publication.

7. General index

The index lists all the names of libraries mentioned in the volume, including the German names provided in Diels and the current names as per the census (in both cases with their original form and their English equivalent).

Μυτιλήνης του Πανεπιστημίου Αιγαίου, Mytilini, Lesvos; Marian Zwiercan, Biblioteka Jagiellońska, Uniwersytet Jagielloński w Krakowie.

In past and recent times, Roland Folter, then at HP Kraus, New York, NY; Jeffrey Eger, Auction catalogues, Morristown, NJ; Christopher de Hamel, then at Sotheby's, London; Camille Previte and Joshua Lipton at Sotheby's, New York, NY; and Paul Grinke, Bernard Quaritch Ltd, London, provided invaluable help to ascertain the provenance and new location of several manuscripts.

Professors John Duffy, Harvard University; Ann-Ellis Hanson, Yale University; Jutta Kollesch, Berlin Academy of Sciences; Vivian Nutton, University College London; and Nancy Siraisi, Hunter College and the Graduate Center of the City University of New York, NY, gave advice on some aspects of this research program. Mgr. Paul Canart, Scriptor emeritus, Biblioteca Apostolica Vaticana, read the whole manuscript, spotted many typos and other errors, and helped identify a couple of misidentified codices that had resisted my efforts.

Finally, special thanks go to the editors of my manuscript, Marisa Gomez, Patricia Kellogg, Jim Kelly and Jenny Rogers.

This manuscript of Galen, Linguarum seu dictionum exoletarum Hippocratis explicatio, without shelfmark in Diels' catalogue is not in Amsterdam, but in Oxford, Bodleian Library, where it is MS. D'Orville 3 (= [0865]).

In Perilli 1999: 431 and n8, 434, 437, it is identified as Leiden, D'Orville 3 (correction in Perilli 2000: 28n1, and Perilli 2011: 177-179).

Codex Atheniensis 1444 does not contain Diocles, Ad Antigonum regem epistula de tuenda valetudine, but rather a nomokanon (see Sakkelion and Sakkelion 1892: 258). This is probably a mistake for Atheniensis 1494 (= [0021]), which contains the Epistula.

- [0038] 41 I.12, 41, 104; II.5.
This manuscript is listed among the copies of the following texts (listed according to the sequential number of pages in Diels' catalogue):
- Hippocrates, Aphorismi (I.12);
 - Hippocrates, Sententiae de vita et morte (I.41);
 - Galenus, In Hippocratis Aphorismos commentarius (I.104);
 - Aetius Amidenus, Libri medicinales (II.5).
- According to Lampros 1895-1900: 1.175, Esfigmenou 41 (2054) does not contain medical texts but Gregorius Nazianzenus.
- Diels' catalogue probably reproduces information taken from the following publications by Costomiris (explicitly cited at II.5):

- 1889: 352-353, on Hippocrates, Aphorismi;
- 1889: 358, about two Commentarii in Hippocratis Aphorismos (one anonymous and the other by Galen);
- 1890: 177, on Aetius Amidenus, Libri medicinales.

Costomiris' information, in turn, comes from a catalogue of the manuscripts in the Esfigmenou collection by Minoïde Mynas (1790-1860) contained in the codex Paris, Supplementum graecum 675 (on which see Omont 1886-1888: 3.294-295). According to Costomiris 1889, this catalogue contains the following information about the manuscript Esfigmenou 41:

- f. 83r: Hippocrates, Aphorismi (see Costomiris 1889: 353) and Commentarii in Hippocratis Aphorismos (ibid.: 358);
- f. 83v: Aetius Amidenus, Libri medicinales (see Costomiris 1890: 177).

In the 1890 article, however, Costomiris mentioned that he could not find this manuscript (that is, the manuscript mentioned by Minas) in Lampros' catalogue then in preparation (see Costomiris 1890: 177n2: "Dans le catalogue manuscrit du Mont-Athos dressé par M. Lambros, qui a eu la bonté de le prêter, je n'ai pu trouver ce manuscrit").

Esfigmenou 41 is not listed in Olivieri 1935: V-X (Aetius Amidenus), but is mentioned in Magdelaine 1994: 227 and n5 (Hippocrates, Aphorismi), who seems to consider that its absence in Lampros' catalogue results from an omission by Lampros.

There seem to have been two manuscripts identified by the same number (41), unless Mynas' information is incorrect. Whatever the case, current manuscript Esfigmenou 41 is not the one referred to here, and the one identified by Mynas as no. 41 cannot be identified.

This item is listed as a copy of Epiphanius, Physiologus.
Manuscript Koutloumousiou 2 is not numbered 3260 in
contain Epiphanius, Physiologus.
As for the manuscript with sequential number 3260 in Lampros
1895-1900: 1.294, it is Koutloumousiou 187. This manuscript contains Epiphanius, Physiologus, under no. 2. It is probably this number 2 attributed to the text in the description of its content in Lampros, ibid., that provoked the incorrect number attributed to the manuscript in Diels' catalogue.

Current shelfmark: 187 (3260).

II.107.

Diels' catalogue adds the following information about this manuscript of Timotheus Gazaecus, De animalibus quadrupedibus physicisque eorum facultatibus listed without shelfmark:

Vgl. Parisin. Suppl. 799. f. 18. Costomiris, Rev. des ét. gr. IV [1892] p. 99.

In Costomiris' article (in Revue des études grecques 4 [1891] and not 4 [1892] as referenced in Diels' catalogue), the following can be read:

Son ouvrage [of Timotheus of Gaza] ... se trouve incomplet dans un ms. de la bibliothèque de saint Athanase de Laura au Mont-Athos. Voir Suppl. grec de Paris 799, fol. 18.

The manuscript of Paris, Supplementum graecum 799 contains (ff. 18r-27v) a catalogue of some manuscripts of the monastic libraries at Mount Athos (title f. 18r, ll. 1-2: Βίβλων τινῶν ἐκ τῶν πολλῶν καὶ διαφόρων τῶν ἐν τοῖς μοναστηρίοις τοῦ Ἀθῶ κατάλογος). The catalogue of the Lavra (ff. 18r, l. 3-20v, l. 11) lists a copy of Timotheus, De animalibus (f. 18r, ll. 10-11) identified as follows:

Τιμοθέου γραμματικοῦ πρὸς τὸν αὐτοκράτορα Ἀναστάσιον περὶ ζώων · ἀτελές.

The catalogue by Spyridon and Eustratiades 1925 does not make it possible to identify this manuscript.

II.29, 31, 32, 33, 38, 39 (2).

This item is a 12th-century copy of the following texts (listed according to the sequential number of pages in Diels' catalogue):

- Dioscorides, De materia medica (II.29);
- Pseudo-Dioscorides, Thēriaka (II.31);
- Pseudo-Dioscorides, Alexipharmaka (II.32);
- Pseudo-Dioscorides, De mensuris et ponderibus (II.33);
- Eutecnius, Paraphrasis in Dionysii Ixeutica (II.38);
- Eutecnius, Paraphrasis in Nicandri Theriaca (II.39);
- Eutecnius, Paraphrasis in Nicandri Alexipharmaca (II.39).

The list of content corresponds to that of Athous, Lavrae Ω 75, on which see above, p. 8, Ἅγιο Όρος, Ιερά Μονή Μεγίστης Λαύρας.

12th century (instead of 11th) corresponds to the period proposed for the manuscript at Diels' time and does not invalidate the identification.

Four manuscripts of Aetius Amidenus, Libri medicinales, without shelfmark identified as follows:

[0086]

Ausser Ω 70 und 72 noch 4 weitere Hdss. bei Costomiris Rev. des ét. gr. III p. 166 und 127.

The reference to Costomiris is to Costomiris 1890:

- at 166, the author briefly refers to 6 Aetius Amidenus manuscripts at Lavra;
- at 177-178 (and not 127 as in Diels) he mentions that there are six manuscripts of Aetius Amidenus (none identified by means of a shelfmark) in the Lavra library. He has not personally inspected these manuscripts, but mentions them on the basis of the Paris manuscript Supplementum graecum 675, ff. 192r, 194r, 199r, 216r, 217r and 217v (which is actually a catalogue of manuscripts of the Lavra monastery by Minoïde Mynas on which, see Omont 1886-1888: 3.294-295).

On each of these six manuscripts Costomiris' 1890: 177-178 provides the following information to which I add, between parentheses, the reference to manuscript Paris Supplementum graecum 675. It must be noted that Costomiris' transcription of the data in Paris, Supplementum graecum 675 does not exactly reproduce the content of the manuscript and is erroneous on more than one point.

In Costomiris article, the manuscripts are identified by a number in either Arabic or Greek numerals.

Those identified by Arabic numerals appear in a catalogue contained ff. 168r-171v and 173r-200r and entitled (f. 168r, ll. 1-2): "Catalogue de la bibliotheque de Laura". Data are as follows (translation is mine):

- ms. 12°, 14th century, paper, in-folio, incomplete (books 8-13), Αετίου [sic] ὀφθαλμικού (Paris, Supplementum graecum 675, f. 192r, ll. 3-4);
- ms. 22, 14th century, paper, in-4°, book 12, Αετίου [sic] Ἀμιδηνου κομητος [sic] τοῦ ὀψικίου λόγος ιβ^{ος} (Paris, Supplementum graecum 675, ff. 193v-194r; for the identification of Aetius' text, see f. 194r, ll. 27-29);
- ms. 46: 13th century, paper, in-folio, incomplete, books 1-8 (ἐκ τῶν τοῦ Αετίου [sic]). Book 1 ends at ὥκιμον; this codex ends at f. 64 (Paris, Supplementum graecum 675, f. 199r, ll. 28-33).

Those identified by Greek numerals appear in a brief catalogue (ff. 209r-217r) entitled (f. 209r, ll. 1-3) "Catalogue de la Grande bibliotheque [sic] de Laura. Ici ouvrages seulement classiques":

- ms. Δ: dated 1395, paper, books 1-16, Αετίου Ἀμιδηνου σύνοψις τῶν τριῶν βιβλίων Ὀριβασίου ... (Paris, Supplementum graecum 675, f. 216r, l. 13-216v);

N.41, 68.

This item appears among the copies of Galen, Excerpta varia (N.41) and Theophilus, De excrementis (N.68).

Manuscript 46 of the Patriarchate in Alexandria does not seem to contain either Galen or Theophilus, or any other medical text, but rather a bilingual Greek-Arabic euchologion (Moschonas 1945: 61-62 [1965: 45-46]).

According to Moschonas 1945: XXX, no manuscript of Alexandria collection contains any works by Theophilus. The data in Diels might refer to codex 36 (ff. 1r-3r) Galenus, Regimen ex quattuor elementis et de preservatione sanitatis (Moschonas 1945: 54-55 [1965:41]). This is a 17th-century manuscript (Moschonas, ibid.; Karas 1994: 348).

I.5.

This is not a Greek copy of Hippocrates, Prognosticon, but rather a Latin one at Oxford, Bodleian Library, MS. Ashmole 1285 (Alexanderson 1963 does not mention it. See also, about the Aphorismi contained in the same codex, Kibre 1985: 44, and Magdelaine 1994 who does not mention it among the Greek codices).

The same information appears in Ackermann 1825: XLVII (without brackets).

Number 7751 comes from C.M.A. 1697: tome 1, part 1 (devoted to the libraries at Oxford and not Cambridge contrary to Ackermann and Diels), p. 341, in a catalogue of manuscripts collected by Elias Ashmole (1617-1692) and preserved in the Bibliotheca Ashmoleana (for the catalogue, see C.M.A. 1697: 1.1.315-357). These manuscripts were transferred from the Ashmolean Museum to the Bodleian Library in 1860 (Morgan 1973: 159). The manuscript referred to here is listed among the “Medici Lat(ini)” (see C.M.A. 1697: 1.1.341) and described as follows (ibid.):

7751. Theophili Liber Urinarum, & pulsuum.

Liber Prognosticorum, &c. Hippocratis, 1285, 6. 8. 9.

Madan, Craster and Denholm-Young 1937: 1143.

Caius Coll. (Caius College), now Gonville and Caius College

In [0189]-[0195], numbers come from C.M.A. 1697, tome 1, part 3, pp. 114-115, in the catalogue of manuscripts of Collegii Caio-Gonvillensis in Cantabrigia (ibid.: 1.3.107-130).

Numbers [0189]-[0191] are included in a list of medical manuscripts (C.M.A. 1697: 1.3.114-115) donated to the College by John Kays, best known as Caius (1510-1573).

Numbers [0192]-[0194] are in a section (C.M.A. 1697: 1.3.115-116) entitled “Libri Latine Conscripti” (ibid.: 1.3.115).

A table of concordance between the numbers in C.M.A. 1697 and the current shelfmarks is in James 1907: xviii-xx.

The numbers from C.M.A. 1697 are used in Ackermann 1821 and 1825.

[0189]	[946]	I.68, 120. This item is supposed to contain Galenus, De usu partium corporis humani libri XVII (I.68) and De abortivo foetu (I.120). Information in Diels’ catalogue reproduces data in Ackermann 1821 (where there are no brackets):

- XCV, no. 29 ctd., De usu partium;
- CLXXXVIII, sub titulo, and CCVI, De abortivo foetu (in both passages the text is attributed to Galen).

The information comes from C.M.A. 1697: 1.3.114, where the manuscript is described as follows:

946.2. Galeni de methodo sanandi lib. 14. Juxta titulum in hoc tamen volumine reperiuntur tantummodo quinque libri & pars Sexti Caeteri habentur in prox. Vol.

2. Idem de usu partium, opus imperfect. sumens initium à capite. 3.

3. De Hippocratis & Platonis dogmatibus lib. 4. imperf.

4. De Abortivo foetu tractatus imperf. L. 48.

This manuscript is Gonville and Caius College Library, 47/24 (= [0183]). It is made of four parts, each with its own page or folio numbering.

De usu partium (frg.) is contained in the second part (starting after p. 160; the first folio is numbered 0). Codex Gonville and Caius 47/24 appears in Diels' catalogue I.68 (with shelfmark 47) among the manuscripts containing De usu partium (= [0183]).

The text identified in C. M. A. 1697 as De abortivo foetu (without author's name and title) and attributed to Galen in subsequent literature (from Ackermann 1821 on; see also recently Fichtner 2012: 84) can be read in the fourth part of Gonville and Caius 47/24, which is made of two folios at the end of the manuscript numbered 10 and 11 (following the third part, made of nine folios). This text in the present manuscript is recorded a second time in Diels' catalogue (I.122), but under the shelfmark "Caius College 47" (= [0183]) and another title:

De XII portis. Frgm. Inc. In porta XVII καὶ βλάβης εἶδον. Expl. in porta XIX ἰατροὶ τοῦ κόπτειν τὴν αἷραν.

This text, which also appears in [0196] and [0486], is not a Galenic work, but a fragment of the Efodia made of three chapters (6.17, 18, and 19 [partim] in the version of Vaticanus graecus 300). In C.M.A. 1697 (followed by all the subsequent literature) it has been misidentified on the basis of the title of the first chapter (6.17: On abortifacient and anticonceptional substances), whereas the other two deal with placenta's elimination (6.18) and sciatica (6.19). In Diels, its identification as a fragment of the text known as De XII portis (and also as De spermate and Zagonia [Fichtner 2012: 115 no. 330]) is incorrect as is also the transcription of its explicit (... ἄκραν instead of αἷραν in Diels).

The other two texts contained in the manuscript according to C. M. A. 1697 are listed in Diels' catalogue under "Gonville and Caius 47" (= [0183]) as follows:

- De placitis Hippocrates et Platonis (= part 3 of the manuscript). See Diels I.74;
- Methodi medendi libri XIV (= part 1 of the manuscript). See Diels I.91.

Same as [0183].

 James 1907: 388-390.
 It appears in C.M.A. 1697: 1.3.115, among the “Libri Latine Conscripti” of the Collegium Caio-Gonvillense, and, further on, in Ackermann 1825: LXVI (who includes it [without brackets] among the Latin copies of the Aphorismi).
- [0195] [1134] I.5.
 This codex is referenced as a copy of Hippocrates, Prognosticon, at Gonville and Caius College in Cambridge.

Number 1134 appears in C.M.A. 1697: 1.3.124, in a list (1.3.120-129) included in the catalogue of Gonville and Caius College and entitled as follows (1.3.120):

Catalogus librorum MSS. ex Donatione Magistri More quondam Socii hujus Collegii.

This item contains 17 texts, none of which is medical.

The manuscript numbered 1134 probably referred to here appears in C.M.A. 1697, tome 1, part 2 (about Oxford, and not Cambridge), in a catalogue (1.2.31-38) entitled as follows (2.1.31):

Librorum Manuscriptorum Collegii Novi in Oxonia catalogus.

In the section Libri Medicinae (1.2.34-35), number 1134 reads as follows (1.2.35):

1134.170 Isagogae Joannitti.

Philaretus de pulsum negotio.

Tegni Galeni cum Commentario Haly.

Theophilus de Urinis.

Aphorismi Hippocratis, cum Commentario Galeni, Lat.

Prognostica Hippocratis, cum Commentario Galeni, Lat.

Regimen Acutorum Hippocratis, cum Commentario Galeni, Lat.

Aegidii versus de Urinis, cum Commentario Gilberti.

This item is codex 170 in the collection of New College at Oxford (= [0882]), and is a Latin manuscript (see Kibre 1985: 14 [Acutorum regimen], 56 [Aphorismi], 210 [Prognostica]; neither Alexanderson 1963 [Prognosticon], nor Magdelaine 1994 [Aphorismi] list it).

The same information (without brackets) appears in Ackermann 1825: XLVII, where the text contained in the manuscript is identified as follows:

Cum aphor. et Galeni comm. Latin.

Same as [0882].

[0196]

[6605] I.120.

This is supposed to be a copy of Galenus, De abortivo foetu (on which see [0189]).

No number 6605 appears in the catalogue of Gonville and Caius College at Cambridge in C.M.A. 1697: 1.3.107-130. It appears, instead, in two other catalogues in C.M.A. 1697:

- a short catalogue in C.M.A. 1697: 1.1.301, with 20 manuscripts in the collections of the Bodleian Library. This catalogue is entitled as follows:

Accedunt Annotationes viri summi Henrici Savilli in scriptores Mathematicos.

Number 6605 contains Cl. Ptolemaei Geographia Gr. cum Notis.

- the second catalogue (C.M.A. 1697: 2.1.198-203) is entitled as follows (2.1.198):

Librorum Manuscriptorum Caroli Theyeri Generosi in Comitatu Glocestriensi catalogus.

Number 6605 is described as follows (2.1.202):

Pantegni Constantini.

Anatomia Galeni, & de interioribus.

Megategni Galeni. Alkind. de gradibus.

Alfarabius de tempore.

Aristoteles de animalibus; de anima, &c.

Tract. de substantia orbis.

De terra & Elementis.

No mention of a treatise De abortivo foetu by Galenus is made.

These being the only two occurrences of number 6605 in C.M.A. 1697, this information cannot be explained. It appears in Ackermann 1821: CLXXXVIII, sub titulo (without brackets).

Information about the manuscripts numbered 6605 in C.M.A. 1697 has been incorrectly recorded in the scholarly literature. The codex 6605 listed in C.M.A. 1697: 2.1.202, appears in Ackermann 1821: CXXVI, no. 56, with an explicit and correct reference to “Cat. MSS. Angl.,” but a mistaken mention of Galenus, Methodi medendi.

[Cath. Metens.] (Cathedralis Metensis)

[0203]

[226] I.5.

This copy of Hippocrates, Prognosticon, referenced as a Greek manuscript in a collection at Cambridge, is actually a Latin manuscript once in the library of Metz Cathedral in France.

The same information as in Diels' catalogue (together with a reference to "Montf. II. p. 1380" [= Montfaucon 1739]) appears in Ackermann 1825: XLVII (without brackets):

in bibl. cathed. Metensi cum antiqua translatione et commento no. 226 secundum Montf. II. p. 1380.

The appellation Cath. Metens. (= Cathedralis Metensis) does not designate any cathedral at Cambridge. Instead, it designates the cathedral church in Metz (France), which had a collection of manuscripts until 1791. A catalogue of this collection is provided in Montfaucon 1739: 2.1376-1384.

Number 226 (which is not a shelfmark but a sequential number in Montfaucon) referred to here contains the following texts (ibid.: 2.1380) :

Hippocratis liber prognosticorum cum antiqua translatione & commento. Ejusdem Regimentum acutorum, cum commento Galieni, in pergameno 500. circiter ann.

On the basis of this information, it appears that this manuscript is also referred to in Ackermann 1821: CLXXXIV, no. 15 ctd., as follows:

... cum commento Galieni est in biblioth. cathedr. Metens. n. 226. Montf. II. p. 1380.

This is a Latin manuscript (see Kibre 1985: 56, where the shelfmark is accompanied by a * meaning "not examined"; Alexanderson 1963 [Prognosticon] does not mention this manuscript).

Further to the confiscation of the belongings of religious communities in the wake of French Revolution, the collection of Metz Cathedral library was transferred to the city library in Metz (now Bibliothèque-Médiathèque Pontiffroy). There, the present item was no. 174 (see Catalogue général des manuscrits 1879: 78, where its provenance is identified as "De la cathédrale de Metz").

This manuscript is listed in Diels I.6, among the copies of the Latin translation of Hippocrates, Prognosticon, with the specification "Comm. sup. Progn.", and also at I.15, among the copies of the Latin translation of Hippocrates, Aphorismi, with the specification "c. comm. Gal."

This manuscript was destroyed in 1944 during World War II (Catalogue général des manuscrits 1962: 7 for the fire of the collection, and 12 for this item).

This is not a Greek, but rather a Latin copy of Hippocrates, Prognosticon (I.5) and Aphorismi (I.12).

Number 2055 is not a shelfmark but a sequential number in C.M.A. 1697: 3.1.159, in the catalogue of manuscripts “in Aula Pembrochiana apud Cantabrigiam” (3.1.156-161), where the content of the manuscript is described as follows (1.3.159):

2055. 127. Comment. super Tegni secundum Galenum

2. Regimen acutorum, cum Comment.

3. Liber Aphorismorum, cum Comment.

4. Liber Prognosticorum, cum Comment.

This Latin manuscript is listed by Ackermann 1825: LXVI, among the Latin copies of the Aphorismi. See also Kibre 1985: 51 (Aphorismi), 203 and 208 (Prognosticon). Neither Alexanderson 1963 (Prognosticon) nor Magdelaine 1994 (Aphorismi) mention it. Similarly, Ackermann 1825: XCIX, lists it among the Latin manuscripts of Regimen acutorum, as does also Kibre 1985: 12. Nevertheless, Ackermann 1825: XLVII, mentions it among the Greek copies of Prognosticon. In no case, however, does Ackermann 1825 use brackets.

This manuscript of Hippocrates, Prognosticon (I.5) and Aphorismi (I.12), is in Latin.

Number 1866 is not a shelfmark, but rather a sequential number in the catalogue of manuscripts Domus S. Petri apud Cantabrigiam published in C.M.A. 1697: 1.3.147-155, where the present item is described as follows (ibid.: 1.3.153):

2. Prognostica ejusdem, cum comment.

3. Liber de regimine acutorum, cum comment.

4. Tegni Galeni, cum comment. Haly.

This is not a Greek manuscript, but rather a Latin one. Ackermann 1825: XLVII (Prognosticon) and LXVI (Aphorismi), in both cases without brackets, lists it among the Latin copies of the works, and neither Alexanderson 1963 nor Magdelaine 1994 mention it (for the Prognosticon and the Aphorismi, respectively). See also Kibre 1985: 55 (Aphorismi), 208 (Prognosticon), and also 12 (Regimen acutorum).

This manuscript comes from the collection of Peiresc (partially preserved at Carpendras library; see Lambert 1862: 2.XVII-XV, and Catalogue général des manuscrits 1901: XXVI-XXXIII). In the catalogue of Carpentras collection compiled by Charles-Godefroy-Alphonse Lambert (b. 1795) (3 volumes, 1862), the manuscript now with shelfmark 1774 is identified as number 5 in the Peiresc collection in Carpentras (Lambert 1862: 2.23-31; see Catalogue général des manuscrits 1901: LVIII, for a table of concordance between Lambert's identifier and the current shelfmark).

- [0210] nr. - I.123.
This item listed without library name and shelfmark is a copy of Galenus, Iatrosophia.

The only collection known to have been in the Greek island of Καστελλόριζο is that of the local teacher Achilleas L. Dimantaras (1852-1930).

His library and archives were given to the Γενικά Αρχεία του Κράτους (General State Archives of Greece) in Athens by his family (see Gkinis 1963: 113, and also Olivier 1995: no. 1646).

In the current state of research, this item cannot be located in the collections of the General State Archives of Greece in Athens. At any rate, from its description in Diels' catalogue, it seems to be a recent iatrosofion rather than a copy of an authentic Galenic treatise.

(ol. Meerm. 298)

According to Diels’ catalogue, this manuscript contains Galenus, De simplicium medicamentorum temperamentis et facultatibus.

There is a mistake in Diels’ catalogue and, probably on this basis, also in Petit 2010: 146. According to Phillipps Manuscripts 1837-1871: 101, the manuscript Phillipps 6774 contains Bedae Martyrologium. On the other hand, the manuscript Meerman 298 (Bibliotheca Meermanniana 1824: 4.47, sub numero) contains the following works:

Simeonis Sethi Protovestiarii, Antiocheni, de ciborum proprietatibus et virtute syntagma. – Anonymi synopsis in quaedam Galeni capita de simplicibus.

Manuscript Meerman 298 became Phillipps 6765, described as follows in Phillipps Manuscripts 1837-1871: 101, sub numero:

Simeonis Sethi, Antiocheni, de Ciborum proprietatibus. ¶ Anonymus in Galenum de Simplicibus.” (see above, [0216]).

Thus there is confusion between Phillipps 6774 and 6765, the latter of which is referred to here.

[Montf. p. 1407] I.148.

This is supposed to be a copy of Galenus, Excerpta varia in the collection of a “Bibl. S. Petri Corbeiens[is]” not better identified in Diels' catalogue.

Reference is to Montfaucon 1739: 2.1407, in the catalogue of manuscripts “in Bibliotheca Monasterii Sancti Petri Corbeiensis” (ibid.: 2.1406-1408), that is the library of the Benedictine monastery of St. Peter at Corbie. The manuscript appears among Philosophi & Medici and is described as follows (2.1407):

Collectiones ex Galeno Fratris Joan. Ordinis Minorum, cod. memb. saec. 15.

The information in Diels' catalogue comes from Ackermann 1821: CLXXXVIII, where the following can be read (without brackets):

Collectiones ex Galeno fratr. Joann. ordin. minor. exstant in bibl. S. Petri Corbeiensis. Montfautc. p. 1407.

With the French Revolution, the library of Corbie Monastery was closed and its manuscripts were transferred to Amiens sometimes during the year 1791 (Delisle 1861: 320-322). They are now among the holdings of the Bibliothèque of Amiens (now identified as “Bibliothèques d’Amiens Métropole”).

The item referred to in Diels' catalogue seems to be the current manuscript Amiens, 303 C coming from Corbie (see f. 1r for the note of provenance “Monasterii Sti Petri Corbeiensis”). Its content has been incorrectly identified by Montfaucon and in the subsequent literature. It is not by Galen, but by Iohannes Galenus as an addition on f. 1r indicates:

Incipit comuneloquium (add man. rec.: compilatum a fratre Johanne Galeno ordinis fratrum minorum)

It is not a copy of any ancient Greek or Byzantine medical work, but the Communiloquium Margarita doctorum sive Summa collationum ad omne genus hominum sive Summa de regimine vitae humanae by John of Wales (Iohannes Guallensis [ca. 1220; fl. 1257-1285; d. 1285]). The work is known through several manuscripts and was published in an incunabulum edition as early as 1472 (on John of Wales, see Waddingus 1650: 209-211, and, more recently, Glorieux 1933-1934: 2, no. 332a, and Sharpe 1997: 338).

On manuscript Amiens 303 C, see Garnier 1843: 236-237; Catalogue général des manuscrits 1893: 142-145.

This is supposedly a copy of Hippocrates, De methodo medendi libri VI in Greek.

The same information appears in Ackermann 1825: CLXXVII, sub titulo Methodus curandi Hippocratica (without brackets).

Number 1709 appears in the same catalogue as [0229] where it is described as follows (2.2.61):

1709.34. Methodus curandi Hippocratis; item Commentarii Hunein Ibn Ishak in Anatomem Galeni. Arab.

It is an Arabic ms., now Oxford, Bodleian Library, MS. Marsh 379.

[0232] [502] I.5, 12.

This manuscript is listed among the copies of Hippocrates, Prognosticon (I.5) and Aphorismi (I.12).

The same information appears in Ackermann 1825: XLVII (among the “CODICES MSS.” without precision of the language), and LXV (in the section “Latini exstant”), respectively (without brackets, however).

Number 502 appears in the catalogue of manuscripts “Collegi Sanctae Trinitatis apud Dublinum” in C.M.A. 1697: 2.2.16-48. It is a Latin manuscript containing 17 works including the following medical ones (ibid.: 2.2.34):

502.362. Hippocratis, Aphorismi, f. 1.

2. Prognostica Hippocratis, 12.

3. Liber Hippocratis de regimine acutorum, 19.

5. Ejusdem Astronomia de infirmitatibus, 37.

6. Isagoge Jo. ad Tegni Galeni, 43.

7. Secreta Hippocratis, 53.

This manuscript is listed among the Latin copies of the Aphorismi in Ackermann 1825: LXV (without brackets). Neither Alexanderson 1963 nor Magdelaine 1994 mention it. See Kibre 1985: 13 (Regimine acutorum), based on Diels.

Escorial (San Lorenzo de El Escorial) (ES)Scorial. (Scorialenses)

[0236] Puschm. I p. 90 II.12.

This is a manuscript of Alexander Trallianus, Therapeutica.

The reference is to Puschmann 1878-1879: 1.90, where a manuscript of the Escorial is mentioned with no element of identification other than a reference to “Miller (Catal. des MSS. grecs de l’Escorial, pag. 140)” (= Miller 1848).

On this basis this manuscript can be identified as Φ. I. 2.

Same as [0263].

[0237] III 14 II.20.

This manuscript is mentioned in reference to codex Oxford Baroccian. 88 (= [0817]) containing Athenaeus, Synopsis de urinis. It is Escorial T. II. 14.

Supplementary information in Diels’ catalogue provides a list of manuscripts (including the Escorial item) and a reference to “Daremborg Not. et Extr. I 17.”

In Daremborg 1853: 17, we find the same list of manuscripts as in Diels’ catalogue for this specific entry. The Escorial manuscript mentioned in Daremborg is “T, III, 14 [sic], f. 197” (instead of III 14 in Diels’ catalogue), with a reference to “Catal. des mss. de l’Escorial, par M. Miller, p. 130” (= Miller 1848).

In Miller 1848: 130, an anonymous Synopsis de urinis is listed as being on f. 197r of a manuscript that is not T. III. 14 as in Daremborg, but T. II. 14.

There is a series of mistakes: III 14 in Diels’ catalogue is a mistake for T. III. 14 in Daremborg 1853, and T. III. 14 in Daremborg, in turn, is a mistake for T. II. 14, as the reference to Miller 1848: 130 reveals.

The text contained at ff. 192r-198r is not Athenaeus, Synopsis de urinis as stated in Diels’ catalogue, but the Synopsis edited by Ideler 1841-1842: 2.305-306 (see Revilla 1936: 487-495).

This is a reference to one or more Oribasius manuscripts containing Praecepta salubria (frg.).
Although this text does not seem to appear in any Florentine manuscript under Oribasius' name, it can be found in the following three codices:
- plut. 57.50 (= [0301]) (f. 577v) under the title ὑγιεινὰ παραγγέλματα σύντομα (Bandini 1764-1770: 2.432);
 - plut. 59.17 (= [0305]) (f. 74r) under the title περὶ διαίτης (Bandini 1764-1770: 2.533);
 - plut. 87.16 (= [0371]) (f. 14r) under the title ὑγιεινὰ παραγγέλματα σύντομα (Bandini 1764-1770: 3.397).
- These three manuscripts are listed in Diels' catalogue (II.20) under Asclepiades, Praecepta salubria (= [0301], [0305], and [0371], respectively). The present item duplicates one or more of these numbers.
- [0286] [ap. Bandini III 122] I.117.
This is a copy of a Pseudo-Galenic treatise entitled, De sero lactis.
Reference is to Bandini 1764-1770: 3.121-122 (and not 122 only as listed in Diels) about plut. 74.19 (= [0332]). The text is listed at § XI, where it is attributed to Johannes Damascenus and entitled De sero lactis et eius facultate.

The treatise De alimento by Hippocrates does not appear on f. 61 in Florentinus pluteus 71, 1 (which contains Simplicius, In decem praedicamenta Aristotelis; see Bandini 1764-1770: 3. 1). It appears in pluteus 74.1 (= [0313]).

Bandini 1764-1770: 3.41-46; see 43 for De alimento.

[plut. 73, 1] I.48.

This manuscript is referenced as a copy of Remedia by Hippocrates.

The codex Florentinus 73.1 is a Latin manuscript (it is not mentioned in Fryde 1996) that does not contain Hippocratic works in Latin translation (it is not listed in Kibre 1985), but it does contain Celsus, De medicina (see Marx 1915: XXV-XXVI; Serbat 1995: LXVIII; Mazzini 1999: 45) as well as a list of authors of formulae for medicines, including Ypocrates (Bandini 1776: 11-22).

Other manuscripts may have been referred to. Three mentions of Florentine manuscripts of the pluteus 73 containing texts with a similar content appear in Ackermann 1825 (without brackets) with a reference to “Montfauc. I” (= Montfaucon 1739, vol. 1):

- CLXXVI: Hippocratis de regimine medicorum (“Montfauc. I. p. 383”), where an annotation “quis sit nescio” appears.

In Montfaucon 1739: 1.383, this is plut. 73.30, which corresponds to the current plut. 73.33 as Bandini 1776: 64 established (for the manuscript, see ibid.: 60-64). In the manuscript plut. 73.30, see ff. 85 et seq., for the text Hippocras de regimine Medicorum (Bandini 1776: 63);

- CLXXVI-CLXXVII: Hippocratis de diversis herbarum generibus (“Montfauc. I. p. 381”).

In Montfaucon 1739: 1.381, this is plut. 73.1, which corresponds to the current plut. 73.16 (see Bandini 1776: 41, and 35-41 for the description of the manuscript). The manuscript contains Pseudo-Apuleius, which may have been mistakenly identified as a Hippocratic treatise as in Montfaucon;

- CLXXVII: Hippocr[at]is antidotarium (“Montfauc. p. 382”).

In Montfaucon 1739: 1.382, this is plut. 73.11, which corresponds to the current plut. 73.23 (Bandini 1776: 49, and 48-49 for the whole manuscript). It contains an antidotarium (ff. 68 et seq. [Bandini 1776: 48]), which is not by Hippocrates as in Montfaucon 1739 and Ackermann 1825, but by Râzî (Bandini 1776: 48).

[0308] [plut. 73, 7] I.12.

This manuscript of Hippocrates, Aphorismi is not in Greek, but in Latin. It is not mentioned by either Magdelaine 1994 or Fryde 1996.

A manuscript “Laur. Med. plut. 73. no. VII” is mentioned by Ackermann 1825: LXV (without brackets) among the Latin manuscripts of the Aphorismi with a reference to “Montf. I. p. 382” (= Montfaucon 1739: 1.382) in which the content of the manuscript is identified as follows:

VIII. [falso pro VII] Membr. liber Isagogarum Joannitii ad * Tegni Galeni.

Liber Aphorismorum Hippocratis particul. VII.

Philareti de Pulsibus.

Aphorismi Joannis Damasceni.

Liber Tegni Galieni.

Acutorum Hippocratis.

This item in Montfaucon 1739 corresponds to the current plut. 73.21 as Bandini 1776: 46 established (stressing the typo VIII pro VII in Montfaucon). The description of the content provided by Montfaucon 1739 for plut. 73.7 corresponds to that of plut. 73.21 in Bandini 1776 (on plut. 73.21, see Bandini 1776: 45-46). Florentinus 73.21 is listed in Kibre 1985: 62.

[0309] [plut. 73, 8] I.12.

This copy of Hippocrates, Aphorismi is not a Greek, but a Latin manuscript. It is not mentioned by either Magdelaine 1994 or Fryde 1996.

A manuscript “Laur. Med. plut. 73. no. VIII” is mentioned by Ackermann 1825: LXV (without brackets) among the Latin manuscripts of the Aphorismi, with a reference to “Montf. I. p. 382” (= Montfaucon 1739: 1.382) in which the content of the manuscript is identified as follows:

VIII. Membr. Hippocratis Aphorismata particul. VII.

Manuscript plut. 73.8 according to Montfaucon 1739 corresponds to the current plut. 73.13 as Bandini 1776: 32 established. This manuscript contains “Hippocratis Aphorismi particulae VII. Anonymo interprete” (Bandini 1776: 32). Codex plut. 73.13 is listed in Kibre 1985: 48. On it, see also Fryde 1996: 827.

[0310] plut. 73, 9 I.111.

Whereas this manuscript is listed among the Greek copies of Galenus, Definitiones medicae in Diels’ catalogue, it is a Latin codex (see Bandini 1776: 26-28; the codex is not mentioned in Fryde 1996).

This is a translation by Euphrosyno Bonino philosopho Florentino (Frosino Bonino [fl. 1497-1525]) (Durling 1967: 466, no. 48, and Rice 1980: 157).

[0311] [plut. 73, 22] I.12.

This is not a Greek copy of Hippocrates, Aphorismi (it is not mentioned by Fryde 1996), but a Latin one, which is plut. 73.28.

A manuscript “Laur. Med. plut. 73. no. XXII” is mentioned by Ackermann 1825: LXV (without brackets) among the Latin manuscripts of the Aphorismi with a reference to “Montf. I. p. 382” (= Montfaucon 1739: 1.382, for plut. 73 XXII; however, see p. 383 instead of 382).

Manuscript pluteus “73 XXII” in Montfaucon 1739 does not contain the Aphorismi, but instead contains the following text:

XXII. Membr. antiq. Rosea spina Chirurgiae, quae est colligens dicta sapientum composita a Magistro Bongianae de Orto Cive Aretino particularis III.

There seems to be a mistake in Ackermann 1825 (followed by Diels), possibly for plut. 73 XXIV in Montfaucon 1739: 383, which contains the following works:

XXIV. Membr Isagoge in medicinam magistri Joannicii, sine titulo.

Hippocratis Aphorismata, sine titulo.

Ejusdem prognosticorum libri sive parculae [sic] III.

Libri Philareti de pulsibus sine titulo.

Liber de differentia urinarum The [sic] sine titulo.

Ars Galeni lib. tribus, sine titulo.

Hippocrates de morbis acutis.

Liber Medicus, sine titulo: omina cum schol. & gloss. interlin.

Codex plut. 73 XXIV in Montfaucon 1739 corresponds to the current plut. 73.28, which contains the Latin works listed by Montfaucon for 73 XXIV (Bandini 1776: 52-53).

[0312] [plut. 74, (?)] I.81.

This item of uncertain identification is listed among the copies of Galenus, De morborum temporibus.

The same information (without brackets) appears in Ackermann 1821: CII, no. 33 (“in Medicea plut. 74”).

No Florentinus codex seems to contain the Galenic treatise referred to here (see Bandini 1764-1770: 3.507-509, sub nomine Galenus).

This may be a confusion with the Galenic treatise De totius morbi temporibus contained in codex pluteus 74.5 (= [0317] on which see Bandini 1764-1770: 3.51-53, especially 51, § IX).

According to Petit 2010: 146, who lists the manuscripts of Galenus, De simplicium medicamentorum temperamentis ac facultatibus, this manuscript is lost or cannot be found (ibid.: 146n5).

This may result from some confusion: the text described in Bandini 1764-1770: 3.95, is not Galenus, De simplicium medicamentorum temperamentis ac facultatibus as Bandini's description may suggest, but Dioscorides, De remediis parabilibus, as the appendix in Bandini 1764-1770: 136-138 explicitly specifies (see also Fryde 1996: 799). This text is followed by a collection of formulae for medicines identified as a post-Galenic anthology (Scarborough 1981: 24n119).

In the inventory of the Medici collection compiled by Fabio Vigili (d. 1553) between 1508 and 1510 (codex Vaticanus Barberinianus latinus 3185), number 365 (in Vat. Barb. lat. f. 320v; see Fryde 1996: 654, and 819, no. 365) is identified as follows:

Galenī περὶ ἀπλῶν φαρμάκων, sive περὶ τῆς τῶν ἀπλῶν φαρμάκων δυνάμεως, id est de simplicibus libri undecim.

Such description may have prevented the identification of Vigili's item 365 as current plut. 74, 10 and has given the impression that the Vigili manuscript is lost (Fryde 1996: 654) or unidentifiable (ibid.: 817).

Jackson 1998: 204, sub Vig. 365, identifies Vigili's number 365 as Paris, graecus 2159.

[0325] [plut. 74, 12] I.56.

This manuscript is supposed to contain Excerpta Hippocratica varia.

Although this designation is not precise enough to identify any specific text, plut. 74, 12 contains, according to Bandini 1764-1770: 3.100-101, fragments of Galenic commentaries on Hippocratic treatises identified as follows in Bandini, ibid.:

- (ff. 1r et seq.) Excerpta quaedam ..., e Galeni Libris IX. de Placitis Hippocratis et Platonis (see Diels I.74 where plut. 74, 12 is mentioned, as well as De Lacy 2005: 26-28);
- (f. 28v) Galenus ex Commentariis in Hippocratem de natura hominis (see Diels I.101, where 74, 12 is mentioned, as well as Mewaldt 1914: XIII);

38 I.5, 41, 127, 131; II.7, 59-60, 96, 102.

This manuscript is listed for the following texts (listed here in the order of the folios according to Diels' catalogue, except the first one, which has no folio numbering in Diels' catalogue; references to Diels' catalogue follow the titles):

Stephanus Alexandrinus, In Hippocratis praenotiones (II.96);

f. 39: Hippocrates, Epistula ad Ptolemaeum (2) (I.41);

ff. 39 and 41v: Galenus, De pulsibus (I.131);

ff. 52 and 57v: Galenus, De urinis (I.127);

f. 58: Magnus Emesenus, De urinis (II.59-60);

f. 64v: Theophilus, De urinis (II.102);

f. 81: Aetius Amidenus, Excerpta (II.7);

f. 81v: Hippocrates, Prognosticon (I.5).

This manuscript and its content are mentioned in Diels' catalogue on the basis of Papadopoulos-Kerameus 1887: 8-9 (Papadopoulos-Kerameus' work is listed among the sources consulted to compile Diels' catalogue in Diels I.XXIII).

Number 38 comes from Papadopoulos-Kerameus 1887: 6-12, specifically 8-9. It does not reproduce a shelfmark of the library, but was attributed by Papadopoulos-Kerameus as he states in the article (ibid.: 7).

Whereas Diels' catalogue lists this item as in the library of St. Nicolas Church, the article by Papadopoulos-Kerameus 1887 listing the manuscripts in Gallipoli mentions this item (p. 8-9) among the holdings of the Βιβλιοθήκη Κοινότητας (Community Library), and not of St. Nicolas Church (see p. 6 for a first mention of the Community Library and pp. 7-12 for a list and a short description of some of its manuscripts including the present one).

This identification in Diels' catalogue results from confusion among the three collections in Gallipoli mentioned in Papadopoulos-Kerameus 1887: 6-12, including a collection at a St. Nicolas Church, which contained at least one manuscript (below).

In spite of the 1915-1916 Gallipoli campaign, manuscripts from St. Nicolas Church and the collection of the Βιβλιοθήκη Κοινότητας have been preserved. The codex of St. Nicolas Church mentioned by Papadopoulos-Kerameus 1887: 6-7, is now in Αθήνα, Μουσείο Μπενάκη (Athens, Benaki Museum), TA 316 (see Lappa-Zizica and Rizou-Kouroupou 1991: 220-221); another manuscript from Gallipoli is Athens, Benaki Museum, TA 150 (see Lappa-Zizica and Rizou-Kouroupou 1991: 133-135).

Although the library of the Institut Français d'Etudes Byzantines (IFEB) in Paris contains one medical manuscript from Gallipoli, Βιβλιοθήκη Κοινότητας (IFEB manuscript 34 [corresponding to number 35 in Papadopoulos-Kerameus 1887: 8], which contains at ff. 129r-150r a copy of the Physiologus dated 1599), this manuscript (on which see Bingeli et al. 2014: 58-60, and below, p. 262) is not the item mentioned in Diel's catalogue.

In the current state of research, the location of the manuscript referred to here is unknown (in this sense, see Alexanderson 1963: 73-74 about Hippocrates, Prognosticon, and Duffy 1983: 18-19 about Stephanus' commentary on the same treatise). It might be in a private collection (see Olivier 1995: 306, sub nomine Gelibolu).

Diels' identification of the manuscript includes the old shelfmark of the codex (with a mistake), followed by a reference to the catalogue by Rocchi 1883, that is, the following elements in Rocchi's catalogue:

- chapter ("Series nona: Codices philosophici");
- sequential number of the manuscript in this chapter ("Codex quadragesimus sextus").

Such reference to Rocchi's catalogue is not part of the shelfmark of the manuscript. On the shelfmark system at Grottaferrata Library, see Rocchi 1893: 285-289.

The Grottaferrata manuscripts are now identified by means of a shelfmark made of three elements separated by a period sign:

- a Greek majuscule letter;
- a Greek minuscule letter;
- a Roman numeral.

The three elements are followed by the abbreviation "GR." and an Arabic numeral between parentheses.

The Greek Grottaferrata manuscripts have received a new numeration (continuous through the collection, in Arabic numerals), which has not been published yet, although it has already been used in some works (for example Lucà 2003).

- [0396] v. Fabricius, IX. 454-474 II.108.
This item, listed without a library name and a shelfmark, is a copy of Xenocrates, De alimento ex aquatilibus.

The reference is to Fabricius, Bibliotheca graeca, vol. 9 (1719), pp. 454-474, where the text of Xenocrates, De alimento ex aquatilibus can be found (Greek text and Latin translation by Giovanni Battista Rasario [1517-1578]). See also ibid. p. 453, where Xenocrates is listed in the “Index Scriptorum ex quibus Oribasius libros ex ἐβδομηκονταβιβλῶν superstites composuit” (see pp. 452-453 for the index, and 452 for this title). There is no mention of any Greek manuscript.

The only codex Hamburgensis that contains Xenocrates’ text is now at the Staats- und Universitätsbibliothek Hamburg “Carl von Ossietzky”, philol. 313 (see below, p. 88).

This codex of Galenus, De optima corporis nostri constitutione, also appears at I.65 among the Latin translations of Galenus, De temperamentis.

This is a Latin manuscript described as follows in Uffenbach 1720: 4.114, under number CV:

Vol. CV. Duod.

Chartaceum recentissimum, sistens:

1. Galeni libros Tres de Temperamentis diligentius recognitos Thoma Linacro interprete.

2. Eiusdem Galeni de optima nostri corporis constitutione librum unum Ferdinando Balamio interprete ad graecorum exemplarium fidem castigatum.

On these translations by Thomas Linacre (1460-1524) and Ferdinando Balami (d. after 1552 [?]), see Durling 1961: 291 no. 114b, and 288 no. 75d, respectively.

Franke 1967: 193, identifies this manuscript as medicus 914. According to the same, ibid., and Kristeller 1983: 562 (for whom it is a 16th/17th-century codex), this manuscript is in Berlin (on the Hamburg manuscripts in Berlin after World War II, see Carter 1966).

During the winter of 1989-1990, the Hamburg manuscripts then-preserved in Berlin were returned to Hamburg (see Molin Pradel 2001: 15).

The present item is now at the Staats- und Universitätsbibliothek Hamburg “Carl von Ossietzky”, with the shelfmark medicus 914.

Jerusalem (IL)

With the exception of the library identified as Bibl. d. hl. Grabes, the several libraries listed in Diels' catalogue are not independent libraries, but rather collections within the Patriarchal Library (Πατριαρχική Βιβλιοθήκη).

Bibl. d. hl. Grabes (Bibliothek des heiligen Grabes, Βιβλιοθήκη τοῦ Παναγίου Τάφου [Library of the Holy Sepulchre], actually Μετόχιον Παναγίου Τάφου [Collection of the Metochion of the Holy Sepulchre]).

When Diels' catalogue was compiled, these manuscripts were not in Jerusalem, but at the Patriarchate in Constantinople as Papadopoulos-Kerameus 1891-1915: 4.[a] and 4.1 already mentioned. Most of them are currently in Αθήνα, Εθνική Βιβλιοθήκη της Ελλάδος EBE (Athens, National Library of Greece – EBE). See above, p. 15.

This supplement follows the catalogue of the manuscripts in the collection of the Ἱερά Μονή Τιμίου Σταυροῦ (Papadopoulos-Kerameus 1891-1915: 3.1-175), something that may have caused the mistake in Diels' catalogue. Regimont. (Regimontani)

[0436] S. 35 I.151.
This item is listed in the Addenda in volume I, with a reference to I.113 (De urinis ex Hippocrate, Galeno aliisque quibusdam, identified as Kühn 19.609-628).

According to the description on I.151, this text appears on f. 273v and is fragmentary (explicit = Kühn 19.611, 7).

Although no institution is provided at I.151, the information in N.37 (= [0437]) seems to be about the same item and specifies that this manuscript was in the collections of the bibl. urb. (Bibliotheca urbis = Stadtbibliothek [City Library]).

A catalogue of this collection was compiled by Seraphim 1909. Manuscript S 35 is actually S 35. 8° (on which see Seraphim 1909: 302 and 346) and is a 14th/15th-century codex of 274 ff., containing mainly Sextus Empiricus (p. 302).

Some supplementary information is provided by Seraphim 1909: 346 (that is, in the Nachträge):

Hinter den Dialexeis auf Bl. 273/274 und den hinteren Innendeckel Aufzeichnungen und Notizen medicinischen Inhalts.

This information is referred to at N.37 (= [0437]).

On this manuscript, see Mutschmann 1909, particularly 246 (short description); Canart 1977-1979: 309 (short description and history of the manuscript) and 313-314 (who hypothesizes that this manuscript might have been copied by Demetrius Damilas and originally belonged to the Vatican Library); Diller 1983: 387, sub Kaliningrad (in ima pagina), who confirms Canart's hypothesis, that is, that this manuscript strayed from the Vatican Library.

Whatever the copyist and the previous location of this manuscript, the text referred to in Diels' catalogue is a late addition, probably not by the merchant, mayor of Gdansk (1664-1675) and book collector Nicolas von Bodeck (1611-1676) who marked it with his ex-libris in 1652 or 1657. It might rather be a Galenic extract by a practicing physician who owned the codex between 1527 (when it may have left the Biblioteca Vaticana during the sack of Rome) and 1652/7 (when von Bodeck wrote his ex-libris).

The current location of this item is unknown (Canart 1977-1979: 313n2). It is believed to have been destroyed during World War II.

16 b 12 N.37.

From the information provided here, the text on f. 273v (De urinis ex Hippocrate, Galeno aliisque quibusdam) is by a recent hand.

This is the same item as [0436].

A copy of this text was made by M. Odau for the Corpus Medicorum Graecorum.

Kgl. u. Univ. Bibl. (Königlich- und Universitätsbibliothek [Royal and University Library])

This library was heavily damaged during World War II. Holdings can be found in the collections of libraries in (alphabetical order of country names): Germany, Lithuania, Netherlands, Poland, and Russia (Päsler 2007).

Dietz-Nachlaß (Dietz's Legacy)

These were volumes owned by Friedrich Reinhold Dietz (1804-1836), which have been bequeathed by his widow to Königsberg University Library.

On the two items below, see Touwaide 2009: 494-495 (particularly n332).

According to Rivier 1962: 285n3, reporting information provided at that time by Karl Deichgräber (1903-1984), these items are considered lost “since the events of 1945” (translation is mine).

[0438]

I 1-3 I.3.

This is a copy of Kühn's edition of Hippocrates, Opera omnia (3 vols., Leipzig, 1825-1827) with collations of manuscripts by Dietz.

On the manuscripts collated by Dietz, see Touwaide 2009: 492n310.

I 4 I.3.

According to Diels' catalogue, this is a copy of the edition of Hippocrates, De morbo sacro by Dietz (Leipzig, 1827; on this edition, see Touwaide 2009: 492n310), with Dietz's handwritten notes and collations of manuscripts.

Konstantinopel (former Byzantine empire. Currently Istanbul [TR])

The items [0440]-[0443] mentioned without library name or collection in Constantinople are listed in two of the eight catalogues of Constantinopolitan libraries contained in the manuscript historicus graecus 98 of the Österreichische Nationalbibliothek in Vienna (on which see Hunger 1961: 107).

Items [1752], [1753] and [1754] (listed in Diels' catalogue under Wien, Hofbibliothek) need to be added to these four numbers. [1752] and [1753] appear in the same catalogue as [0440] and [0441]. [1753] is a duplicate of [0440]. [1754] is listed in the same catalogue as [0442] and [0443].

These catalogues were first published anonymously in 1578 by the German scholar Iohannes Hartung (1505-1579) in a booklet entitled Bibliotheca Sive Antiquitates Urbis Constantinopolitanae (= Hartung 1578). They have been reproduced (“plagiarized” according to Lauxtermann 2013: 272n9) by several humanists among whom the French Antoine du Verdier (1544-1600), cited in Diels' catalogue ([0440] and [0441]) (du Verdier, Supplementum Epitomes Bibliothecae Gesnerianae, 1585, pp. 56-64). du Verdier's edition has been corrected by Adam František Kollar (1718-1783) in his edition of Peter Lambeck's catalogue of the manuscripts in the imperial library in Vienna (Kollar 1766-1782; see vol. 1 [1766]: 268-276) referred to in numbers [1752] and [1753]. A new edition of these catalogues was published in 1877 by Richard Foerster (1843-1922) in his work De antiquitatibus et libris manuscriptis Constantinopolitanis commentatio, 1877, referred to in [0442]. More recently Georgios K. Papazoglou has republished these lists with a study (Papazoglou 1983; for the edition of the lists, see 371-412). On these catalogues, see recently Lauxtermann 2013.

For items [0440] and [0441] Diels' catalogue refers to du Verdier's edition of one of the library catalogues of manuscripts that is entitled as follows (du Verdier 1585: 57, col. 2, ll. 9-11):

Ex catalogo librorum hinc inde extantium à Grammatico exhibito, continenti libros 174.

Corrections to du Verdier's edition can be found in Kollar (ed. Lambeck) 1776: 269-273. They are referred to in [1752] and [1753].

The first edition of this catalogue is by Hartung 1578: [Bi]v-Ciiv. For more recent editions, see Foerster 1877: 19-23; Przychocki 1938: 34-42; Papazoglou 1983: 379-389.

As early as 1897, Karl Krumbacher deemed this catalogue (as well as all the others in the manuscript Vindobonensis historicus graecus 98) as a forgery (Krumbacher 1897: 411-412). All subsequent studies have confirmed that the catalogue of the collection owned by the Grammaticus is a forgery (Przychocki 1938; Maas 1938; Lauxtermann 2013: 278-279).

Item [0442] includes references to Foerster 1877 and Costomiris 1889.

Foerster 1877: 27-29, provides an edition of all the catalogues contained in the manuscript Vindobonensis historicus graecus 98, including the following (Foerster 1877: 27, col. 1, ll. 1-2):

ταῦτά εἰσι τὰ βιβλία τοῦ ἐνδοξοτάτου ἄρχοντος κυροῦ μιχαήλ τοῦ καντακουζηνοῦ

This is the catalogue of the library owned by Michael Cantacuzenus nicknamed Şeytanoglu (d. 1578). For a more recent edition, see Papazoglou 1983: 397-403. On him, see Papazoglou 1983: 327-329, and Papazoglou 1988.

In Diels' catalogue item [0443] does not include a reference to any previous literature. However, this item probably reproduces the information of Ackermann 1821: CLX, no. 104 (without brackets or question mark), where the manuscript is identified as having been in the collection of Michael Cantacuzenus. Furthermore, a reference to du Verdier (i.e. du Verdier 1585) appears in Ackermann ("Verdier p. 62"). Indeed, du Verdier 1585: 62, provides the edition of the catalogue of the library of Michael Cantacuzenus (p. 62 for the catalogue, and 62, col. 1, ll. 3-5 for its title). This catalogue was first published by Hartung 1578: Eir-Eiir. Corrections to du Verdier's edition are found in Kollar (ed. Lambeck) 1776: 275-276. Besides Foerster 1877: 27-29, the catalogue has been reedited by Papazoglou 1983: 397-403. This collection was auctioned after the owner's death.

Item [1754] is explicitly identified in Diels' catalogue as possibly coming from Michael Cantacuzenus' collection.

[apud Verdier] I.124.

This is a copy of Galenus, Hippocratis liber resolutionis, quem Galenus explicat.

Some slightly more complete information appears in Ackermann 1821: CLXXXVII, ll. 22-24:

Hippocratis liber resolutionis, quem Galenus explicat, et Galenum Mich. Psellus. Verdier.

The reference to "[apud Verdier]" in Diels' catalogue and to "Verdier" in Ackermann is to du Verdier 1585: 59, col. 1, ll. 48-49:

Hippocratis in libros Resolutionis quattuor quos Galenus explicat, & in Galeni explicationem Michael Psellus.

Kollar 1766-1782: 1.273, ll. 12-17, provides the Greek version of this title:

Ibidem: (i.e., “In Catalogo librorum 174, a Grammatico quodam exhibito [Id.: 1.269, ll. 1-2]) Hippocratis in libros resolutionis quattuor, quos Galenus explicat. In Codice Caesareo (i.e. in Vindobonensis historicus graecus 98) legitur: Τοῦ Ἱπποκράτους εἰς τὰ ἀναλυτικὰ βιβλία δεκατέσσερα. Καὶ ἐξεγείται αὐτὰ ὁ Γαληνός.

This notice of Kollar is reproduced in Ackermann 1821: CLXXXIX, § 3, including the reference to Kollar.

In the first edition of the catalogue by Hartung 1578: Ciir, no. 154, this item is identified as follows:

154. Hippocratis in libros Resolutionis quattuor, quos Galenus explicat, et in Galeni Explicationem Michaël Psellus.

In Foerster 1877: 23, col. 1, no. ρνγ' this item is described as follows:

τοῦ Ἱπποκράτους εἰς τὰ ἀναλυτικὰ βιβλία δεκατέσσαρα, καὶ ἐξηγεῖται αὐτὰ ὁ γαληνός, καὶ πάλι εἰς τοῦ γαληνοῦ τὴν ἐξήγησιν ἔχει ἐρμηνεία ὁ σοφώτατος μιχαήλ ὁ ψελλός

Recent edition by Przychocki 1938: 41, and Papazoglou 1983: 388.

See also Costomiris 1889: 382, which repeats the information of Kollar 1766-1782, and Foerster 1877.

The correction to du Verdier 1585 by Kollar 1766-1782 (above) is referred to in Diels' catalogue (= [1753]) as if it were about another copy of the same text in Vienna, when it actually duplicates the present item.

Since this catalogue is considered to be a forgery, this item probably does not correspond to any preserved manuscript. See also Papazoglou 1983: 193, no. 153.

[ap. Verdier II 57] I.148.

According to Diels' catalogue, this item contains Galenus, Excerpta.

The reference to “Verdier II 57” is to du Verdier 1585: 57, that is, the list of the manuscripts owned by an unidentified Constantinopolitan Grammaticus, where, however, no manuscript identified as in Diels' catalogue can be found.

No such item appears in the other editions of the same catalogue: Hartung 1578: [Bi]v-Ciiv; Foerster 1877: 19-23; Przychocki 1938: 34-42; Papazoglou 1983: 379-389.

[Cod. Mich. Cantacuzeni] I.116, 123, 132.

These three mentions of a manuscript owned by Michael Cantacuzenus in Diels' catalogue include references to Foerster 1877 and Costomiris 1889. The texts they are related to are identified as follows in Diels' catalogue (including the bibliographical information):

- Galenus, De ventis, igne, aquis, terra (I.116) (“bei Foerster de antiquit. et libr. mss. Constantinopol. p. 27 und Costomiris Rev. des ét. gr. II p. 382/383 no. ΛΔ'”);
- Galenus, De medicis (I.123) (“bei Foerster de antiquit. et libr. mss. Constantinopol. p. 27 und Costomiris Rev. des ét. gr. II p. 382/3 no. ΛΓ' Γαλ. Π. ιατρῶν διδασκάλων καὶ μαθητῶν”);

- Galenus, De materia medica (I.132) (“bei Foerster de antiquit. et libr. mss. Constantinopol. p. 27 und Costomiris Rev. des ét. gr. II p. 382/383 no. Λ’”).

The references to Foerster are to Foerster 1877: 27-29, that is, the edition of the list of books owned by Michael Cantacuzenus, with the following items (together with references to Costomiris 1889 as provided in Diels’ catalogue):

- λδ’ τοῦ αὐτοῦ γαληνοῦ περὶ ἀνέμων, περὶ πυρός, περὶ ὕδατος ὀμβρίου καὶ ὕδατος ποταμοῦ καὶ ὕδατος θαλασσίου καὶ ὕδατος λίμνης καὶ ὕδατος φρέατος, ἔτι καὶ γῆς λευκῆς καὶ κοκκίνης · καὶ τὸ χάρτι ἔνε βεβράϊνο (reproduced in Costomiris 1889: 382, no. λδ’);
- λγ’ τοῦ αὐτοῦ γαληνοῦ περὶ ἱατρῶν διδασκάλων καὶ μαθητῶν · καὶ τὸ χάρτι ἔνε βεβράϊνο (reproduced in Costomiris 1889: 382, no. λγ’);
- λ’ τοῦ αὐτοῦ γαληνοῦ περὶ ὕλης ἱατρικῆς · καὶ τὸ χάρτι ἔνε βεβράϊνο (reproduced in Costomiris 1889: 382, no. λ’).

For a more recent edition, see Papazoglou 1983: 400.

The current location of this manuscript (or these manuscripts) is unknown. See also Papazoglou 1983: 344-345, no. 34 (about item λδ’), and 344, no. 30 (about item λ’), and below [1754].

[Cod. Mich Cantacuzeni ?] I.116.

This is supposed to be a copy of Galenus, De anatomia vivorum.

A treatise De anatomia vivorum by Galen is mentioned in Ackermann 1821: CLX, no. 104 (without brackets or question mark), with the following reference to a manuscript (ibid., ll. 5-4 ab imo):

Codex erat in bibl. Mich. Cantacuzeni. Verdier p. 62.

The reference is to du Verdier 1585: 62, col. 1, l. 2 ab imo, where the following item is listed among the books “illustriss. Domini Michaelis Cantacuzeni” (62, col. 1, ll. 3-5):

Galenus de Anatome animalium vivorum.

The same description is provided by Hartung 1578: Eiir, l. 9.

Foerster 1877: 27, col. 2, ll. 35-36 provides the Greek title of this item:

κε’ ἱατροσόφιον γαληνοῦ περὶ ἀνατομῆς τῶν ζώωντων · καὶ τὸ χάρτι ἔνε βιββάκινο.

Recent edition in Papazoglou 1983: 400.

The current location of this item is unknown. See also Papazoglou 1983: 344, no. 25, and also below [1754].

This item without collection name or shelfmark is listed among the copies of Rufus, De vesicae renumque affectibus (II.89) and De corporis humani appellationibus (II.90).

The imprecise reference in Diels is to the catalogue by Senguerdii et al. 1716: 395, col. 2, ll. 35-37, where this item is described as follows:

Rufi Ephesi Monobiblon [sic], de purgando. Ejusdem de affectionibus ἐν κύστει καὶ νεφροῖς. Manu recente. In charta. 9

A reference as in Diels' catalogue is found in Daremberg 1879: X.

This manuscript is Vossianus graecus Q 9 (= [0497]) (in this sense [about De vesicae renumque affectibus], see Sideras 1977: 14n2).

[0486] [-] I.120.

This item without shelfmark is a copy of Galenus, De abortivo foetu (on which text see [0189]). The same information (without brackets) appears in Ackermann 1821: CLXXXVIII, sub titulo.No manuscript containing a text identified as De abortivo foetu can be found in the catalogue of Vossius' collection either in C.M.A. 1697: 2.1.57-72, or in the Leiden catalogue of Vossius' manuscripts, which predates Diels' catalogue (Senguerdii et al. 1716: 391-403).

[0487] [?] I.79.

This copy of Galenus, De symptomatum differentiis without shelfmark probably corresponds to the current Vossianus graecus F 11 (now VGF 11 = [0507]).

[0488] [?] I.92.

This manuscript without shelfmark is a copy of Galenus, De methodo medendi ("in. et fin. mut."). It probably corresponds to the current Vossianus graecus F 53 (current shelfmark: VGF 53) (= [0513]).

- [0489] [Cat. bibl. Lugd. Bat. p. 398 n. 50] I.123.
 This copy of Galenus, Hippiatrosophon is described as follows in the “Cat. bibl. Lugd. Bat.” (= Senguerdii et al. 1716: 398, col. 1, ll. 4-11):
Hippiatrica cum figuris, & multum discrepantia ab editis ... 50
 It corresponds to the current Vossianus graecus Q 50 (current shelfmark: VGQ 50) (= [0501]).
 de Meyier 1955: 158-159.
- [0490] 9 II.71.
 This codex is listed as a copy of Oribasius, Medicae collectiones ad Iulianum.
 No Leidensis Vossianus contains Oribasius, either in Greek or in Latin (see the Index auctorum in de Meyier 1955: 286-298 [Greek] and 299-301 [Latin]).
 This is probably Vossianus Latinus Q 9, which contains medical texts, though no mention of Oribasius (see de Meyier 1975: 20-25).
- [0491] [16] I.61.
 This item is supposed to be a copy of Galenus, Ars medica.
 No Vossianus graecus 16 (either folio or quarto) contains this work (see de Meyier 1955: 19 [F 16] and 110-111 [Q 16]).
 The only Vossianus graecus containing the treatise is the current Vossianus graecus Q 17 (current shelfmark: VGQ 17), ff. 1r-79v (= [0498]) (see de Meyier 1955: 111-112).
 See also Boudon 2002: 197n109 ctd. about this item, and 200 about VGQ 17.
- [0492] 29 II.4.
 This codex is a copy of Aelius Promotus, Physica et Antipathetica.
 The only Vossianus manuscript containing such a text is the current Vossianus graecus F 29 (VGF 29), ff. 3-5 (de Meyier 1955: 31; on the manuscript: ibid.: 31-32).
- [0493] [31] I.127.
 This copy of Galenus, De urinis is probably Vossianus graecus F 31 (current shelfmark: VGF 31 = [0511]), which contains at ff. 8v-10v a treatise De urinis, attributed, however, to Theophilus instead of Galen as in Diels’ catalogue.
 de Meyier 1955: 33-34.
- [0494] [58] I.99.
 This manuscript is referenced among the copies of Galenus, De theriaca ad Pisonem liber.
 The only Vossianus manuscript containing this text (actually a fragment) is the current Vossianus graecus F 58 (current shelfmark: VGF 58 = [0514]), ff. 232v-233.
 de Meyier 1955: 290; for the manuscript: ibid.: 66-68.
- [0495] [2168] I.87.
 This manuscript with an identifier that does not correspond to the shelfmark system of Leiden library, is a codex of Galenus, De pulsuum differentiis libri IV.
 Number 2168 is not a shelfmark, but a sequential number in the catalogue of the manuscript collection of “doctissimi Isaaci Vossii canonici windesoriensis” published in C.M.A. 1697: 2.1.57-72 (the table of contents of C.M.A. 1697, f. *2r, col. 2, ultima duo lineae adds “... qui [sc. codices] nunc servantur Lugduni Batavorum”). At 2.1.59, the content of codex 2168 is described as follows:

2168.57. Dioscorides de Plantis, ordine alphabetico digestus, & multum ab editis discrepans.

Idem de Venenatis & Alexipharmacis.

De divisione partium & stationum anni, & quatenam medicinae singulis convenient temporibus secundum Aegyptios. Auctore ut videtur, Michaële Psello.

De Discrepantia pulsuum, quorum cognitio clarior facta post Galenum. Horum singulae formae & figurae in singulis describuntur morbis.

Ad varios morbos remedia utilissima.

This description allows for the identification of this item as Vossianus graecus F 59 (VGF 59) (= [0515]) in spite of the difference in the title (De discrepantia pulsuum ... for De pulsuum differentiis).

[0496]

[2324] I.121.

This manuscript with an identifier that does not correspond to the shelfmark system in Leiden library, is a copy of Galenus, De septimestri partu.

Number 2324 is not a shelfmark, but a sequential number in the same catalogue as [0495] published in C.M.A. 1697: 2.1.57-72. At 2.1.62, the content of manuscript 2324 is identified as follows:

2324.213. Galenus de partu Septimestri.

The identification of this item is problematic. It seems that no Vossianus graecus contains such a treatise (de Meyier 1955: 290 sub nomine Galenus). However, item 2124 (and not 2324) in C.M.A. 1697: 2.1.58, corresponding to the current Vossianus graecus F 10 (VGF 10) (= [0506]), was a set of four volumes described as follows in C.M.A., ibid.:

2124.13. Hippocratis opera omnia, cum expositionibus Galeni, Tomis IV.

Codex Vossianus graecus F 10 is currently made of 3 volumes (VGF 10¹, VGF 10¹¹ and VGF 10¹¹¹), which contain most of the Hippocratic treatises (with some duplications). It may be the case that the fourth volume containing “Galenus expositiones” (as per C.M.A., ibid.) is now lost or that the identification of the author of the text referred to here is incorrect: instead of Galenus, it should be Hippocrates, since De septimestri partu is contained in VGF 10¹¹¹, ff. 143v-146r.

Information in Diels’ catalogue comes from Ackermann 1821: CXLI, no. 70 (without brackets).

Possibly same as [0506].

[Warnerian.] (Warneriani, Levinus Warner [ca. 1618-1665])

[0524] [53] I.127.
This is supposed to be a Greek manuscript of Galen, De urinis.
The information (without brackets) comes from Ackermann 1821: CLXVI, no. 119 ctd., ll. 6-9:
Collectanea ex Galeno de variis urinae quoad colorem generibus exstant inter libros legati Warneriani in bibl. Ac. Lugd. B. p. 407. no. 53.
This is an Arabic manuscript, with shelfmark Warner 53 (Or. 4791).
This item appears in the list of “Manuscripti Hebraici, Quos Bibliothecae legavit Nobilissimus Levinus Warnerus” (Senguerdii et al. 1716: 405; for the list, see 405-408), that is, the donation by Levinus Warner.

Number 53 (Senguerdii et al. 1716: 407, col. 2, ll. 24-22 ab imo, no. 53, as Ackermann correctly mentions) reads as follows:

Joannis Mesuae Medici Arabis Medicina. Ejusdem Antidota. Collectanea ex Galeno de variis Urinae quoad colorem generibus. 53.

[1100] I.89.

This is supposed to be a manuscript of Galenus, De crisibus.

The same information (without brackets) appears in Ackermann 1821: CVIII, no. 43, where the manuscript is listed among the Greek codices of the treatise.

Number 1100 is not a shelfmark, but a sequential number in C.M.A 1697: 2.1.27 in the catalogue of manuscripts “ecclesiae Westmonasteriensis” (2.1.27-29). The manuscript is described as follows:

1100.10. Galenus περί κρίσεων

This item was lost in the fire that destroyed part of the Westminster Abbey collections in 1694. No mention of it appears in Alexanderson 1967.

Robinson and James 1909: 52, no. 1100 for the manuscript, and 21, 26 for the fire.

This manuscript listed without shelfmark in Diels' catalogue, which contains Indices in Galenum, is now London, Wellcome Library, MS. MSL 83. It is listed in Diels' catalogue with a reference to "Costomiris Revue des études grecques II [1889] p. 381."
According to Costomiris 1889: 381, this is "a very detailed table of author names cited by Galen with references to the Basel edition ... in a recent script." (translation is mine).
Costomiris (381n3) referencing Daremberg 1853: 164, states that the hand is "recent".

[0573] Matrit. 166 II.53.

This manuscript listed without library name or collection in Diels' catalogue, is mentioned regarding codex Escorial, I II 14, which contains Johannes Damascenus, Excerpta. The manuscript is listed as a copy of these excerpts.

The identification "Matrit. 166" is a deformation of N 166, which is an earlier shelfmark of the current manuscript Vit. 26-1 in the collection of the Biblioteca Nacional (National Library; see p. 127) (see de Andrés 1987: 530-532).

This is not a manuscript of Ioannes Damascenus, Excerpta, as Diels' catalogue suggests, but a copy of the Efodia, whose text contains a fragment of Ioannes Damascenus' work on f. 212r, as Diels' catalogue rightly indicates.

Same as Madrid, Biblioteca Nacional, Vit. 26-1 (see p. 127), and also [0586] and [0587].

Except for [0581], [0585] and [0586], the shelfmark of the items of the Biblioteca Nacional in Diels' catalogue include a previous shelfmark between parentheses (identified as "olim" or "ol." except in [0575] and [0579]). These old shelfmarks are made of a capital Latin letter ("N" and "O") followed by a number in Arabic numerals. [0587] is identified by means of a shelfmark according to this system without the recent one. In [0575], [0577], and [0580] this old shelfmark is incorrect.

These old shelfmarks can be found in Iriarte 1769 (for shelfmarks N 1-N 125), Miller 1886 (for shelfmarks N 126-N 141 and O 1-O 103), and Vieillefond 1934 (for shelfmarks N 142-N 175 and O 100-O 132). A table of concordance between these and the current shelfmarks can be found in de Andrés 1987: 619-621.

The number 9175 is not a shelfmark in the collections of the Biblioteca Nacional (National Library) in Madrid, but an incorrect reproduction of the shelfmark 97.15 that the manuscript had when it was preserved in the collection of the Biblioteca del Cabildo de Toledo (Chapter's Library, Toledo Cathedral) (see Graux, ed. Martin 1892: 275-278, and also Vieillefond 1935: 210). Shelfmark 97.15 is correctly mentioned in [0587].
This is the current Vit. 26-1, on which see [0573] and [0587], and also below.
- [0587] N 116 (ol. Tolet. 97.15) II.85.
These are shelfmarks from two different collections in which the manuscript was preserved:

- N 116 refers to the collection of the former Regia Bibliotheca Matritensis (Royal Library in Madrid). However, it is mistaken, as the codex formerly identified as N 116 (corresponding to the current 4637 of the Biblioteca Nacional; see de Andrés 1987: 174-177) contains a Collectio epistularum (Iriarte 1769: 466-475). Exact shelfmark is N 166 (on which see Vieillefond 1935: 210).

Number 166 is mentioned in [0573] in a partially incorrect way (the initial capital letter “N” is missing) and without location.

- The shelfmark “olim Toletanus 97.25” refers to the collection of the Biblioteca del Cabildo de Toledo (Chapter’s Library, Toledo Cathedral) (see Graux, ed. Martin 1892: 275-278, and Vieillefond 1935: 210).

This is the current Vit. 26-1.

Same as [0573], [0586], and Vit. 26-1 (below).

Vitr. 26-1 See [0573], [0586] and [0587].

Privatbibliothek des Königs (Real Biblioteca [Royal Library], actually Biblioteca del Palacio [Palace Library])

These manuscripts once belonged to the Colegios Mayores at Salamanca, which were suppressed in 1798. Their books were confiscated under King Carlos IV (king 1789-1809) and sent to the royal palace in Madrid. They were returned to Salamanca University in 1954, and are now at the Biblioteca universitaria (University Library) (see Fink-Errera 1959), on which see below, pp. 309-310.

Their shelfmarks in Diels’ catalogue are not those of the codices in the royal library (which can be found on the ex-libris dating back to King Ferdinand VII [king 1808 and 1813-1833] on the back of the anterior cover; on these shelfmarks, see Beaujouan 1962: 48-51), but, rather, are those attributed to the manuscripts by Charles Graux (1852-1882) in the printed version of his catalogue of this collection (Graux, ed. Martin 1892).

The shelfmarks between parentheses with the mention “ol.” (= olim) that follows the shelfmark as above in Diels’ catalogue, are not old shelfmarks as the term olim indicates. Instead, they are those attributed to the manuscripts by Graux in the first version of his catalogue (on which see Graux 1879: 121-122).

Both these first and second shelfmarks have been written in the manuscripts: the first on the ex-libris dating back to King Ferdinand VII and the second on the guard leaves.

Bibl. Ambrosiana (Biblioteca Ambrosiana [Ambrosiana Library])

[0591]	–	N.36.
		Refers to I.111, where Ambrosianus Q 3 sup. (= [0647]), f. 202, is listed about Galenus, Quod qualitates incorporeae sint , and corrects the folio number into 202v.

[0592] v. Berthelot Ruelle, p. 56 II.100.

This manuscript of Synesius Cyrenensis, Ad Dioscorum, scholia in librum Democriti, listed without shelfmark is identified by means of a reference to Berthelot and Ruelle, Alchimistes grecs, Texte grec (1888), p. 56, who identify it as “le cod. Ambrosianus de Milan”, without any other element of identification. Based on Martini and Bassi 1906, this item could correspond to three Ambrosiani:

- E 37 sup., ff. 301r et seq. (Martini and Bassi 1906: 313-315) (= [0625]);
- A 57 inf., ff. 65v et seq. (Martini and Bassi 1906: 887-891) (= [0663]);

This is a codex of Galenus, Opera varia.
The reference is to Montfaucon, 1739: 1.491-505:
Index Bibliothecae Manuscriptorum Ambrosianae Mediolanensis MSS

At 1.497 the present item is identified as follows without shelfmark or other element of identification:
Galenī opera varia volumina XVIII.
The description is not precise enough to allow for identification.

[0594] Vgl. Montfaucon I p. 504 II.89.

This manuscript listed without precise identification in Diels' catalogue is referred to among the copies of Rufus, De corporis humani appellationibus.

The reference is to the same catalogue of the Ambrosiana library in Montfaucon as above ([0593]), where the item is described as follows (1.504) without shelfmark or other element of identification:

Rufi Ephesi nomenclatura partium humani corporis, bomb. bis.

Based on Martini and Bassi 1906, this item could correspond to two Ambrosiani:

This manuscript is referred to among the copies of Galenus, Ars medica (I.61) and De remedis parabilibus libri II (I.100).

This shelfmark does not exist (see Martini and Bassi 1906: 951).

At N.30 (about Ars medica), there is a reference to I.63 (whereas the manuscripts of Galen's Ars medica are listed at I.61).

At N.34 (about De remedis parabilibus), this item is correctly identified as C 102 Sup. (= [0618]).

Indeed, Ars medica appears in C 102 Sup., ff. 128r-152v (see also Boudon 2002: 198 and 196n109). De remediis parabilibus is not contained in C 102 sup. This might be an incorrect identification of one of the botanical texts in the manuscript (Martini and Bassi 1906: 217-218).

Bibl. Estense (Biblioteca Estense [Estense Library], now Biblioteca Universitaria e Estense [University and Estense Library])

All manuscripts of the Biblioteca Estense collections mentioned by Diels are identified by their sequential number in Puntoni 1896, followed (except in [0701] and [0704]) by a shelfmark between parentheses made of three elements:

- a Roman numeral;
- a capital Latin letter;
- an Arabic numeral.

Neither of the two systems correspond to the current one, in which shelfmarks are made of four elements (separated by a period sign):

- a Greek minuscule letter (α in all cases here);
- a Latin capital letter;
- an Arabic numeral (between 1 and 9);
- a second Arabic numeral (between 3 and 28 here).

A table of concordance of the numbers in Puntoni 1896 and current shelfmarks is provided in Puliatti 1965.

v. Montfaucon, II.1199 II.89.

This manuscript without shelfmark is listed under Rufus, De corporis humani appellationibus. The reference is to Montfaucon 1739: 2.119, where a mention “Rufi Ephesii Medici opera” appears.

The item appears in a list entitled as follows in Montfaucon 1739: 2.1198:

In codice Colbertino 2145. post catalogum Bibliothecae Cardinalis Bessarionis, quam Senatui Veneto dedit, recensentur codices Graeci Bibliothecae D. Guillelmi Pellicerii olim Episcopi Monspeliensis, qui etiam nunc in Bibliotheca Episcopi Monspeliensis esse putantur, quos hic quam brevissime potero recensebo ... habetur etiam in cod. Colb. 2276.

This catalogue is reproduced in Montfaucon 1739: 2.1198-1202.

The present manuscript did not pertain to the library of Montpellier School of Medicine contrary to Diels, but to the collection of Montpellier Bishop Guillaume Pellicier (ca. 1490-1568). It is now in Berlin, SBB-PKB, Phillipps 1536 (= [0132]).

Synodialbibl. (Synodialbibliothek [Synodal Library]), now Государственный Исторический Музей (ГИМ), Синодальная библиотека Московского Патриархата (Gosudarstvennyi Istoricheskii Muzei (GIM), Sinodal'naia Biblioteka Moskovskoi Patriarchii [State Historical Museum (GIM), Synodal Library of Moscow Patriarchate])

Mosquens. (Mosquenses)

All these manuscripts are now in the Manuscript Department of the State Historical Museum (MDSHM), Gosudarstvennyi Istoricheskii Muzei (GIM) (State Historical Museum), Synodal collection.

Except in [0717]–[0721], which are listed without shelfmark, Diels' catalogue refers to three different catalogues of this collection (listed below in chronological order of publication):

- in [0723], Matthaei 1805;
- in [0722], [0725] and [0726], Savva 1858;
- in all others, Vladimir 1894.

The shelfmarks now in use are those in Savva 1858.

In [0717]–[0720] the identification is imprecise, and in [0721] it refers to a mention in a publication.

[0717] – II.43.

This is a copy of the Cyranides.

Information is insufficient to allow for any further identification.

[0718] ? II.71.

This manuscript without any element of identification is listed under Oribasius, Medicae collectiones ad Iulianum.

Information is insufficient to allow for any further identification.

[0719] [?] I.110.

This is a copy of Galenus, Linguarum s. dictionum exoletarum Hippocratis explicatio.

This manuscript is now Jena, Thüringer Universitäts- und Landesbibliothek, Ms. G.B. f. 31 (see above, p. 91) (on this identification, see Perilli 2011: 179–185).

[0720] [complures] I.58.

Several manuscripts of Galenus, Opera varia, are referred to, without shelfmark or other information allowing for identification. The Galen manuscripts in the Synodal collection are the following:

- 51 (= [0731]);
- 283 (= [0733]);
- 507 (= [0734]).

[0721] vgl. Bussemaker a. a. O. p. 75 II.20.

The reference to Bussemaker is to “Poët. de re phys. et medica rell.” This is the edition of the Greek text of the Fragmenta poematum rem naturalem vel medicinam spectantium in a volume containing several Greek didactic poems under the general title Poetae bucolici et didactici published by Firmin Didot (Paris), 1862 (see pp. 71-134 in that volume for the fragments of natural history poems).

The manuscript referred to here by Bussemaker 1862: 75, is listed among the copies of the Praecepta salubria attributed to Asclepiades, Dioscorides, or Oribasius, and first edited by Christian Gottfried Gruner (1744-1815) in 1782.

This codex is the current Mosquensis Sinod. 292 (the number 279 in Perilli 2011: 184, comes from Matthaei 1805: 1.179-183). It is a 17th-century manuscript.

Vladimir 1894: 357-360, no. 260.

See [0724] and [0726].

[0722] 51 I.60.

This number refers to Savva 1858 and corresponds to no. 52 in Matthaei 1805 as specified in [0723].

Same as [0731]. Also [0723].

[0723] 52 (so!) = 464 N.29.

Reference is made to I.60, that is, to the manuscript with shelfmark 51 (= [0722]). The number 52 quoted here comes from Matthaei 1805: 1.54, and the number 464 from Vladimir 1890: 701-703.

Same as [0731].

[0724] 260 I.72; II.74; N.31.

On N.31 referring to I.72, the catalogue specifies that “292 [ist] identisch mit Mosq. 260”.

Vladimir 1894: 357-360, no. 260.

Current shelfmark is Sinod. 292. It is a iatrosophon dated 1630 (Karas 1994: 349, 375, 391).

See also [0721] and [0726].

[0725] 283 I.60; N.29.

At N.29 this item is identified as 283 = 466 (that is, 283 Savva 1858 = 466 Vladimir 1894).

Same as [0733].

[0726] 292 I.72; N.31.

According to N.31 this item is no. 260 (= [0724]) (that is, 292 Savva 1858 = 260 Vladimir 1894).

Whatever its provenance, this item was sold by Matthaei to Dresden Library (Ebert 1822: 246, no. 24). In 1947 it was returned to Russia (Schnorr von Carolsfeld 1979: 289). II.20.

This manuscript without shelfmark in Diel’s catalogue is listed among the copies of Asclepiades, Praecepta salubria.

The reference to Bussemaker is to “Poët. de re phys. et medica rell.”. This is actually the edition of the Greek text of the Fragmenta poematum rem naturalem vel medicinam spectantium in a volume containing several Greek didactic poems under the general title Poetae bucolici et didactici published by Firmin Didot (Paris), 1862. The fragmenta published by Bussemaker 1862 can be found at pp. 71-134.

The manuscript referred to here is mentioned in the Praefatio by Bussemaker 1862: 74-75; see p. 75. It was used by Berger 1807 to publish the 25 first verses of the Praecepta salubria ascribed to Asclepiades. In Berger’s Praefatio (p. 1001) the manuscript is identified as “cod. ms. 336. bibliothecae regiae Bavaricae”.

Although no Asclepiades is listed in the index of Hardt 1806-1812: 5.475, the text can be found in codex Monacensis graecus 336, f. 206 (Hardt 1806-1812: 2.328-336; especially 334-335), as Choulant 1841: 66 noticed.

This codex listed without shelfmark is supposed to contain a Compendium ex. Gal.

Although no Monacensis manuscript seems to contain a text with this title, codex Monacensis graecus 551 (= [0772]) may be the intended reference. It contains from f. 296r a text De alimentorum facultate “è Galeno ... compositum” and, from f. 336r, another text identified as “Synopticum iatrosophium ... Galeni” (on both texts, see Hardt 1806-1812: 5.402-403).

On this manuscript, see Hardt 1806-1812: 5.378-404.

II.81.

The text referred to (Paulus Nicaensis, De cognitione et curatione variorum morborum) as being contained in this manuscript listed without identifier, appears in Cod. graec. 72 (= [0748]) described in Hardt 1806-1812: 1.444-449.

The manuscript is referred to as containing Dioscorides, Liber agens de experientia medica ... ordine literarum digestus.
The Monacensis gr. 484 does not contain such text (Hardt 1806-1812: 5.46-51). This is a mistake (probably a misreading) for 489 (below).
There is also some confusion with cod. graec. 542 (see p. 156), which contains the version of the same text that circulated under the name of Stephanus Atheniensis.

- [0768] 514 II.107.
This is a copy of Timotheus Gazaeus, De animalibus quadrupedis physicisque eorum facultatibus.
The identification of the manuscript (reproduced in Bodenheimer and Rabinowitz 1949: 14) is incorrect: Cod. gr. 514 contains Plato's works (Hardt 1806-1812: 5.262-269). Timotheus' work is in Cod. graec. 564 (below).

In Diels' catalogue II.33 about 484 (542?) (= [0764]), the two manuscripts are confused (besides the fact that 484 is a mistake for 489). This is probably because these two manuscripts contain different versions of the same text. While Cod. graec. 489 contains the version attributed to Dioscorides, Cod. graec. 542 contains the version ascribed to Stephanus Atheniensis (for the latter see Savvinidou 2006: 351).

Neapel (Napoli [Naples]) (IT)Biblioteca Borbonica (Borbonica Library)

“Biblioteca Borbonica” (Bourbon Library)—actually “Biblioteca Reale Borbonica” (Royal Bourbon Library)—is the name given in 1816 to the “Real Biblioteca” (Royal Library) of Naples. The library was founded in 1804, under the King of Two-Sicilies Ferdinand I de Bourbon (or “di Borbone”) (reign 1816-1825). After the unification of Italy, it became the National Library in 1860. In 1922, the library was moved to the royal palace under king Vittorio Emanuele III (1869-1947; reign 1900-1946) and became the Biblioteca Nazionale Vittorio Emanuele III (Vittorio Emanuele III National Library). It kept this name after Italy transitioned from a monarchy to a republic in 1946.

Except for [0776], the identifier of which is incorrect, the shelfmarks provided by Diels are of two types:

- in [0777]-[0781] current shelfmark;
- in [0782]-[0788] sequential number in Cyrillus 1832 (followed by the current shelfmark between parentheses).

Three items are listed according these two systems as if they were different manuscripts:

- [0777] (= [0778]) = [0782];
- [0780] = [0784];
- [0781] = [0786].

On all these manuscripts see pp. 158-160, under Napoli, Biblioteca Nazionale, sub graeci, under the current shelfmark.

[0776]

N.60.

This is a copy of Nepualius, De sympathicis et antipathicis.

The number I 17 does not correspond to any current shelfmark of Greek manuscript at the Biblioteca Nazionale in Napoli. It is not a reference to Cyrillus 1832: tome 1, manuscript no. 17 (= pp. 43-46) which contains St. Athanasius, or tome 1, p. 17. Furthermore, no text by Nepualius appears in the index of Cyrillus 1832: 473-486, Mioni 1992: 281-321, or Formentin 1995: 209-223.

The information seems to be a mistake, possibly for III D 17, which contains (ff. 82r et seq.) Democritus, De sympathicis et antipathicis. The texts of Nepualius and Democritus have been transmitted together in some manuscripts and sometimes mixed up in scholarly literature.

On III D 17, see Cyrillus 1832: 390-394, and above, p. 160.

- [0777] II C 33 II.94.
Mioni 1992: 221-229; Formentin 1997: 209.
According to Magdelaine 1994: 88n1, II C 33 does not exist. Actually, II C 33 does exist; however, the codex that contains a fragment of Hippocrates, Aphorismi, is not II C 33, but II C 32 (see p. 159).
On II C 33, see also [0778] and [0782].
- [0778] II C 33 (olim 34) II.82.
Same as [0777].
The mention “olim 34” is not an old shelfmark, but probably refers to the fact that this manuscript is erroneously described under the shelfmark II C 34 in Cyrillus 1832: 7-20 as Mioni 1992: 239 mentioned in the bibliography on II C 33, about Cyrillus 1832: 7-20.
- [0779] III C 2 (260) I.44.
Cyrillus 1832: 341-344 (for the manuscripts and its other texts) and ibid. 416 (for the text here); Formentin 1997: 214-215.
- [0780] III D 15 N.30, 31, 41.
Cyrillus 1832: 388-389; Formentin 1997: 208-209.
Same as [0784].
- [0781] III D 21 N.45.
Cyrillus 1832: 398;
Formentin 1997: 210.
Same as [0786].
- [0782] 91 (II C 33) I.13, 35.
According to Diels' catalogue, this is a copy of Hippocrates, Aphorismi and Praecepta.
The number 91 is the sequential number in Cyrillus 1832: 5-6. The current shelfmark is II.C.33.
However, the codex that contains the Hippocratic texts (frg.) is not II C 33, but is instead II C 32. See Biblioteca Nazionale Vittorio Emanuele III (National Library Vittorio Emanuele III), graeci, II C 32 and II C 33 (see above p. 159).
Same as [0777].
- [0783] 187 (II F 30) I.38.
Current shelfmark: II F 30 (see above, p. 159).
- [0784] 229 (III D 15) I.63; N.30.
Current shelfmark: III D 15 (its number in Cyrillus 1832 is not 229, but 299).
Same as [0780].

- This reference to a manuscript without shelfmark is to a codex of Aetius Amidenus, Libri medicinales, mentioned in Zervos 1905 (with 1906 as a year of publication listed in Diels' catalogue).
- At p. 258, Zervos mentions a 19th-century manuscript of Aetius Amidenus, Libri medicinales, books 9-16, which he discovered in 1903 in the library of the local City School (Ἀστική Σχολή).

[nr. 3189] I.13.

This item is listed among the copies of Hippocrates, Aphorismi in Greek.

The same information appears in Ackermann 1825: LXVI, where the manuscript is quoted among the Latin codices of the work, without brackets.

Number 3189 is not a shelfmark but a sequential number in a catalogue published in C.M.A. 1697: 2.1.74-84, entitled as follows (ibid.: 2.1.74):

Bibliothecae Norfolciana in Collegio Greshamensi apud Londinum catalogus

Number 3189 (ibid.: 2.1.80) contains the following according to C.M.A.:

Psalmi Davidis, cum Precum Formulis ...

Number 3189 in Diels' catalogue probably is a mistake for 3184 in C.M.A. 1697: 2.1.80, which contains the following:

3184. 285 Gothofridi Flores Medicae, cum Commentario.

Bartholomaei Practica Medica.

De Pulsibus.

Hippocratis Aphorismi.

Evax de Lapidibus.

Recepta Medicinalia.

This is a Latin manuscript, which was not at Norfolk, but in London, Gresham College, to which Henry Howard (1628-1684), 6th Duke of Norfolk, donated his family's library collection in the late 17th century (Burgon 1839: 2.518-519).

This manuscript cannot be traced in the current state of research (it is not mentioned in Kibre 1985 or Magdelaine 1994).

[Ashmole.] (Ashmoleani)

These manuscripts were in the Ashmolean Museum (or Bibliotheca Ashmoleana) from which they were transferred to the Bodleian Library in 1860 (Morgan 1973: 159). Numbers in Diels' catalogue are not shelfmarks, but sequential numbers in C.M.A. 1697: 1.1.

[0798] [ms. Angl. 7638] I.122.
This manuscript contains Galenus, De XII portis.
Number 7638 appears in C.M.A. 1697: 1.1.339 in a catalogue of manuscripts collected by Elias Ashmole (1617-1692) and preserved in the Bibliotheca Ashmoleana (ibid.: 315-356 for the catalogue). The content of this item is described as follows:
7638. Alberti Magni Mineralium Libri quattuor.
Quadripartitum Hermetis, p. 50.
Ars fusoria ac tinctoria Gemmarum, p. 64.
Ptolemaei liber de Lapidibus pretiosis, p. 64.

It is a Latin manuscript, now Bodleian Library, MS. Ashmole 1471.

Black 1845: 1280-1286.

Also [0799].

[0799] [ms. Angl. 7787] I.122.

This manuscript contains Galenus, De XII portis.

Number 7787 appears in C.M.A. 1697: 1.1.342 in the same list as [0798], among the Medici Lat[ini] of the Ashmoleani (see ibid.: 1.1.341) and is described as follows:

7787. Galeni liber de 12 portis, Membr. 1471. p. 68.

This description is the same as that of item 5 in [0798]. It thus is highly probable that this entry duplicates no. 7638 in C.M.A. 1697: 1.1.339, and that this manuscript is the same as [0798].

These manuscripts are identified in different ways in Diels’ catalogue, including:

- [0804]-[0808] and [0839] are numbered according to their sequential number in different parts of C.M.A. 1697 introduced by “cat. mss. Angl.”
- [0842]-[0845] are identified by their sequential number in C.M.A. 1697, without any reference to C.M.A.;
- [0840] and [0846]-[0848] include the current shelfmark introduced by “nunc”;
- [0841] is identified by its current shelfmark, followed, between parentheses, by its sequential number in C.M.A. 1697.

For a concordance between C.M.A. 1697 sequential numbers and the current shelfmarks, see Madan and Craster 1922.

In each collection, items in Diels’ catalogue are numbered in different ways, identified in the introduction to each collection.

[0802] - (Puschn. I p. 90) II.12.

This manuscript without a collection name or shelfmark is a copy of Alexander Trallianus, Therapeutica.

Reference is to Puschmann 1878-1879: 1.90, where a manuscript of the Bodleian library is mentioned without further identification.

This is ms. Oxford, Bodleian Library, MS. D’Orville 34.

Madan 1897: 45-46, no. 16912.

17th/18th-century scholarly manuscript.

[0803] e 19 [31.528] II.30 (listed in entry “Edschmiadzin”).

Current shelfmark: MS. Gr. class. e. 19.

This is a set of photos of a fragment of a manuscript (Dioscorides, De materia medica) in the codex now identified as Yerevan, Matenadaran, arm. M 141 (see p. 372).

Madan and Craster 1924: 62, no. 31528.

[0804] [cat. mss. Angl. 1355] I.61.

This item contains Galenus, Ars medica.

Number 1355 appears in C.M.A. 1697: 1.1.71, in the list of the manuscripts that “illustriissimus dominus Guilielmus Laudus” donated to the Bodleian Library” (ibid.: 1.1.46-76 for the list). This item is described as follows:

1355.15. Hippocrates Aphorismi, & Prognostica.

2. Theophilus de Urinis.

3. Philaretus de Pulsu.

4. Galeni Techne, etc.

The same information as in Diels’ catalogue (without brackets) appears in Ackermann 1821: CXV, no. 50 ctd. (about Galenus, Ars medica), where this manuscript is listed among the Greek manuscripts of the work.

The same number also appears in Ackermann 1825: XLVII (Hippocrates, Prognosticon, where this item is listed among the Greek manuscripts of the work), and LXV (Hippocrates, Aphorismi, where the codex it listed among the Latin manuscripts of the work).

It is not a Greek manuscript (none of the following authors mention it: Alexanderson 1963 or Jouanna 2013 for the Prognosticon; Magdelaine 1994 for the Aphorismi; Boudon 2002: 197-200 for Galenus, Ars medica), but a Latin one (Kibre 1985: 45 [Aphorismi] and 206 [Prognostica]).

Current shelfmark: Bodleian Library, MS. Laud Lat. 65 (see also Boudon 2002: 197n109 ctd.).

Hunt 1953: 26, no. 1355, and Madan and Craster 1922: 58 (for the concordance between C.M.A. 1697 and the current shelfmark); Coxe 1858: 30 (catalogue).

Same as [0845].

[0805] [cat. mss. Angl. 1552] I.61.

This item is referenced as a copy of Galenus, Ars medica in Greek.

Number 1552 appears in C.M.A. 1697: 1.1.74, in the same list as [0804]. It does not contain any medical text, but works by St. Augustinus (= Laud. Misc. 125; Hunt 1953: 26, no. 1552, for the concordance of C.M.A. 1697 and the current shelfmark; Coxe 1858: 128 for a description). This manuscript is not listed in Boudon 2002: 197-200.

The information (without brackets) comes from Ackermann 1821: CXV, no. 50 ctd. (“In bibl. Bodlei. cat. Mss. Angl. no., 1552”), where this item is listed among the Greek manuscripts of Galenus, Ars medica.

This probably is a mistake for 1252 in C.M.A. 1697, where no. 1252 is described as follows (1.1.68-69) :

1252. 87. Johannitii Isagoge ad Galeni Technen.

2. Hippocratis Aphorismi et Prognostica.

3. Theophilus de Urinis.

4. Philaretus de Pulsibus.

5. Galeni Techne.

6. Constantini Monachi [...]

7. Aegidii Poema de Urinis. It. de Pulsibus cum Commentario.

It is a Latin manuscript (it is not mentioned in Boudon 2002: 197-200 for Galenus, Ars medica, or in Magdelaine 1994 for Hippocrates, Aphorismi; instead, it is listed in Kibre 1985: 8-9 [Acutorum Regimen], 45 [Aphorismi]).

Current shelfmark: Bodleian Library, MS. Lat. 106 (pace Boudon 2002: 197n109 ctd., who mentions that this item of Diels’ catalogue is Misc. 125).

Hunt 1953: 26, no. 1252 (concordance of C.M.A. 1697 and current shelfmark); Madan and Craster 1922: 54; Coxe 1858: 48-49 (catalogue).

Also [0843] and probably [0844].

[0806] [Cat. mss. Angl. n. 2062] I.117.

This item contains Galenus, Lexicon botanicum.

The number 2062 appears in C.M.A. 1697: 1.1.107, in a catalogue of manuscripts “ex dono Viri perillustris et Fundatoris munificentissimi Thomae Bodleii.” (ibid.: 1.1.89-156). It is described as follows (1.1.107):

2062.1. Several Medicines, most by natural means, some by Charmes with an Herbal proceeding alphabetically in respect of the Latine names.

The Virtues of Herbs, which are Hot or Cold, and for how many things they are good; after Plato, Galen, and Hippocrates.

A Physical Tract of the Conception, Birth, etc. of Man.

De Morbis Mulierum, etc.

This is neither a Greek nor a Latin manuscript, but an English one (see Madan and Craster 1922: 190-191).

Current shelfmark: Bodleian Library, MS. Bodl. 483.

[0807] [2753] I.5.

This item is listed among the manuscripts of Hippocrates, Prognosticon.

Number 2753 appears in C.M.A. 1697: 1.1.147 (in the same list as [0806]), where its contents is identified as follows:

2753.11. Joannitii Isagoge ad Microtechnum Galeni.

2. Hippocratis Aphorismi et Prognostica.

3. Lib. Urinarum à voce Theophili.

4. Philareti Lib. de negotio Pulsuum.
5. Lib. qui inscribitur Galeni Techna.
6. Diaetae Universales et particulares, per Mag. Isaac.
7. Ejusdem lib. Urinarum.
8. Constantini Africani lib. de Stomacho.
9. Ejusdem de regendorum sanorum ratione liber. Imperf.

This is a Latin manuscript (Alexanderson 1963 does not mention it [Pronosticon]; see, instead, Kibre 1985: 44-45 [Aphorismi]).

This manuscript is Bodleian Library, MS. Auct. F. 5. 30.

See Madan and Craster 1922: 528-529, no. 2753.

Information in Diels' catalogue comes from Ackermann 1825: XLVII (without brackets), where the codex is listed among the "CODICES MSS" without specification of language.

[bibl. Brit. n. 3500] I.135.

This item is a copy of Galenus, De chirurgia.

Number 3500 appears in C.M.A. 1697: 1.1.169 in a list of manuscripts "benefactorum variorum" (ibid.: 1.1.168-186). The treatise of Galenus, De chirurgia, is described as follows (ibid.: 1.1.169, no. 5 in manuscript 3500, which contains 11 different medical Latin treatises):

Galenus Chirurgia, sive Capitula varia ex Operibus ejus Collecta.

This is a Latin ms. Current shelfmark: Bodleian Library, MS. e Mus. 19.

See [0810] and [0854].

See Magdelaine 1994: 88 n1.

[0810]

T II 3 I.5, 56.

This manuscript is listed among the copies of Hippocrates, Prognosticon (I.5) and Hippocratic Excerpta (I.56).

The current manuscript Auct. T. 2. 3 contains Euthymius Zigabenus (see Coxe 1853: 758, Misc. 203; Hunt 1953: 433, no. 20587. Also Alexanderson 1963: 69).

The item referred to here seems to be Auct. F. inf. 2. 3 (= [0809]) (current shelfmark: Marshall 72), which does indeed contain Hippocrates, Prognosticon (Diels, I.5; see Alexanderson 1963: 78-79 [Marshall 72]), and three other Hippocratic treatises that might have been incorrectly identified as Excerpta (Diels, I.56) (see Alexanderson 1963: 78-79, Marshall 72).

Same as [0809]. Also [0854].

 Coxe 1853: 152-153.
 Probably also [0818].
- [0818] [88] I.126.
 This item contains Galenus, De morbis Excerpta.
 No text explicitly entitled in that way appears in Ms. Baroccianus 88 (see Coxe 1853: 152-153). However, this text might correspond to item no. 4 in Baroccianus 88 according to Coxe’s description (col. 153):

Fasciculus morborum et remediorum in capita DCCVIII. distributus.

If so, this item might be the same as [0817].

This manuscript is listed among the copies of Galenus, De alimentorum facultatibus libri III.
The Barocci collection contains 244 numbers (Madan and Craster 1922: 3).
This text appears in Barocci 224 (= [0828]), no. 15 (= ff. 51v et seq. [frg.]). The present information seems to result from confusion with this codex.
- [0830] 2304 II.109.
This item is listed among the copies of Ioannes Zacharias Actuarius, De spiritu animali libri II.
No Barocci manuscript has a 2304 shelfmark. The number probably refers to C.M.A. 1697, which contains three items with shelfmark 2304:
- 1.1.119 (in the same catalogue as [0806]): this manuscript contains Distinctiones super Psalterium. De quantitate Syllabarum tractatus Metricus & Prosaicus;
 - 1.2.168 (in the catalogue entitled [ibid.: 1.2.164] “Librorum manuscriptorum In Bibliotheca Publica celeberrimae Academiae Cantabrigiensis catalogus” [ibid.: 1.2.164-173, for the catalogue]): this item contains Summa Richardi and the Historia Bruti. Pr. Britannia insularum optima ...;
 - 2.1.77 (in the catalogue entitled [ibid.: 2.1.71] “Librorum manuscriptorum Collegii S. Mariae Magdalenae in Oxonia catalogus” [ibid.: 2.1.71-78, for the catalogue]): this manuscript contains Quodlibeta Doctoris Joannis Duns, sive Scoti.
- The text cited by Diels here appears in [0872], now MS. Roe 15 (which is number 261.15 in C.M.A. 1697: 1.136).
The origin of this number 2304 is unknown. See Madan and Craster 1922: 299-300.
Alternatively, this item might have been confused with Parisinus graecus 2304 (= [1252]), which does contain (ff. 114 et seq.) Actuarius, De spiritu animali libri II (Omont 1886-1888: 2.233; Costomiris 1897: 428-430) and does not appear in Diels’ list for this text (II.109).

Canonician. (Canoniciani, Matteo Luigi Canònici [1727-1805])

The manuscripts of this collection are now identified as “MS. Canon. Gr.” followed by a number in Arabic numerals (e.g. 1 in Diels = MS. Canon. Gr. 1).

Clarkian. (Clarkiani, William N. Clarke [1799-1855])

11 (ff. 110r et seq.) Epiphanius, De duodecim gemmis.

Madan 1897: 301, no. 18373 (does not specifically identify the text).

18378 is not a shelfmark, but the sequential number of the manuscript in Hunt 1953: 15, and Madan 1897 (below).

Madan 1897: 302, no. 18378.

Current shelfmark: MS. E. D. Clarke 16.

Ger. Langbainii Advers. (Gerardi Langbainii Adversaria, Gerard Langbaine [1609-1658])

[0836] 2 I.41.

Coxe 1853: 877-878.

Current shelfmark: MS. Langbaine 2.

Is. Casauboni Advers. (Isacii Casauboni Adversaria, Isaac Casaubon [1559-1614])

[0837] 4 I.72.

Coxe 1853: 824-825.

Current shelfmark: MS. Casaubon 4.

[0838] 27 II.34.

Coxe 1853: 839-840.

Laudian. (Laudiani, William Laud [1573-1645], Archbishop of Canterbury)

Identification of these manuscripts in Diels' catalogue is made in five different ways:

- in [0839] and [0842]–[0845], sequential numbers in C.M.A. 1697: 1.1.46-76;
- in [0849], shelfmark (capital Latin letter C followed by a number in Arabic numerals) followed, between parentheses, by the sequential number in C.M.A. 1697: ibid.;

- in [0841], current shelfmark followed, between parentheses, by the sequential number in C.M.A. 1697: ibid.;
- in [0846]-[0848], shelfmark in C.M.A. 1697: ibid., followed by the current shelfmark (introduced by “nunc”) and the sequential number in C.M.A. 1697: ibid.;
- in [0840], a part of the shelfmark (the Arabic number without the C letter) according to C.M.A. 1697: ibid., followed by the current shelfmark and the sequential number in C.M.A. 1697.

[0839] [cat. ms. Angl. N. 877] I.133.

This manuscript is listed as a copy of Galenus, Remedia.

The reference is to C.M.A. 1697: 1.1.60.

This is a Latin manuscript containing according to C.M.A. 1697 “Galenī Fragmenta quaedam p. 289” (actually: “Ex Galenī libro de situ regionum et temporum constitutione: et aliis operibus. fol. 289” [Coxe 1858: 445]).

Madan and Craster 1922: 37, no. 877 (concordance C.M.A. 1697 and current shelfmark); Coxe 1858: 444-445 (catalogue).

Current shelfmark: MS. Laud Misc. 617.

[0840] 58 (nunc 59; Bodl. 708) I.128; II.20, 88.

This manuscript is identified in the same way in Daremberg 1879: XII.

Current shelfmark: MS. Laud Gr. 59.

[0841] 62 (Bodl. 747) II.110.

Current shelfmark: MS. Laud Gr. 62.

[0842] [1013] I.5, 13.

This codex is listed among the copies of Hippocrates, Prognosticon (I.5) and Aphorismi (I.13).

The reference is to C.M.A. 1697: 1.1.63, reproduced (without brackets) in Ackermann 1825: XLVII (Prognosticon, where the manuscript is listed among “CODICES MSS” without specification of language), and LXV (Aphorismi, where it is listed among the Latin codices of the work).

This is a Latin manuscript (neither Alexanderson 1963 nor Magdelaine 1994 mention it; Kibre 1985 lists it: 45 [Aphorismi] and 202 [Prognostica]).

Hunt 1953: 24, no. 1013, and Madan and Craster 1922: 43, no. 1013 (concordance C.M.A. 1697 and current shelfmark); Coxe 1858: 200-202 (catalogue).

Current shelfmark: MS. Laud Misc. 237.

[0843] [1252] I.13.

This item is listed among the copies of Hippocrates, Aphorismi.

The reference is to C.M.A. 1697: 1.1.68-69, followed by Ackermann 1825: LXV (where the codex is listed without brackets, among the Latin codices of the work).

This is not a Greek manuscript (it does not appear in Magdelaine 1994), but a Latin one, now MS. Laud Lat. 106 (see Kibre 1985: 45).

Hunt 1953: 26, no. 1252, and Madan and Craster 1922: 54, no. 1252 (concordance C.M.A. 1697 and current shelfmark); Coxe 1858: 48–49 (catalogue).

See [0805]. Probably also [0844].

[1257] I.5.

This manuscript appears in the list of the copies of Hippocrates, Prognosticon.

The number 1257 in C.M.A. 1697: 1.1.69 (reproduced in Ackermann 1825: XLVII, without brackets among the “CODICES MSS” without specification of language), corresponding to current MS. Laud Lat. 43 (Hunt 1953: 25, no. 1257, and Madan and Craster 1922: 54, no. 1257), does not contain medical text (Kibre 1985 does not mention it), but it does contain the Epistles and the Apocalypse (Coxe 1858: 20).

There probably has been confusion between 1257 and 1252. If so, 1257 is the same as [0843], that is, Laud. Lat. 106.

Alexanderson 1963 does not mention this Laudianus Lat. 106, but Kibre 1985: 206 does.

See [0843].

[0845]

[1355] I.5, 13.

This manuscript is listed among the codices containing Hippocrates, Prognosticon (I.5) and Aphorismi (I.13).

The reference is to C.M.A. 1697: 1.1.71 (reproduced in Ackermann 1825: XLVII [Prognosticon] among the “CODICES MSS” without specification of language, and LXV [Aphorismi] among the Latin codices of the text; in both cases, without brackets).

This is not a Greek manuscript (neither Alexanderson 1963 nor Magdelaine 1994 mention it), but a Latin one, now MS. Laud Lat. 65 (Kibre 1985: 45 [Aphorismi], 206 [Progonosticon] referring to Diels’ catalogue in the latter case).

Hunt 1953: 26, no. 1355, and Madan and Craster 1922: 58, no. 1355 (for the concordance of C.M.A. 1697 and the current shelfmark); Coxe 1858: 30 (catalogue).

[0875]

[685] I.63, 91.

This item is referenced among the copies of Galenus, De elementis secundum Hippocratem (I.63), and De diebus decretoriis Libri III (I.91).

Number 685 appears in C.M.A. 1697: 1.2.20 (where De diebus decretoriis is identified as "EjUSD. [i. e. Galeni] de diebus Criticis"), followed by Ackermann 1821 (without brackets):

- LXXV, no. 8: De elementis secundum Hippocratem, where the manuscript is listed among the codices graeci;
- CVII, no. 42: De diebus decretoriis, where the manuscript is identified as "latinus no. 685".

This is a Latin manuscript, which is mentioned in Ackermann 1821 in reference to other Galenic texts, and it is identified there as a Latin codex:

- LXXVII, no. 9 ctd.: De temperamentis, where it is listed among the copies of the versio latina of the work;
- XCIX, no. 31 ctd.: De locis adfectis, where it is among the Latini [codices] of the work;
- CVIII, no. 43: De crisibus, where the manuscript is among the latini.

It is Merton College Library, 218.

Thomson 2009: 156.

[0876]

[687] I.5, 13.

This is a copy of Hippocrates, Prognosticon (I.5) and Aphorismi (I.13).

Reference is to C.M.A. 1697: 1.2.20 (followed by Ackermann 1825: XLVII [Prognosticon] among the "CODICES MSS" without specification of language, and LXV [Aphorismi] among the Latin codices of the treatise; in both cases without brackets).

This is not a Greek manuscript (neither Alexanderson 1963 nor Magdelaine 1994 list it), but a Latin one.

It is Merton College Library, 220.

Thomson 2009: 158-159.

[0877]

This is Hippocrates, Prognosticon (I.5) and Aphorismi (I.13).

The reference is to C.M.A. 1697: 1.2.20 (followed by Ackermann 1825: XLVII [Prognosticon] among the "CODICES MSS" without specification of language, and LXV [Aphorismi], among the Latin codices of the treatise, in both cases without brackets).

This is not a Greek manuscript (neither Alexanderson 1963 nor Magdelaine 1994 mention it), but a Latin one.

It is Merton College Library, 221.

Thomson 2009: 159-160.

[0878] [689] I.5, 13.

This is a manuscript of Hippocrates, Prognosticon (I.5) and Aphorismi (I.13).

The reference is to C.M.A. 1697: 1.2.20 (followed by Ackermann 1825: XLVII [Prognosticon], among the “CODICES MSS” without specification of language, and LXV [Aphorismi], among the Latin codices of the work, in both cases without brackets).

This is not a Greek manuscript but a Latin one (neither Alexanderson 1963 nor Magdelaine 1994 list it).

It is Merton College Library, 222.

Thomson 2009: 160-161.

[0879] [722] I.13.

This is a copy of Hippocrates, Aphorismi.

The reference is to C.M.A. 1697: 1.2.22, followed by Ackermann 1825: LXV, without brackets.

This is not a Greek, but a Latin manuscript (Ackermann lists it among the Latin copies of the work, and Magdelaine 1994 does not mention it).

It is Merton College Library, 255.

Thomson 2009: 196-197.

[0880] [729] I.49.

This is a manuscript of Hippocrates, De remediis.

Reference is to C.M.A. 1697: 1.2.22 listing the following text:

Liber Hippocratis de Solutivis, & Signis mortalibus.

Similar information is found in Ackermann 1825: CXXXVIII, no. 26, about a text entitled περὶ φαρμάκων De purgantibus (without brackets).

This is a Latin manuscript.

It is Merton College Library, 262.

Thomson 2009: 202, where the text of ff. 249r-251v is identified as [Hippocrates], Capsula eburnea.

[Coll. Novi] (Collegii Novi) now New College.

Numbers provided by Diels are not shelfmarks, but are instead sequential numbers in C.M.A. 1697: 1.2.31-38, in a list of manuscripts of “Collegii Novi”, among the “Libri Medicine” (ibid.: 34-35).

[0881] [1130] I.13.

This is a copy of Hippocrates, Aphorismi. The same information (without brackets) appears in Ackermann 1825: LXVI.

Number 1130 is from C.M.A. 1697: 1.2.34.

This is not a Greek manuscript (Ackermann lists it among the Latin copies of the Aphorismi, and Magdelaine 1994 does not mention it), but rather a Latin one (see Kibre 1985: 45 [Aphorismi], in addition to 9 [Acutorum regimen], and 206 [Prognostica]).

This is Oxford, New College Library, MS 166.

Coxe 1852: 1.7.63-64.

[0882]

This is Hippocrates, Aphorismi.

Number 1134 is from C.M.A. 1697: 1.2.35, followed by Ackermann 1825: LXVI (without brackets).

This is not a Greek manuscript, but a Latin one (Ackermann lists it among the Latin copies of the Aphorismi, and Magdelaine 1994 does not mention it; see Kibre 1985: 56 [Aphorismi], as well as 14 [Acutorum regimen], and 210 [Prognostica]).

This is Oxford, New College Library, MS 170.

[Eccl. Wigorn.] (Ecclesia Wigornensis) now Worcester Cathedral, Worcester (GB)

The manuscripts identified as Oxford, Ecclesia Wigornensis, are not at Oxford, but rather at Worcester, at the Worcester Cathedral Library. This may have resulted from confusion about the library of Worcester College at Oxford (on which see Morgan 1973) and that of Worcester Cathedral (for its catalogue, see Thomson 2001).

The numbers in Diels' catalogue are not shelfmarks, but rather sequential numbers in the list of manuscripts "Ecclesiae Cathedralis apud Wigorniam" published in C.M.A. 1697: 2.1.16-22.

[0883] appears in Ackermann 1821, and [0884] and [0885] in Ackermann 1825, in all cases without brackets.

[0883]

This item is listed among the copies of Galenus, De compositione medicamentorum secundum locos libri X. It is mentioned by Ackermann 1821: CXXIV, no. 54 ctd., among the "Codices mss. graeci" that contain the treatise (ibid., CXXIII-CXXV, no. 54, about this treatise, and CXXIV for the manuscripts):

Et inter codd. Mss. cathedr. eccles. Wigorniensis n. 745.

Number 745 is described as follows C.M.A. 1697: 2.1.18:

745. 70. Theoricae Constantini montis Cassin. libri 10.

Galenii libri 5. de Simplicium Medicam. compositione.

De Complexionibus.

This is a Latin manuscript. Ackermann 1821: LXXVII, no. 9 ctd., mentions it for De temperamentis among the copies of the versio latina of that work.

It probably corresponds to Worcester, Worcester Cathedral Library, Q.96, containing (ff. 7r-58r) Galenus, De simplici medicina.

Thomson 2001: 182-183.

[0884] [768] I.13.

This manuscript is listed among the copies of Hippocrates, Aphorismi.

In Ackermann 1825: LXV, a manuscript of the Aphorismi is identified as “In Wigorn. no. 768” (without brackets).

The number 768 appears in C.M.A. 1697: 2.1.18 in the same list as [0883]. It does not contain medical texts, but instead contains “Sermones ex iisdem (i.e. Jo. Chrysostomo, Hieronymo, Augustino, Leone, Maximo, Fulgentio, Gregorio, Beda, Rabano et aliis) a Pascha ad Auentum”.

This may result from confusion with [0885] numbered 760.85 in C.M.A. 1697: 2.1.18, and containing among others Hippocrates, Aphorismi (below).

This is a Latin manuscript (Ackermann 1825: LXV, lists it among the Latin copies of the work; Magdelaine 1994 does not mention it).

This item probably corresponds to Worcester, Worcester Cathedral Library, F.85, ff. 10v-21v.

Thomson 2001: 54.

See [0885].

[0885] [1760] I.5.

This manuscript is listed among the copies of Hippocrates, Prognosticon.

The manuscripts of Worcester Library are numbered 676-924 in C.M.A. 1697: 2.1.16-22.

The number 1760 appears in Ackermann 1825: XLVII (“in ecclesia Wigorn. no. 1760”, without brackets), where the manuscript is listed among “CODICES MSS” without specification of language.

This number might be a mistake for 760 (listed in C.M.A. 1697: 2.1.18), whose contents are identified as follows in C.M.A. 1697:

760. 85. Isagoge Joannitii ad legendos Galeni libros Prognosticorum.

Ejusdem libri Aphorismorum Hippocratis in 7 particulis.

Liber Prognosticorum Hippocratis.

Liber Urinarum Theophili.

Liber Philareti de Pulsibus.

Liber Galeni de corporibus, causis, signis, sanis, aegris, neutris.

Liber de Diaeta.

De 4 Complexionibus.

De generibus Cibariorum.

Liber Constantini de Febribus.

Liber Urinarum Isaac.

Liber Aegidii de Urinis, et Pulsibus.

This is a Latin manuscript (Alexanderson 1963 does not list it), and it probably corresponds to Worcester, Worcester Cathedral Library, F.85, ff. 21v-27r.

Thomson 2001: 54.

Probably same as [0884].

In Diels' catalogue, all references to manuscripts in Padua are taken from the volume Bibliothecae patavinae manuscriptae publicae et privatae ... by Giacomo Filippo Tomasini (1597-1654) published in 1639 (listed in Diels I.XVI among the sources of the catalogue).

Except for [0886], [0889] = [0898], [0890], [0894] = [0899], [0901]-[0903], [0903, second part], and possibly also [0887], the current location of these manuscripts is not known.

[Bibl. Canonico. Lateranens.] (Bibliotheca Canonico. Lateranensium [Library of Canons Regular of the Lateran])

[-] I.28; N.26.

This manuscript without shelfmark is listed among the copies of Hippocrates, De genitura.

N.26 lists, without additional information, a manuscript identified as Padua, S. Joann. in Viridario (= Bibliotheca S. Joannis in Viridario, on the manuscripts of which see [0901]-[0903]) and identifies it as Holkham 282.

The manuscripts referred to at I.28 and N.26 are the same, as “Bibliotheca Canonorum Lateranensium” and the “Bibliotheca S. Joannis in Viridario” are two different names of the same institution (see Formentin 1978: 18-20).

In Tomasini 1639: 21, col. 2, item 6, a manuscript of Hippocrates is listed in the collection of San Giovanni a Viridario (in the section Primus Ordo Librorum ad dextrum Latus, pluteus XVII). De genitura is not specifically mentioned, as the description of the content gives only some major titles followed by “aliaque opera”.

A reference to this manuscript (without any element of identification) appears as follows in Ackermann 1825: CLVII, no. 43 (without brackets):

“In Patavina Canonorum Lateranensium bibliotheca”.

Manuscript Holkham 282 (= [0403]) is now at Oxford, Bodleian Library (see p. 181), together with the whole Holkham collection. Its current shelfmark is Hokham Gr. 92 (above, p. 181).

On this manuscript, see also [0903].

[Bibl. Cathedr.] (Bibliotheca Cathedralis [Cathedral Library])

[0887] [P 129] II.17, 18 (2), 19; N.45.

This is a manuscript of Aretaeus, De causis et signis acutorum morborum and De causis et signis diuturnorum morborum.

According to N.45 (followed by Formentin 1978: 25-26, herself followed by Cutolo 2012: 27n24), the number P 129 is not the shelfmark of this manuscript, but the page number in Tomasini 1639.

As N.45 rightly stresses, this copy of Aretaeus was not in the Padua Cathedral library (the volumes of which are listed in Tomasini 1639: 3-8), but in Tomasini’s own collection (the holdings of which are listed ibid.: 126-136).

This item is identified as follows in Tomasini 1639: 129, col. 2, item 2:

Aretaeus Cappadox Medicus de Diuturnis & Acutis affectibus. Cui deest principium Lib. 1 de acutorum causis & signis usque ad Cap. VI reliqua totius operis integra sunt ...

As N.45 already mentions, this information (without the brackets) goes back to “Kühn 1828: XV” (that is, to Kühn’s edition of Aretaeus), who took it from Montfaucon I.489 (actually Montfaucon 1739: 1.489).

Montfaucon 1739: 1.485-490 provides selected information from Tomasini 1639 in the section “Bibliothecae Patavinae” (Montfaucon 1739: 1.485: “Selecta ex Bibliothecis Patavinis cura J. Philippi Thomasini cuspis.”). References to Tomasini 1639 in Montfaucon 1739 are to a page number preceded by the letter “P.” (for “pagina”):

P. 126. Ex Museo Philippi Thomasini.

Medicinae libri.

...

P. 129. Aretaeus Cappadox de diuturnis & acutis morbis.

Kühn reproduced Montfaucon’s information, explicitly stating that he did not know whether this is a Greek manuscript (nescio an Grece).

In Diels' catalogue, all references to the manuscript identified as [Bibl. Cathedr.], [P 129] are followed by a reference to a manuscript identified as Bibl. Tomasini, as if these were two different manuscripts. However, both designations refer to the same manuscript.

The present item is listed also in Diels' catalogue under Tomasini's name (see [0904]).

According to Formentin 1978: 25-26, the current location of this manuscript is unknown. The editions of Kühn 1828: XV, and Hude 1958: VII-X do not identify this manuscript.

The text in the manuscript according to Tomasini (i. e. with the lacuna of Chapters 1-5 in Book I) corresponds to the text of the following manuscripts according to Hude 1958: VIII-IX (listed below with their provenance when known):

- Harleianus 6326 (= [0553]), purchased in a 1695 auction (McKendrick 1999: 210);
- Ambrosianus B 157 sup. (= [0612]), from the Pinelli collection (Martini and Bassi 1906: 172);
- Parisinus 2186 (= [1111]) (Omont 1886-1888: 2.211);
- Parisinus 2334 (= [1279]), from Roger de Gaignières (d. 1715) (Omont 1886-1888: 2.242).

Currently, it is not known if the present item corresponds to any of these four manuscripts, if it is another codex, or if it is lost.

Bibl. Joann. Rhodii (Bibliotheca Joannis Rhodii [Johann Rhodius' Library])

The Danish Johann Rhodius (1587-1659), who moved to Italy and was the Praefectus of Padua Botanical Garden, owned a collection of manuscripts.

Diels' catalogue lists manuscripts containing works by Dioscorides, Galen, Hippocrates, Oribasius, and Stephanus Atheniensis under Rhodius' name.

As Formentin 1978: 26-27 already noticed, information about these items in Diels' catalogue was taken from Tomasini 1639: 136-141, where several manuscripts are listed.

I reproduce below the list according to Tomasini (with reference to the mentions of the manuscripts in Diels' catalogue). Manuscripts are listed below according to the alphabetical order of the author of the text or texts they contain. The titles correspond to those in Diels' catalogue.

All these manuscripts are considered lost in Diels' catalogue (Verbleib unbekannt), which is not necessarily the case (see [0889] = [0898], [0890] and [0894] = [0899]). A note in N.24 mentions that, according to Emil Jacobs (1868-1940), Rhodius' manuscripts could be in the Library of Padua Chapter. According to Formentin 1978: 27, Rhodius' manuscripts that were not acquired by Copenhagen Library or left in Padua were destroyed in a fire in 1670.

[0888] - II.30.

This is a copy of Dioscorides, De materia medica. In Tomasini 1639: 138, col. 2, item 6, it is identified as Dioscorides Graecè 4 c. Although this item may be the same as [0889], it may also be a different codex, in which Dioscorides' text was not alphabetized. Furthermore, the size of the present item (4°) does not suggest it can be identical to the following, of a larger size (f. = folio).

[0889] - II.29, 33.

The references II.29 and 33 are to Dioscorides, Opera varia and Alphabetum empiricum, respectively. These two references in Diels' catalogue (to which [0898] needs to be added) are probably to the same item. Tomasini 1639: 138, col. 2, item 9, mentions only one item: Dioscorides, & Stephanus Atheniensis de Pharmacia ordine literarum. Graecè. f. c.

This item corresponds to present manuscript Padova, Biblioteca del Seminario, 194 (see p. 187), which is a large-size volume and contains an alphabetical version of Dioscorides' text with illustrations.

The attribution to Stephanus Atheniensis (on which see [0898]) reflects confusion with the so-called Alphabetum empiricum ascribed to either Dioscorides or Stephanus Atheniensis in both the manuscript tradition and, consequently, modern scholarship. This does not contradict the identification with the Padua manuscript.

See also Formentin 1978: 92, and Savvinidou 2006.

[0890] - I.61.

This manuscript is a copy of Galenus, Ars medica.

In Tomasini 1639: 139, col. 1, item 7, it is identified as Galenus Ars Medica. Grec. fol. & 8. c. Diversa a vulgatis.

It is now København, Det Kongelige Bibliotek, e don. var., 42, 4° (= [0448]) mentioned on the same page in Diels' catalogue (see also Boudon 2002: 198n109 ctd.).

[0891] - I.66, 68.

This is a copy of Galenus, De anatomicis administrationibus (I.66) and De usu partium (I.68).

This codex is identified in Tomasini 1639: 139, col. 1, item 8 as follows:

Galenus de Administratione Anatomica, Gr. f. c. de Usu Partium.

On the basis of this identification, it seems that these two Galenic works were found in the same manuscript.

The present location of this manuscript is unknown (see also Garofalo 1986: XIIIn38).

[0892] - I.89.

This is a copy of Galenus, Synopsis de pulsibus.

Tomasini 1639: 139, col. 1, item 9, identifies it as Eiusdem [i.e. Galeni] Synopsis de Pulsibus.

No information is available on the present location of this manuscript.

[0893]

- I.63, 64, 85, 96, 98 (2), 104, 119, 134.

Based on Tomasini 1639 (below), the following Galenic works were found in the same manuscript (references to Diels' catalogue follow the titles):

- De compositione medicamentorum per genera (I.98);
- De compositione medicamentorum secundum locos (I.98);
- De simplicium medicamentorum temperamentis et facultatibus (I.96);
- De locis affectis (I.85);
- In Hippocratis epidemias commentarium (I.104);
- De partibus philosophiae (I.134);
- De consuetudinibus (I.119);
- De facultatibus naturalibus (I.65);
- De elementis secundum Hippocratem (I.63);
- De temperamentis (I.64).

An item containing all these works appears in Tomasini 1639: 139, col. 1, item 10:

Idem [i. e. Galeni] de Simplicium facultatibus. Compositione Medicamentorum. Liber mutilus. Locis affectis. in 2 Lib. Epidem. Hippocrat. de Philosophia. de Moribus. De Potentiis Naturalibus. Elementis secundum Hippocratem. Temperamentis Gr. f. c.

Discrepancies in the titles of the works (de Simplicium facultatibus, de Philosophia, de Moribus, and De potentiis Naturalibus in Tomasini corresponding to De simplicium medicamentorum temperamentis et facultatibus, De partibus philosophiae, De consuetudinibus, and De facultatibus naturalibus, respectively, in Diels) result from different usages. The second item in the codex according to Tomasini (Compositione Medicamentorum. Liber mutilus) can correspond to both De compositione medicamentorum per genera and De compositione medicamentorum secundum locos.

The current location of this manuscript is not known.

[0894]

- I.93.

This is a manuscript of Galenus, Ad Glauconem.

In Tomasini 1639: 139, col. 1, item 11, it is described as follows:

Idem [i. e. Galeni] de Arte Curativa ad Glauconem. Gr. f. c.

According to Dickson 1990, this is København, Det Kongelige Bibliotek, e don. var. 29, 2° (= [0451]).

May be the same as [0899].

[0895]

- I.13.

This copy of Hippocrates, Aphorismi is identified in Tomasini 1639: 139, col. 1, item 21, as follows:

Hippocratis Aphorismi. Gr. 8. c.

A reference to this manuscript appears in Ackermann 1825: LXV.

The current location of this codex is unknown. See Formentin 1978: 43, and Magdelaine 1994: 88n1.

[0896] - I.10, 19.

This is a copy of Hippocrates, De morbis popularibus I et III, and II et IV-VII.

In Tomasini 1639: 139, col. 1, item 22, this manuscript is described as [Hippocratis] Epidemia. Gr. f. c.

The current location of this manuscript is unknown.

[0897] - II.70.

This is a copy of Oribasius, Opera.

In Tomasini 1639: 140, col. 1, item 19, this item is identified as Oribasius. Mutilus. f. c.

The current location of this manuscript is unknown.

[0898] - II.97.

This is Stephanus Atheniensis, De remediis alphabetice (Tomasini 1639: 138, col. 2, item 9)

Same as [0889].

[0899] - II.97.

This codex contains Stephanus Atheniensis, In Galeni de methodo medendi.

In Tomasini 1639: 137, col. 1, item 23, it is described as follows:

Stephanus Atheniensis in Galenum de Arte Curat. ad Glauconem. Graece f. ch.

Björk 1938: 140, hypothesizes that this manuscript might be the codex of København, Det Kongelige Bibliotek, e don. var. 29, 2° (= [0451]). See also Petit 2006: 183n38 ctd., who confirms that the manuscript of København belonged to Johannes Rhodius.

See [0894].

Bibl. Marci Mantuae (Bibliotheca Marci Mantuae [Marco Mantua's Library])

[0900] - II.30.

This item is a copy of Dioscorides, De materia medica.

Information comes from Tomasini 1639: 102-103, listing the volumes in the collection of Marcus Mantua Benavidius (i.e. Marco Mantova Benavides [1489-1582]).

The Dioscorides codex is described as follows (ibid.: 103, col. 2, item 4):

Dioscorides Liber Primus de materia Medica Graecè f. ch.

According to Formentin 1978: 26, it is now lost.

Bibl. S. Joann. in Viridario (Bibliotheca Sancti Joannis in Viridario [St. John in Viridario Library])

[0901] ad dextr. plut. 16 II.6; N.43.

This copy of Aetius Amidenus, Libri medicinales, appears in Tomasini 1639: 20, col. 2, sub XVI, item 3, among the holdings of the library of San Giovanni in Viridario.

While in II.6 the manuscript is considered lost (Verbleib unbekannt), in N.43 (followed by Formentin 1978: 20) it is identified as Holkham 283 (= [0404]). Since then, the Holkham collection has been moved to Oxford, Bodleian Library (above, p. 89). The current shelfmark of this manuscript is Holkham Gr. 108 (see above, p. 181).

[0902] ad dextr. plut. XVI II.70.

This is a copy of Oribasius, Opera, which is listed by Tomasini 1639: 20, col. 2, sub XVI, item 2, among the volumes of the library of San Giovanni in Viridario.

Whereas this volume was not located in Diels' catalogue (Verbleib unbekannt), it is now Venetus Marcianus, Appendix graeca V.1 (coll. 834) (= [1710]), as Formentin 1978: 19-20 noticed.

[0903] ad dextr. plut. XVII I.3, 5, 13, 21, 30; II.77; N. 25 (3), 26 (3).

This volume contains the following collection of works (listed in alphabetical order of title; references to Diels' catalogue follow the titles):

- Hippocrates, Aphorismi (I.13);
- Hippocrates, De genitura (N.26);
- Hippocrates, De natura hominis (I.21);
- Hippocrates De virginum morbis (I.30);
- Hippocrates, Opera varia (I.3);
- Hippocrates, Prognosticum (I.5);
- Paulus Aegineta, Epitome medica (II.77).

Mention of a codex of "S. Joannis in viridario Patav." appears in Ackermann 1825: LXV (Aphorismi), with a reference to "Montf. I. p. 485."

The reference is to Montfaucon 1739: 1.485, where the following can be read:

"Bibliothecae Patavinae. Selecta ex Bibliothecis Patavinis cura J. Philippi Thomasini cussis ... In Bibliotheca S. Joannis in Viridario ... P. 20 ... Libri Graeci ... P. 21 ... Pauli Aeginetae opera ... Hippocratis Aphorismi ...".

The reference to Tomasini in Montfaucon is to Tomasini 1639: 12, col. 2, sub XVII ctd, item 9, where a volume of Hippocrates is described as follows among the holdings of San Giovanni in Viridario:

Hippocratis Aphorismi, Prognostica, liber de Natura humana, de Virginibus. aliaq[ue] opera.

While in Diels' catalogue I.3, 5, 13, 21, 30, and II.77, this item is considered missing (Verbleib unbekannt), in N. 25 (3) and 26 (3) (referring to I.3, 5, 13, 21, 30) it is identified as Holkham 282 (= [0403]). The item does not appear on I.12 contrary to N.25 (where Holkham 282 is referenced, instead).

This identification has been further confirmed by Formentin 1978: 19, followed by Magdelaine 1994: 88n1 for Hippocrates, Aphorismi, and Jouanna the 2002: 62n4, sub 1 for Hippocrates, De natura hominis.

See also [0886].

The Holkham collection is now at Oxford, Bodleian Library, and the present item is manuscript Holkham Gr. 92 (see p. 181).

The case of Paul of Aegina, Epitomae is different (see Tomasini 1639: 21, col. 1, sub XVII, item 2). The Holkham manuscript does not contain the work (above). The copy of St. John in the Viridario Library must be considered lost or missing, unless it corresponds to another manuscript. Whereas Köhler and Milchsack 1913: 34-35, link this item with the current manuscript 47 Gud.

graec. fol. of Wolfenbüttel library (= [1842]-[1843]), Heiberg 1919: 271, estimates that it corresponds to the current Venetus Marcianus, Appendix graeca V.1 (coll. 834) (= [1710]).

Bibl. Tomasini (Bibliotheca Tomasini, Giacomo Filippo Tomasini [1597-1654] [Tomasini's Library])

[0904] - II.17, 18 (2), 19.

This copy of Aretaeus, De causis et signis acutorum morborum et De causis et signis diuturnorum morborum is the same as [0887].

Paris (FR)

[Bib. Regia] (Bibliotheca Regia [Royal Library]), now Bibliothèque nationale de France (National Library of France)

[0907] 2 Parisini regii bei Migne N.46.

[0908] According to Diels' catalogue, these two manuscripts contain S. Basilius, Ad Eustathium medicum. A reference is made to “Migne, patrol. gr. 32, p. 684 ff. Ep. 189” (= Migne 1857: 683/684-695/696 [columns, not pages as in Diels]).

This is Letter 189 of S. Basilius (= Clavis Patrum Graecorum 2900 for the whole collection of Letters), edited by Courtonne 1961: 132-141. According to Courtonne 1957: xxii, the Maurists responsible for the 1730 edition (reproduced by Migne 1857: 683/684-695/696, and cited by Diels) consulted two manuscripts Regii:

- 2293, which is now Paris, Bibliothèque nationale de France, graecus 506 (on which see Fedwick 1993: 23-26);
- 2897, which is now Paris, Bibliothèque nationale de France, graecus 971 (on which see Fedwick 1993: 133-134).

The Letter is addressed to a certain Eustathius medicus (in the Bibliotheca Basiliiana Universalis by Fedwick 1993: XVI, the Letter is identified as EustArc

2/189, that is, Basilius' Letter 189, being the second addressed to Eustathius archiater). This letter is of dubious authenticity and may be by Gregorius Nyssenius (= Ad Eustathium de sancta trinitate [= Clavis Patrum Graecorum 3137]; edition by Mueller 1958: 1-16).

This is a theological text not medical in nature. It was probably included in Diels' catalogue because of its recipient's medical profession.

[120 ap. Montf. II 902] I.103.

This is a copy of Galenus, in Hippocratis de humoribus librum commentarii III.

The same information (without brackets) appears in Ackermann 1821: CLXXVII, no. 5: "in B. R. Paris. n. 120. Montf. II. p. 902".

The reference is to Montfaucon 1739: 2.902, manuscript no. CXX of the Bibliotheca regia Parisiensis, where the contents of the manuscript are identified as follows:

Cod. CXX. in charta.

1. περὶ μέτρων.

2. περὶ μέτρων πάλιν, eadem manu.

3. Alia manu recentiore sed elegantissima [sic!], Galeni εἰς τὸ περὶ χυμῶν Ἱπποκράτους ἢ περὶ καιρῶν.

From the description of its contents, this manuscript seems to correspond to codex Coislinianus 163 (= [0937]; Devreesse 1945: 146-147), copied by Andreas Darmarios whose hand may have been described as "recentior" and "elegantissima".

The description of the manuscript in Montfaucon 1715 (= Bibliotheca Coisliniana), Pars prima, page 222, no. CLXIII, is more precise and confirms the identification of this item. The mention of two works περὶ μέτρων in Montfaucon 1739 (above) does not appear in either Montfaucon 1715 (above) or Devreesse 1945 (above), and seems to be a mistake in Montfaucon 1739 (above).

On Coislin 163, see Devreesse 1945: 146-147.

Same as [0937].

[0910]

[349] II.58.

This is a manuscript of Lucas, Compositio salsi intinctus.

The current codex Parisinus graecus 349 does not contain this text, but it does contain an Euchologium followed by some other short texts (Omont 1886-1888: 1.36).

None of the manuscripts with shelfmark 349 in the several inventories and catalogues of the "Bib. Regia" (that is, the Bibliotheca Regia in Paris), contain Lucas, Sales (on these inventories and catalogues, see Balayé 1988: 59 [Rigault 1622], 67 [Dupuy 1645], 100-101 [Clément 1682], 226 [printed catalogue 1740]):

- 1622, 1st catalogue by Rigault: 349 (380) Demosthenis opera (Omont 1909: 42);
- 1622, 1st catalogue by Rigault (revised by Dupuy): 349 Josephus contra Manetonem et alios stoicos, latine (Omont 1909: 38, in parte inferiori paginae in nota (1) ad numerum 340);

- 1622, 2nd catalogue by Rigault: 349 Consuetudines et leges Angliae (Omont 1909: 279);
- 1645, inventory by Pierre and Jacques Dupuy: 349. Innocentii IV. Pontificis apparatus (Omont 1910: 21);
- 1682, catalogue by Clément: Missale sancti Basilii, cophtice et arabice (Omont 1910: 184);
- 1740, printed catalogue: CCCXLIX Codex chartaceus, ex Oriente in Bibliothecam regiam illatus. Ibi continetur liber precum ad usum Ecclesiae Graecae. Initium & finis desiderantur (Bibliotheca Regia 1740: 49).

According to Omont 1898: 126, sub nomine Lucas evangelista, sub titulo Excerpta medica, the only copies of this text at the Bibliothèque nationale de France, are graecus 2510 (= [1294]), where the text appears in the medical collection of ff. 125r-132r (Omont 1886-1888: 2.275), and Supplementum graecum 1188 (see p. 261), which contains the text on f. 3v (Astruc and Concasty 1960: 357-358).

The codex Supplementum graecum 1188 comes from the collection of Emmanuel Miller (1812-1886) and entered the Bibliothèque nationale sometimes after Miller's death in 1886, but before 1897 (Omont 1897: V).

It might be significant that manuscript graecus 2510 was no. 3495 in the Bibliotheca Regia (Omont 1886-1888: 2.275; Omont 1898: LXXXI, sub numero 3495; Omont 1921: 93, sub numero 3495). On this basis, number 349 in Diels' catalogue might be an incorrect reproduction of this old number. However, the reference to f. 156 would not be correct, since the manuscript contains 142 folios. Perhaps this is an additional transcription mistake for 126r, that is, a folio in the section of the manuscript that Omont 1886-1888: 2.275, identifies as "Remedia varia" that includes the text of Lucas, Salus.

The manuscript does not appear in Montfaucon 1739: 2.742, in the catalogue of the Bibliotheca Regia Parisiensis... Bibliothecae Regiae Manuscripti Codices (ibid. 2.710-921 for the whole catalogue, and 725-743 for the Greek manuscripts), because the content of numbers 3492-3500 has been summarized as follows:

In sequentibus codicibus (= 3492-3500) Iatrica, seu medicinalia multa.

Possibly same as [1294].

Bibl. de la ville de Paris (Bibliothèque de la ville de Paris [Library of the city of Paris])

The two manuscripts listed under Bibl. de la ville de Paris were incorrectly identified. The numbers used to identify them appear in Omont, Inventaire sommaire des manuscrits grecs de la Bibliothèque nationale et des autres bibliothèques de Paris et des Départements, tome 3 (1888), pp. 347-358 (= Omont 1886-1888: 3.347-358), in a section entitled "Manuscrits grecs des bibliothèques de Paris autres que la Bibliothèque nationale". According to this catalogue, they were preserved in the following two libraries in Paris:

- Bibliothèque Mazarine ([0911]);
- Bibliothèque de la Faculté de médecine ([0912]).

The numbers used to identify these items in Diels' catalogue (12 and 58, respectively) are not shelfmarks, but instead are sequential numbers in Omont 1886-1888: 3.347-356 (and also in Omont 1883 and 1884 for [0911]).

The two manuscripts are listed a second time in Diels' catalogue under the name of the libraries where they are actually preserved, but with different numbers (see [0924] and [0922], respectively).

- [0911] 12 II.33.
 According to Diels' catalogue, this is a copy of Dioscorides, Metaphrasis in Nicandri Theriaca et Alexipharmaca.
 Number 12 appears in Omont 1883: 120, no. 12 (1235); Omont 1884: 310, no. 12 (1235); and Omont 1886-1888: 3.349, no. 12 (1235). On this basis, it appears that the text is incorrectly identified in Diels' catalogue: it is not a paraphrasis of Nicander, but is instead Pseudo-Dioscorides, Alexipharmaca and Theriaca.
 Current location and shelfmark: Paris, Bibliothèque Mazarine, 4461 (= [0924]).
- [0912] 58 II.6, 8.
 This copy of Aetius is now Paris, Bibliothèque Interuniversitaire de Santé-BIU Santé MS 2105 (= [0922]).
 Omont 1886-1888: 3.355-356, no. 58 [76], and also Omont 1883: 123, no. 50 (76).

Bibl. de Paris (Bibliothèque de Paris [Paris Library])

The three manuscripts listed under Bibl. de Paris have been incorrectly identified in Diels' catalogue. The numbers used to identify them appear in Omont, Inventaire sommaire des manuscrits grecs de la Bibliothèque nationale et des autres bibliothèques de Paris et des Départements, tome 3 (1888), pp. 347-358 (= Omont 1886-1888: 3.347-358), in a section entitled "Manuscrits grecs des bibliothèques de Paris autres que la Bibliothèque nationale". According to this catalogue, they were preserved in the following three libraries in Paris:

- Bibliothèque Mazarine ([0913]);
- Bibliothèque Sainte-Geneviève ([0914]);
- Bibliothèque de la Faculté de médecine ([0915]).

The numbers used to identify these items in Diels' catalogue (4, 42 and 57 respectively) are not shelfmarks but sequential numbers in Omont 1886-1888: 3.347-358 (and also in Omont 1883 and 1884 for [0913]). Based on its contents, number [0915] appears to be listed several more times in Diels' catalogue under the name of the library where it is actually preserved, but under different identifications:

- 14 (ol. Bibl. de Paris 57) in [0921];
- 14 in [0920];
- nr. ? in [0919];
- without number in [0916]-[0918].

- [0913] 4 I.38.
 This copy of Hippocrates, Epistulae, is Paris, Bibliothèque Mazarine, 4454 (see below, p. 200).

- Omout 1883: 119, no. 4 (611. A); Omout 1884: 398, no. 4; Omout 1886-1888: 3.347-348, no. 4 [611 A].
- [0914] 42 II.67.
This copy of Nemesius Emesenus, De natura hominis (frg.) is Paris, Bibliothèque Sainte-Geneviève, 3394 (see p. 262).
Omout 1886-1888: 3.353, no. 42 [Ao. 2 bis, in-fol.]. Also Omout 1883: 122, no. 39 (2 bis); 1884: 316, no. 3 (2 bis).
- [0915] 57 II.71.
This manuscript of Oribasius, Medicae collectiones ad Iulianum, L. XVVIII, is Paris, Bibliothèque Interuniversitaire de Santé MS 44 (= [0921]).
Omout 1886-1888: 3.355, no. 57 [14].

Bibl. Facult. Med. (Bibliothèque de la Faculté de Médecine [Medical School Library]), now Bibliothèque Interuniversitaire de Santé-BIU Santé (Interuniversity Health Library-BIU Santé)

According to the list of catalogues consulted to compile Diels, these manuscripts are identified on the basis of Omout 1883. Numbers used to identify them are not the sequential numbers in this article, but the numbers between brackets following this sequential number.

In [0916]-[0919] no number is provided (either the sequential number in Omout 1883 or another).

In [0921] and [0923], a reference to Bibl. de Paris is provided with a number (57 and 59, respectively), which is, in fact, the sequential number of these two manuscripts in Omout 1886-1888: 3.355 and 356, respectively.

- [0916] - II.15.
This is a copy of Apollonius Citiensis, Commentarius in Hippocratis de articulis listed without shelfmark but with a reference to “Dietz, Schol. in Hipp. et Gal. I pref. p. XI” (= Dietz 1834).
It may correspond to the text present in [0921], ff. 18r et seq.
Also [0917]-[0920].
- [0917] - II.74.
This copy of Oribasius, De fracturis fragmenta listed without shelfmark probably corresponds to the text found in [0921], ff. 18r et seq.

Coislin. (Coisliniani)

[0925]

Coislin. N.46.

According to Diels' catalogue, this manuscript listed without shelfmark contains S. Basilus, Ad Eustathium medicum. A reference is made to "Migne, patrol. gr. 32, p. 684 ff. Ep. 189" (= Migne 1857: 683/684-695/696 [columns, but not pages as in Diels]).

This is Letter 189 of S. Basilus (= Clavis Patrum Graecorum 2900 for the whole collection of Letters), edited by Courtonne 1961: 132-141.

According to Courtonne 1957: xxii, the Maurists responsible for the 1730 edition (reproduced by Migne 1857: 683/684-695/696, and cited by Diels) consulted the manuscript Paris, Bibliothèque nationale de France, Coislinianus 237 (on which see Fedwick 1993: 103-107; also Devreesse 1945: 216-217).

The letter is addressed to a certain Eustathius medicus (in the Bibliotheca Basiliana Universalis by Fedwick 1993: XVI, it is identified as EustArc 2/189, that is, Basilus' Letter 189, being the second addressed to Eustathius archiater). This letter is of dubious authenticity and may be by Gregorius Nyssenus (= Ad Eustathium de sancta trinitate [= Clavis Patrum Graecorum 3137]; edition by Mueller 1958: 1-16).

This is a theological text not medical in nature. It was probably included in Diels' catalogue because of its recipient's medical profession.

[ap. Montf. II 447] I.64, 65.

This manuscript without shelfmark in Diels' catalogue is listed as a copy of Galenus, De temperamentis (I.64) and De facultatibus naturalibus (I.65).

The same information (also without shelfmark, but with the reference to Montfaucon, though without brackets) appears in Ackermann 1821: LXXVII, no. 9 ctd. (De temperamentis), and LXXXI, no. 14 ctd. (De facultatibus naturalibus).

The reference to Montfaucon is to Bibliotheca Coisliniana (1715), Pars Secunda, p. 447, no. CCCXXXIV.

Though incomplete, the information in Montfaucon allows for an identification of this item as Coislinianus 334 (= [0949]) (on which, see Devreesse 1945: 317–318).

Identification of the content of the manuscript in Diels' catalogue is not correct as the manuscript does not contain Galen, but Actuarius (using Galen).

Also [0927].

[0927] [ap. Montf. II 447] (Es ist wohl Coislin. 335) I.128.

This manuscript without shelfmark is listed among the copies of Galenus, De urinis.

The same information (including the reference to Montfaucon, but without the identification as Coislin 335 or the brackets) appears in Ackermann 1821: CLXV, no. 119.

There might be some confusion about this manuscript. The reference to Montfaucon is to Bibliotheca Coisliniana (1715), Pars Secunda, p. 447, where a De urinis by Galen is mentioned. However, this text is contained in codex no. CCCXXXIV (= 334). Nevertheless, a De urinis is mentioned in Montfaucon 1715, codex CCCXXXV (= 335). However, it appears on p. 448 and is considered anonymous (this text is not listed in Devreesse 1945: 318–320, particularly 320).

The identification of this item as Coislin 335 (= [0950]) is probably inexact. Coislinianus 334 (= [0949]) contains a summary of Galenus, De urinis (ff. 10r–18r) in addition to two others De urinis (ff. 215r–281v [Actuarius] and 346r–355v [anonymous]).

Devreesse 1945: 317–318.

Same as [0926] and [0949].

[0928] [ap. Montf. II 448] I.96.

This manuscript without shelfmark is listed among the copies of Galenus, De simplicium medicamentorum temperamentis et facultatibus libri XI.

The information (without brackets) comes from Ackermann 1821: CXIII, no. 49 ctd. (adding that the manuscript contains only excerpta).

Diels' reference is to Montfaucon, Bibliotheca Coisliniana (1715), Pars Secunda, where manuscript CCCXXXV (= 335) is described on pp. 447–449. In Montfaucon's catalogue (p. 448), the text is identified as follows:

Fol. 21. Excerpta passim ἀτάκτως ex Galeni libris de simplicium medicamentorum facultatibus.

On the basis of this description, this manuscript can be identified as current Coislinianus 335 (= [0950]) (on which Devreesse 1945: 318–320), which contains (ff. 21r-60r) a iatrosofion under Galen's name and not De simplicium medicamentorum temperamentis et facultatibus (the manuscript is not listed in Petit 2010: 146).

Same as [0950] and [0929], but not [0927]. Also [0951].

[ap. Montfauc. II 448] I.126.

According to Diels' catalogue, this codex listed without shelfmark contains a text identified as Galenus, De morbis Excerpta, and also "Exc. ex Hipp. Gal. Meletio". A supplementary information identifies this manuscript as follows: "Wohl Coislin. 335; vgl. unter Iatrosafia".

A mention of this manuscript (including the reference to "Coislin. Montfauc. in bibl. Coislin. part. II. p. 448" as in Diels' catalogue) appears (without brackets) in Ackermann 1825: CLXXVIII, sub titulo Excerpta de morbis ex Hippocrate, Galeno et Meletio.

The reference is to Montfaucon, Bibliotheca Coisliniana (1715), Pars Secunda, where the manuscript is described on pp. 447-449. On p. 448, Montfaucon lists a text identified as follows:

Fol. 75. Excerpta de morbis ex Hippocrate, Galeno, & Meletio.

This is Coislinianus 335 (Devreesse 1945: 318-320), in which a iatrosofion by Galenus, Hippocrates, and Meletius can be found on ff. 75r-150r.

Same as [0950] and [0928], but not [0927]. Also [0951].

[0930]

The ff. 1 and 283 (palimpsest) come from the same manuscript as f. I of Coislinianus 123 (= [0935]).

Devreesse 1945: 7-8.

The palimpsested ff. 24-25 of Paris, Supplementum graecum 1156 (= [1391]) and 1-2 of Москва (Moskva), Государственный Исторический Музей (ГИМ), Синодальная Библиотека Московского Патриархата (Gosudarstvennyi Istoricheskii Muzei (GIM), Sinodal'naia Biblioteka Moskovskoi Patriarkhii [State Historical Museum [GIM], Synodal Library of Moscow Patriarchate]), Sinod. 174 (387 Vlad.) (see above, p. 148), do not come from the same manuscript contrary to Heiberg 1919: 276, Devreesse 1945: 7-8 (about Coislinianus 8) and 117-118 (about Coislinianus 123), and Astruc and Concasty 1960: 320 (about Paris, Supplementum graecum 1156).

Omont 1897: 13, already noted the different origin of the palimpsested folios of Supplementum graecum 1156 and Coislinianus 8 (although he did not distinguish f. 23 and ff. 24-25 in the Supplementum graecum 1156).

This manuscript is listed among the copies of Galenus, Iatrosophion.
This codex has been described by Montfaucon 1715: 2.416. Although it does not contain any text explicitly identified as a iatrosophion, it has some medicinalia at the end of the volume (“In fine aliquot praecepta medicinalia”) and could very well be the item referred to here.

According to Devreesse 1945: 285, the manuscript is in Leningrad.

Actually the manuscript is now in Санкт-Петербург, Российская национальная библиотека (РНБ), Собрание греческих рукописей, 116 (Sankt-Petersburg, Rossiiskaia natsional’naia biblioteka [RNB], Sobranie grecheskie rukopisei, 116 [Saint-Petersburg, National Library of Russia [NLR], Greek manuscripts, 116]) (see below, p. 311).

Reference is to Montfaucon 1715, Pars Secunda, p. 444, manuscript CCCXXI (= 321) described as containing Hippocrates, Epistula ad Ptolemaeum at f. 115.

This text can be found in Coislinianus 321, ff. 115r-116r (see Devreesse 1945: 308-309).

This is a copy of Hippocrates, De genitura.

The same information appears in Ackermann 1825: CLVII, no. 43 (without brackets), with the following addition:

Codices Mss. exstant in bibl. Coisliniana nr. 335 Montfaucon in biblioth. Coisliniana part. II. pag. 448.

In Montfaucon 1715: 2.448 (on manuscript CCCXXXV [= 335]) described ibid. 447-449), a text entitled as follows is listed:

Fol. 34. vers. Excerpta ex Hippocrate περὶ τῆς γονῆς καὶ κατασκευῆς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου. Quae secunda portio liber est editus a Cornario Basileae anno 1558. sub titulo, Hippocratis de hominis structura.

Diels' reference here is probably to this text, which seems to be included in the iatrosofion under Galen's name in Coislinianus 335, ff. 21r-60r (see Devreesse 1945: 319, no. VII, about the text, and 318-320 about the manuscript), unless this is a reference to the text of f. 68v identified as follows in Devreesse 1945: 319, no. VIII.3: "de quibusdam feminarum morbis".

This manuscript is listed among the copies of Hippocrates, De articulis.
The same information (without brackets or question mark) appears in Ackermann 1825: CXXII, no. 8.
The codex Parisinus graecus 1444 does not contain this text, but rather Hermias Sozomenus, Ecclesiastica historia, and Evagrius Scholasticus, Ecclesiastica historia (Omont 1886-1888: 2.43).
This is probably a mistake for one of the Parisini containing the work according to Omont 1898: 89 sub nomine Hippocrates:

 Whereas Parisinus graecus 1819 does not contain the treatise (Omont 1886-1888: 2.149), Parisinus 1849 (= [1011]), does at ff. 9r-95r (Omont 1886-1888: 2.152; Garofalo 1986: IX; see also ibid.: XII n. 38).

 This manuscript is thought to be a copy of Hippocrates, Aphorismi, which is not the case (it is not listed in Magdelaine 1994).
 This codex is listed (without brackets or question mark) among the copies of the Aphorismi in Ackermann 1825: LXIV.
 It seems to have been confused with 1884 (= [1015]), which contains (ff. 158r-331r) Galenus, In Hippocratis Aphorismos commentarius, and is listed in Magdelaine 1994: 226.

- [1016] [1884] I.38.
 According to Omont 1886-1888: 2.158, this manuscript does not contain Hippocrates, Epistulae, but only (f. 95v) eiusdem (i.e. Hippocratis), Epistola ad Ptolemaeum, regem Aegypti.
 Same as [1015].
- [1017] [1884 (?)] I.41.
 The text referred to in Diels' catalogue (Hippocrates, Epistula ad Ptolemaeum regem de sanitate tuenda) is mentioned in Ackermann 1825: CLXXIV, sub titulo (without brackets or question mark).
 It appears in Parisinus graecus 1884, ff. 95v-96v (Omont 1886-1888: 2.158).
 Same as [1015].
- [1018] [1885] I.38.
 Contrary to Diels' catalogue, the Epistulae attributed to Hippocrates are not in this manuscript, which contains, according to Omont 1886-1888: 2.158: (ff. 1r et seq.) Herennius, Commentarius in Aristotelis Metaphysica, and (ff. 59r et seq.) Proclus Diadochus, Elementa theologica.
 This may be a mistake for Parisinus graecus 1884 (= [1015]).
 The Parisini 1884 and 1885 seem to have been confused also with Parisinus 1667 (= [1002]).

 This manuscript does not contain the text, contrary to Diels' catalogue (Omont 1886-1888: 2.158).
 This may be a mistake for Parisinus graecus 1884, ff. 92v-95v, which, according to Omont 1898: 89, sub nomine Hippocrates, sub titulo, is the only copy of this work in the collections of the Bibliothèque nationale de France.

 This manuscript is listed among the copies of Galenus, Introductio sive medicus.
 The same information appears in Ackermann 1821: CXLVIII, no. 83 (without brackets or question mark).
 The Parisinus 2113 contains Aristoteles, Ethicorum ad Nicomachum libri X, and not the Galenic treatise (Omont 1886-1888: 2.196; Wartelle 1963: 112, no. 1510).
 This seems to be a mistake for Parisinus 2153 (= [1069]), ff. 1r-12v, which contains this work (see Omont 1886-1888: 2.205; Petit 2009: LXXXII-LXXXIII, where the Parisinus 2113 does not appear, whereas 2153 does.
 However, Petit 2009: LXXXII n125 does not include the Parisinus 2113 among the manuscripts erroneously mentioned by Diels as containing the work).

 This manuscript is listed among the copies of Galenus, *De compositione

 The same information appears in Ackermann 1821: CXXIV, no. 54 ctd.
 (without brackets or question mark).
 The Parisinus 2123 contains Epictetus, Enchiridion (Omont 1886-1888: 2.197).
 This seems to be a confusion with Parisinus graecus 2173 (= [1097]), where Galen's treatise can be found (ff. 71r-319v) (Omont 1886-1888: 2.209).
- [1038] [2137 (?)] I.88.
 The treatise by Galenus, De causis pulsuum is not present in this manuscript (Omont 1886-1888: 2.199) contrary to Diels' catalogue.
 The information, which is present in Ackermann 1821: CV, no. 40 ctd.
 (without brackets or question mark), may result from confusion with Parisinus 2167 (= [1088]), which does contain this text, at ff. 343r-387r (Omont 1886-1888: 2.208-209).

The text referred to here is Galenus, Prognostica de decubitu ex mathematica scientia.

This reference probably corresponds to Galenī praenotiones astrologicae, a tempore decubitus, de morbi exitu, actually contained in Parisinus graecus 2139 (= [1039]), ff. 23 et seq., according to Omont 1886-1888: 2.199.

This is a copy of Hippocrates, De salubri diaeta, a text following (or: included in, according to modern authors) De natura hominis (see Jouanna 2002: 19-38).

According to Omont 1886-1888: 2.199-200, the Parisinus 2140 (= [1041]) contains (ff. 22v et seq.) De natura hominis (see also Jouanna 2002: 61, 71-72).

 This is Hippocrates, De salubri diaeta (I.22) (on which see [1042]), and De exsectione foetus, De exsectione pueri (I.31).
 The same information appears in Ackermann 1825: CXXVI, no. 13 (De exsectione foetus), without brackets, however.
 According to Omont 1886-1888: 2.201, the Parisinus 2142 (= [1045]) contains (ff. 28r et seq.) De natura hominis (which includes De salubri diaeta on which see [1042]; see also Jouanna 2002: 61, 85-86) and De exsectione infantis (ff. 441r et seq.).
 Same as [1045].
- [1047] [2142 (?)] I.23 (2), 35.
 According to Diels' catalogue, this is a copy of three Hippocratic works:
 • De affectionibus (I.23);
 • De locis in homine (I.23);
 • Praeceptiones (I.35).
 The same information (without brackets or question mark) appears in Ackermann 1825: CXXVIII, no. 15 ctd. (De affectionibus), CLIII, no. 37 ctd. (De locis in homine), and CLXVII, no. 51 (Praeceptiones).
 De affectionibus is not contained in Parisinus graecus 2142 (= [1045]; Omont 1886-1888: 2.201), but in the Parisini 2140-2141 (= [1041] and [1043]), 2143-2145 (= [1048], [1051] and [1053]) and 2148 (= [1061]).
 Similarly, De locis in homine is not in Parisinus 2142, but in Parisinus 2146 (= [1055]), ff. 228v et seq. (Joly 1978: 33, and also Omont 1886-1888: 2.204, where it is entitled De partibus corporis humani).
 Parisinus 2142 (= [1045]) contains (ff. 292v et seq.) Praenotiones, and (ff. 442 et seq.) Praedictorum libri II (Omont 1886-1888: 2.201). According to Diels I.35, Praeceptiones appears in Parisini 2140-2141 (= [1041] and [1043]), 2143-2145 (= [1048], [1051] and [1053]), and 2255 (= [1190]).

 This is a copy of Hippocrates, De salubri diaeta (I.22) and De sterilibus (I.30).
 The same information (without brackets) appears in Ackermann 1825: CXXXVI, no. 22 ctd. (De sterilibus).

According to Omont 1886-1888: 2.204, Parisinus 2146 (= [1055]) contains, at ff. 179v et seq. De natura hominis (in which De salubri diaeta is included; see [1042] and also Jouanna 2002: 61) and, at ff. 241v et seq., De morbis mulierum libri III (= De sterilibus).

Same as [1055].

[1057]

[2146 (?)] I.23, 34, 35.

According to Diels' catalogue, this item contains the following three Hippocratic works (references to Diels' catalogue follow the titles):

- De locis in homine (I.23);
- De visu (I.34);
- De iudicationibus (I.35).

According to Omont 1886-1888: 2.204, only De locis in homine appears in Parisinus 2146 (ff. 228v et seq., under the title De partibus corporis humani) (also Joly 1978: 33).

For the other two texts, there is some confusion:

- De visu is contained, among others, in Parisinus 2140 (= [1041]), ff. 171v et seq. (Omont 1886-1888: 2.199-200). This may be the intended reference;
- De iudicationibus (= De crisibus), which is not contained in Parisinus 2146, may have been confused with De diebus criticis (= De diebus iudicatoriis), which is in Parisinus 2146, at ff. 321 et seq. (Omont 1886-1888: 2.203-204). The manuscript Parisinus 2146 (= [1055]) appears in the list of the witnesses of De diebus iudicatoriis in Diels' catalogue (I.35).

The information about De visu may come from Ackermann 1825: CXXX, no. 17 ctd. (without brackets or question mark).

2147 I.13, 21, 22, 28, 29, 150; II.98.

[1059]

[2147] I.22.

This is a copy of Hippocrates, De salubri diaeta (on this text, see [1042]).

While Omont 1886-1888: 2.204, does not list this text in Parisinus 2147, the manuscript does contain, at ff. 6r-23r, De natura hominis (in which De salubri diaeta is included; see [1042]). See Jouanna 2002: 62, 89-90.

Same as [1058].

[1060]

[2147 (?)] I.28.

This is a copy of Hippocrates, De genitura.

The same information appears in Ackermann 1825: CLIX, no. 44 ctd. (without brackets or question mark).

While Omont 1886-1888: 2.204, lists this manuscript as containing, at ff. 1r et seq., De natura pueri identified as "Hippocratis, vel Polybii, liber de natura pueri", in fact the manuscript contains extracts from both De genitura and De natura pueri (Giorgianni 2006: 82).

Same as [1058].

- [1062] [2148] I.13, 24 (2), 26, 34, 35.

This manuscript is listed among the copies of the following six Hippocratic treatises (listed here in the order of Diels' catalogue; references to Diels' catalogue follow the titles):

- Aphorismi (I.13);
- De haemorroïdibus (I.24);
- De morbo sacro (I.24);
- De insomniis (I.26);
- De visu (I.34);
- De diebus iudicatoriis (I.35).

None of these works appears in the Parisinus graecus 2148 according to Omont 1886-1888: 2.204 (description of manuscript) and Omont 1898: 89-90, sub nomine Hippocrates (see also Magdelaine 1994 for the Aphorismi, for example).

Similar information about the Aphorismi appears in Ackermann 1825: LXIV.

Assuming that all these works were in the same manuscript, the shelfmark 2148 probably results from a mistake, possibly for Parisinus graecus 2143 (= [1048]), which contains all the treatises mentioned here (see Omont 1886-1888: 2.201-202):

- (ff. 71v-76v) De morbo sacro;
- (ff. 155v-158) De insomniis;
- (ff. 158-159) De visu;
- (ff. 159-160v) De diebus decretoriis;
- (ff. 160v-169) Aphorismi;
- (ff. 314-315) De haemorrhoidibus.

- [1064] 2149 (?) I.24.

This manuscript contains Hippocrates, De ulceribus. It is mentioned in Littré 1839-1861: 6.398.

Although the text is not listed in Omont 1886-1888: 2.204-205, it is present in the manuscript (f. 176v), though only as a fragment (Duminil 1998: 26).

- [1067] [2151 (?)] I.111.
 This manuscript is listed among the copies of Galenus, Definitiones medicae.
 The same information (without brackets or question mark) appears in Ackermann 1821: CLIX, no. 102.
 According to Omont 1886-1888: 2.205, this manuscript does not contain this text.
 This seems to be a mistake. According to Omont 1898: 67 sub nomine Galenus, sub titulo, Definitiones medicae are contained only in the following Parisini graeci:
- 2167 (= [1088]);
 - 2175 (= [1099]);
 - 2282 (= [1229]).

 Hippocrates, Aphorismi is not in Parisinus graecus 2154 (see Omont 1886-1888: 2.206; it is not listed in Magdelaine 1994: 88-90).
 This manuscript is listed among the copies of the Aphorismi in Ackermann 1825: LXIV (without brackets).
 The incorrect information here could refer to two different Parisini that contain the work:
- 2144 (= [1051]), ff. 188r-208r (Omont 1886-1888: 2.202-203; Magdelaine 1994: 89);
 - 2145 (= [1053]), ff. 255r-268v (Omont 1886-1888: 2.203-204; Magdelaine 1994: 89).
- [1072] 2155 I.33, 68, 80, 89, 98, 131, 149; II.40, 101.
 Omont 1886-1888: 2.206.
- [1073] 2156 I.80, 96, 98, 101, 111, 126.
 Omont 1886-1888: 2.206.
- [1074] [2156 (?)] I.93.
 This manuscript does not contain Galenus, Ad Glauconem de medendi methodo (see Omont 1886-1888: 2.206), contrary to Diels' catalogue and Ackermann 1821: CXXIX, no. 57 (without brackets or question mark).

Omont 1898: 67 sub nomine Galenus, sub titulo, lists the manuscript among the copies of the work, although he does not mention the work in the description of the content of the manuscript.

This seems to be a mistake (misreading) for any other Parisinus containing Galen's treatise, possibly 2166 (= [1087]), ff. 1r-34v (Omont 1886-1888: 2.208).

[1075] 2157 I.78, 79 (2), 80, 85, 92, 93, 96.

Omont 1886-1888: 2.206-207.

Possibly [1100].

[1076] [2157 (?)] I.80, 87, 88, 89.

This codex is considered to contain four Galenic treatises (listed here in the order of Diels' catalogue; references to Diels' catalogue follow the titles):

- De differentiis februm (I.80);
- De pulsuum differentiis (I.87);
- De dignoscendis pulsibus (I.88);
- De praesagitione ex pulsibus (I.89).

According to Omont 1886-1888: 2.206-207, Parisinus 2157 (= [1075]) does not contain any of these treatises. All of them appear, instead, in the Parisinus graecus 2167 (= [1088]) (see Omont 1886-1888: 2. 208-209):

- (ff. 188r et seq.) De differentiis februm;
- (ff. 287r et seq.) De pulsuum differentiis;
- (ff. 303r et seq.) De dignoscendis pulsibus;
- (ff. 387r et seq.) De praesagitione ex pulsibus.

The mistake may come from Ackermann 1821 (where there are no brackets and question mark, however):

- CI, no. 2 ctd. (De februm differentiis);
- CV, no. 40 (the corpus of sphygmological treatises).

See Gundert 2009: 33-34.

This codex is listed among the copies of Galenus, De dignoscendis pulsibus.

The same information appears in Ackermann 1821: CV, no. 40 ctd. (without brackets or question mark).

According to Omont 1886-1888: 2.207, this Parisinus (= [1077]) does not contain the Galenic treatise.

This could result from confusion with Parisinus 2153 (= [1069]), which contains the treatise at ff. 81r et seq. (Omont 1886-1888: 2.205).

Possibly same as [1069].

 This is a mistake, possibly for 2260 (= [1198]), which contains the work at ff. 196r et seq. (Omont 1886-1888: 2.225-226).

[1089] [2167 (?)] I.98.

This manuscript is listed as a copy of Galenus, De compositione medicamentorum secundum locos.

The information comes from Ackermann 1821: CXXIV, no. 54 ctd. (without brackets or question mark).

According to Omont 1886-1888: 2.208-209, this Parisinus does not contain such a text.

This is a mistake for one of the Parisini that contain the treatise, possibly 2164 (= [1085]), ff. 259r et seq. (Omont 1886-1888: 2.207-208).

[1090] 2168 I.5, 13, 103, 105, 107.

Omont 1886-1888: 2.209.

[1091] 2169 I.61, 78, 79 (2), 80, 92.

Omont 1886-1888: 2.209.

[1092] [2169 (?)] I.59, 101.

This item is listed among the copies of Galenus, Quod optimus medicus sit etiam philosophus (I.59), and Introductio sive medicus (I.101).

Contrary to Diels' catalogue, Parisinus 2169 (= [1091]) does not contain such treatises (Omont 1886-1888: 2.209).

The treatise Quod optimus medicus sit etiam philosophus, is not listed in Boudon-Millot 2007: 251 (see also ibid., n32 where Boudon points out the mistake in Diels' catalogue).

As for the Introductio, the manuscript is not listed in Petit 2009: LXXXII-LXXXIII (who does not mention this Parisinus on p. LXXXII, n125, where she points out the manuscripts erroneously listed in Diels as containing the Introductio).

More than one manuscript may have been confused. At the Bibliothèque nationale de France, Quod optimus medicus sit etiam philosophus seems to appear only in Parisinus graecus 2164 (= [1085]) according to Omont 1898: 67, sub nomine Galenus, sub titulo (see also Boudon-Millot 2007: 251). This Parisinus is probably the one mistakenly referred to here for this treatise. The mistake is present in Ackermann 1821: LXXI, no. 5 (without brackets or question mark, however).

The Introductio can be found in several of the manuscripts in Paris (Omont 1898: 67, sub nomine Galenus, sub titulo; see also Petit 2009: LXXXII-LXXXIII), except in manuscript 2164. The mistake may result from a misreading of 2160 (= [1080]), which contains the text at ff. 220r-247r (Petit 2009: LXXXVIII). It comes from Ackermann 1821: CXLVIII, no. 83 (without brackets or question mark).

- [1094] [2170 (?)] I.81, 82.
 This manuscript is listed among the copies of Galenus, De totius morbi temporibus (I.81) and De typis (I.82).
 This information comes from Ackermann 1821: CLI, no. 91, and CLI-CLII, no. 92 (De totius morbi temporibus and De typis, respectively), in both case without brackets or question mark.
 According to Omont 1886-1888: 2.209, De totius morbi temporibus is not contained in Parisinus 2170, but rather in 2270 (= [1212]), at ff. 71r-84v.
De typis does not appear in the codex either. This text has been confused with Adversus eos qui de typis scripserunt, actually present in Parisinus graecus 2170 (= [1093]) (ff. 248r et seq.) and correctly listed in Diels' catalogue (I.82).

 This manuscript is listed among the copies of Galenus, Ars medica.
 Contrary to Diels' catalogue and to Ackermann 1821: CXV, no. 50 ctd. (without brackets or question mark), the Parisinus 2175 (= [1099]) does not contain this treatise (see Omont 1886-1888: 2.209, and also Boudon 2002: 197n109).
 The manuscript listed here must be one of the several copies of the work in the collections of the Bibliothèque nationale de France (see Omont 1898: 66, sub nomine Galenus, sub titulo, and Boudon 2002: 197-200), perhaps graecus 2157 (= [1075]), which contains, at f. 424v, a fragment of the treatise (Omout 1886-1888: 2.206-207; Boudon 2002: 200).

[1133]	2208	II.3, 74, 77. Omont 1886-1888: 2.214.
[1134]	[2208 (?)]	I.114. This manuscript (= [1133]) is thought to contain Galenus, De succedaneis , which is not the case (Omont 1886-1888: 2.214). The same information (without brackets or question mark) appears in Ackermann 1821: CLXX, no. 138: "... excerpta ex eod. n. 2208". Number 2208 could be a misreading of 2238 (= [1165]) (Omont 1886-1888: 2.219), since this manuscript contains the treatise at ff. 593r et seq.

- [1155] [2229 (?)] I.19, 41.
 This item is listed among the copies of Hippocrates, De morbis popularibus II, IV-VII (fragm.) (I.19) and Epistula ad Ptolemaeum regem de sanitate tuenda (I.41).
 The manuscript is mentioned in Ackermann 1825: CLXXIV (Epistula ad Ptolemaeum regem de sanitate tuenda) (without brackets or question mark).
 According to Omont 1886-1888: 2.217-218, the Parisinus 2229 (= [1154]) does not contain De morbis popularibus, whereas it has the Epistula, sub nomine Hippocratis, vel Dioclis (f. 25r) (see also CCAG VIII. 1 [Cumont] 1929: 8).
 The manuscript referred to as containing De morbis popularibus cannot be identified (for the list of the manuscripts of Epidemiae V and VI, see Jouanna and Grmek 2000: XC-XCII).
- [1156] 2230 I.118; II.6, 9; N.37.
 Omont 1886-1888: 2.218.
 Also [1157].
- [1157] [2230] I.126, 133.
 According to Diels' catalogue, this is a copy of Galenus, De morbis excerpta (I.126) and Remedia (I.133).
 While no text explicitly identified as such appears in Parisinus 2230 according to Omont 1886-1888: 2.218, the two references in Diels' catalogue may refer to the following texts contained in the manuscript:
- ff. 120r et seq., Galenī liber de diaeta et morbis curandis (Omōnt, ibid. on this text, see Costomiris 1889: 375-365, 377);
 - ff. 37r et seq., Collectio ex Galenī libro de simplicum medicamentorum (see Costomiris 1889: 377).
- Same as [1156].
- 2231 (ff. 1r et seq.) Symeon Seth, De alimentorum facultatibus.
 Omont 1886-1888: 2.218.
- [1158] 2232 I.92; II.109 (2).
 Omont 1886-1888: 2.218.
- [1159] [2232] I.26.
 This manuscript is listed among the copies of Hippocrates, De morbis II and III.
 According to Omont 1886-1888: 2.218, the Parisinus 2232 does not contain these works.
 The manuscript referred to here must be one of the other Parisini that do contain the works (see Omont 1898: 90, sub nomine Hippocrates, sub titulo), possibly 2332 (= [1276]) listed in Littré 1839-1861: 7.6 (De morbis II) and 7.115 (De morbis III).
 The description of this manuscript in Omont 1886-1888: 2.243 mentions "Hippocratis variorum librorum excerpta".

The identification of this item as Parisinus 2332 is all the more probable because in Diels' catalogue, number 2232 (falso pro 2332) is listed between 2255 and 2545, and probably results from a typo.

This manuscript is listed as a copy of Hippocrates, De mulierum affectibus . The same information (without brackets or question mark) appears in Ackermann 1825: CXXXIV, no. 19 ctd.

The codex Parisinus graecus 2242 does not contain such a work (Omont 1886-1888: 2.220), but it does contain Georgius Sanginatus, consul Romanorum et comes, Liber de pulsibus .

This may be a mistake for 2142 (= [1045]), which does contain the treatise at ff. 351r et seq. (Omont 1886-1888: 2.201). |

| [1171] | [2245 (?)] | I. 107.

This manuscript is thought to contain Galenus, De fasciis . |

The Parisinus 2245 does not contain such a text, but it does contain “Hippiatricum, ex variis auctoribus ...; De ponderibus et mensuris in rebus hippiatricis; Orneosophium ...”, according to Omont 1886-1888: 2.221).

This information, which appears in Ackermann 1821: CLVII, no. 100 (without brackets or question mark), cannot be explained.

According to Omont 1898: 67, sub nomine Galenus, sub titulo, the only manuscript in the collections of the Bibliothèque nationale de France containing this work is Parisinus graecus 2383 (= [1284]).

Perhaps this is a mistake (misreading) for Parisinus graecus 2247 (= [1173]), ff. 237r-251r, or 2248 (= [1176]), ff. 324v-339v, both of which contain the treatise De fasciis by Soranus (Ilberg 1927: XII, and Marchetti 2010: 87-88 and 95-87 for the Parisini 2247 and 2248 respectively).

Omout 1886-1888: 2.221.

See also [1171], [1174] and [1175].

[1174] [2247] I.34.

This item is a copy of Hippocrates, De ossium natura.

Although Omont 1886-1888: 2.221 does not mention this text, the Parisinus 2247 does contain it (see Duminil 1998: 118, and Marchetti 2010: 87-88).

Same as [1173].

[1175] [2247 (?)] I.107.

According to Diels' catalogue, this is a copy of Galenus, De fasciis.

The same information appears in Ackermann 1821: CLVII, no. 100 (without brackets or question mark).

The Parisinus 2247 does not contain such work (Omout 1886-1888: 2.221), which, according to Omont 1898: 67, sub nomine Galenus, sub titulo, is contained, among the manuscripts of the Bibliothèque nationale de France, only in Parisinus 2383 (= [1284]).

However, the Parisinus graecus 2247 contains, at ff. 237r-251r, a treatise De fasciis by Soranus (Ilberg 1927: XII; Marchetti 2010: 87-88).

Same as [1173].

[1176] 2248 I.10, 11 (3), 12, 106; II.15, 37, 71, 89.

Omout 1886-1888: 2.221.

Also [1171], [1177] and [1178].

[1177] 2248 (?) I.107.

This manuscript is thought to contain Galenus, De fasciis, which is not the case (see Omont 1886-1888: 2.221).

According to Omont 1898: 67, sub nomine Galenus, sub titulo, among the manuscripts of the Bibliothèque nationale de France, this treatise is contained, only in Parisinus 2383 (= [1284]).

However, Parisinus 2248 (= [1176]) contains (ff. 324v-339v) De fasciis by Soranus, which might be the intended reference (Ilberg 1927: XII; Marchetti 2010: 85-87).

See Ihm 2002: 64-65, no. 13, 179, no. 192, 251, no. 300.

[1178] [2248] I.34.

This is a copy of Hippocrates, De ossium natura.

Although this text is not listed in Omont 1886-1888: 2.221, the Parisinus 2248 does contain this work at ff. 128r-134r (Duminil 1998: 118; Marchetti 2010: 85-87).

Same as [1176].

[1179] 2249 II.111, 112 (3).

Omout 1886-1888: 2.221-222; CMAG I (Lebègue) 1924: 101-115.

[1180] [2250] I.13.

This manuscript is listed among the copies of Hippocrates, Aphorismi.

The codex is listed in Ackermann 1825: LXIV (without brackets).

Contrary to Diel's catalogue and to Ackermann, this codex does not contain the Hippocratic work (see Omont 1886-1888: 2.222, and CMAG I [Lebègue] 1924: 115-117; the manuscript does not appear in Magdelaine 1994: 88-90).

- 2256 (= [1193]), ff. 9r-23r (Omout 1886-1888: 2.224-225; Magdelaine 1994: 89);
- 2258 (= [1196]), ff. 1r-32r (Omout 1886-1888: 2.225; Magdelaine 1994: 89);
- 2259 (= [1197]), ff. 1r-56v (Omout 1886-1888: 2.225; Magdelaine 1994: 89).

[1181] 2251 II.112.

Omout 1886-1888: 2.222; CMAG I (Lebègue) 1924: 117-125.

[1182] 2252 II.111, 112.

Omout 1886-1888: 2.222-223; CMAG I (Lebègue) 1924: 125-129.

[1183] [2252 (?)] I.111.

This manuscript is listed among the copies of Galenus, Definitiones medicae.

According to Omont 1886-1888: 2.222-223, this codex contains a wide range of alchemical treatises.

This information, which appears in Ackermann 1821: CLIX, no. 102 (without brackets or question mark), probably results from a misreading of the shelfmark of another of the Parisini that contain this work, possibly 2282 (= [1229]), ff. 53v et seq. (Omout 1886-1888: 2.229).

- [1184] 2253 I.4, 5, 8, 10, 20, 21 (2), 22 (2), 23, 33, 38, 40, 68; II.113.

 Formerly [1736].
 Also [1185] and [1186].
- [1185] [2253] I.22.
 This codex is listed among the copies of Hippocrates, De salubri diaeta (on this treatise, see [1042]).
 According to Omont 1886-1888: 2.223, the Parisinus 2253 contains (ff. 81r et seq.) De natura hominis in which the text is included (see [1042]; see also Jouanna 2002: 61, 64-66).
 Same as [1184].
- [1186] [2253 (?)] I.20, 33.
 This item is listed among the copies of Hippocrates, Praesagiorum liber I (I.20) and Liber II (I.33).
 The same information appears in Ackermann 1825: LVIII (without brackets or question mark).
 According to Omont 1886-1888: 2.223, this text is not in this manuscript which contains some Hippocratic treatises (Praenotiones, De alimento, De victu in morbis acutis, De humoribus, De humidorum usu, De arte, De natura hominis, De flatibus, De partibus corporis humani, De veteri medicina, De morbis popularibus), in addition to Thessalus, Oratio ad Athenienses, and Galenus, De usu partium.
 Unless there is confusion with Praenotiones, which can be read in Parisinus 2253 (= [1184]), ff. 1r et seq. (ibid.), this seems to be a mistake for any other Parisinus containing Praesagiorum libri II (see Omont 1898: 90, sub nomine Hippocrates, sub titulo), possibly 2254 (= [1187]), ff. 207v et seq. (Omont 1886-1888: 2.223-224).

 See [1185]. Possibly also [1186].
- [1188] [2254] I.4, 5.
 This manuscript is listed among the copies of the Hippocratic treatises De aëre, aquis et locis (I.4) and Prognosticon (I.5).
 The codex is listed (without brackets) in Ackermann 1825: XLVIII (Prognosticon) and CIII (De aere, aquis et locis).
 Neither work appears in this manuscript (Omont 1886-1888: 2.223-224; Diller 1932: 9; Diller 1970: 7, and Jouanna 1996: 83-84 do not mention it for De aëre, aquis et locis, and Alexanderson 1963 does not either for Prognosticon).
 The manuscript referred to here may be Parisinus 2255 (= [1190]), which contains both works (see Omont 1886-1888: 2.224; also Diller 1932: 9; Diller 1970: 7, and Jouanna 1996: 84 for De aëre, aquis et locis, and Alexanderson 1963: 82-83 for Prognosticon).

This manuscript appears in the list of codices containing the following Hippocratic treatises (alphabetical order of titles; references to Diels' catalogue follow the titles): De affectionibus (I.23); De anatome (I.31); De arte (I.21); De articulis (I.12); De capitis vulneribus (I.10); De carnibus (I.32); De corde (I.33); De decenti ornatu (I.35); De dentitione (I.32); De diebus iudicatoriis (I.35); De genitura (I.28); De glandulis (I.32); De humoribus (I.20); De humidorum usu (I.22); De insomniis (I.26); De internis affectionibus (I.27); De iudicationibus (I.35); De locis in homine (I.23); De morbis I (I.23); De morbis II & III (I.26); De morbis IV (I.29); De natura pueri (I.29); De ulceribus (I.24); De victus ratione I-III (I.25); De visu (I.34); Iusiurandum (I.18); Lex (I.18); Praeceptiones (I.35).

Except for De internis affectionibus, Parisinus 2254 is listed (without brackets or question mark) in Ackermann 1825 among the manuscripts of the following treatises: De affectionibus: CXXVIII, no. 15 ctd.; De anatome: CXXVII, no. 14 ctd.; De arte: CLXIX, no. 53; De articulis: CXXII, no. 8; De capitis vulneribus: CVI, no. XXIV ctd.; De carnibus: CLV, no. 40; De corde: CLVI, no. 41; De decenti ornatu: CLXVI, no. 50; De dentitione: CXLI, no. 31; De diebus iudicatoriis: CXVIII, no. 5; De genitura: CLVII, no. 43; De glandulis: CXLI, no. 30; De humoribus: CXVI, no. 3 ctd.; De humidorum usu: CXL, no. 28 ctd.; De insomniis: CXLIV, no. 33; De iudicationibus: CXVII, no. 4; De locis in homine: CLIII, no. 37 ctd.; De morbis I, De morbis II & III and De morbis IV: CXXXIII, no. 18 ctd.; De natura pueri: CLIX, no. 44; De ulceribus: CXXIV, no. 10 ctd.; De victus ratione I-III: CXLIII, no. 32 ctd.; De visu: CXXX, no. 17 ctd.; Iusiurandum: CLXII, no. 47 ctd.; Lex: CLXV, no. 48 ctd.; Praeceptiones: CLXVII, no. 51.

The manuscript Paris graecus 2254 does not contain any of these works, which are contained, instead, in Parisinus graecus 2255 (= [1190]) mentioned in Diels' catalogue for the following treatises (Omont 1886-1888: 2. 224, some with a variant title) (references to Diels' catalogue follow the titles):

(ff. 265v et seq.) De affectionibus (see I.23); (ff. 369v et seq.) De anatome (see I.31); (ff. 57r et seq.) De arte (see I.21); (ff. 449v et seq.) De articulis (see I.12); (ff. 389v et seq.) De capitis vulneribus (see I.10); (ff. 367v et sq.) De carnibus (see I.32); (ff. 370r et seq.) De corde (see I.33); (ff. 86v et seq.) De decenti ornatu (under the title De medici decoro) (see I.35); (ff. 369v et seq.) De dentitione (under the title De dentibus) (see I.32); (ff. 363r et seq.) De diebus iudicatoriis (under the title De diebus criticis) (I.35); (ff. 101r et seq.) De genitura (see I.28); (ff. 371r et seq.) De glandulis (see I.32); (ff. 165r et seq.) De humoribus (see I.20); (ff. 378v et seq.) De humidorum usu (see I.22); (ff. 356v et seq.) De insomniis (see I.26); (ff. 281v et seq.) De internis affectionibus (see I.27); (ff. 379v et seq.) De iudicationibus (under the title De crisis) (I.35); (ff. 371v et seq.) De locis in homine (under the title De partibus corporis humani) (see I.23); (ff. 191r et seq.) De morbis I-IV (see I.23 [I], 26 [II-III] and 29 [IV]); (ff. 104v et seq.) De natura pueri (see I.29); (ff. 173v et seq.) De ulceribus (see I.24); (ff. 316r et seq.) De victus ratione I-III (under the title De diaeta libri III) (see I.25);

This is a copy of Hippocrates, De salubri diaeta (on this treatise, see [1042]).

According to Omout 1886-1888: 2.224, Parisinus 2255 (= [1190]) contains (ff. 90r et seq.) De natura hominis in which De salubri diaeta is included (Jouanna 2002: 61).

Same as [1190].

- [1192] [2255 (?)] I.23, 35.

This manuscript is referred to for Hippocrates, De locis in homine (I.23) and De decenti ornatu (I.35).

This manuscript is mentioned in Littré 1839-1861: 6.274 for De locis in homine, and 9.224 for De decenti ornatu (without brackets or question mark in both cases).

In Omout 1886-1888: 2.224, these treatises appear under the following titles in the description of Parisinus graecus 2255: De partibus corporis humani (ff. 371v et seq.) and De medici decoro (ff. 86 v et seq.). These titles reproduce those of the catalogue of the Bibliotheca Regia 1740: 2.471-472, no. MMCCLV (= 2255).

Same as [1190].

- [1195] [2257 (?)] I.31.

This manuscript is listed among the copies of Hippocrates, De exsectione foetus. De exsectione pueri.

The same information (without brackets or question mark) appears in Ackermann 1825: CXXVI, no. 13.

This manuscript does not contain this work, but it does contain the following works (listed here in the order of the folios according to Omout 1886-1888: 2.225): (ff. 1r et seq.) Hippocrates, Aphorismi et Galeni commentarius in eosdem; (ff. 129r et seq.) Galenus, Commentarius in Hippocratis Praenotiones; (ff. 230v et seq.) De balnei utilitate; (ff. 231r et seq.) Gregorius Thaumaturgus, De anima; (ff. 239r et seq.) Meletius, De natura hominis; (ff. 327v et seq.) Aristoteles, De mundo; (ff. 345r et seq.) Theophilus, De urinis; (ff. 359v et seq.) Liber de pulsibus; (ff. 363v et seq.) Theophilus, De pulsibus.

This could be a mistake (misreading) for Parisinus 2254 (= [1187]), where De exsectione foetus. De exsectione pueri can be found.

This manuscript is listed among the copies of Galenus, Methodi medendi libri XIV .
The same information appears in Ackermann 1821: CXXVI, no. 56 (without brackets or question mark).
According to Omont 1886-1888: 2.226, this manuscript does not contain the treatise. The reference here is a mistake (misreading), probably for 2162 (= [1083]), which actually contains the treatise on ff. 1 et seq., and appears among the copies of the treatise in Diels' catalogue. |

This item is listed among the copies of Hippocrates, Praesagiorum libri II . |

The information comes from Ackermann 1825: LVIII (without brackets or question mark).

The Parisinus graecus 2266 (= [1205]) does not contain the Hippocratic treatise, but it does contain, at ff. 1r et seq., Galenus, In Hippocratis praenotiones commentariorum libri III (Omont 1886-1888: 2.226).

The present information may also result from a mistake (misreading) for another Parisinus containing the work, possibly 2256 (= [1193]), ff. 23r et seq. (Omont 1886-1888: 2.224-225). It might be significant that 2256 is not listed in Diels I.20 or I.33.

Also [1211]. Possibly [1210] and [1216].

[1210] [2269] I.56.

This item is a copy of Hippocrates, Excerpta not better identified.

The same information is found in Ackermann 1825: CLXXVIII, sub titulo Alia excerpta ex Hippocrate.

According to Omont 1886-1888: 2.227, this manuscript (= [1209]) contains (f. 94r et seq.) excerpta de urinis, and (f. 126r et seq.) excerpta de eodem (scilicet de venae sectione) attributed to Hippocrates (et alii). This may correspond to the text referred to in Diels' catalogue.

Possibly same as [1209].

[1211] [2269 (?)] I.20, 33, 82, 113.

The texts referred to here are (listed here in the order of Diels' catalogue; references to Diels' catalogue follow the titles):

- Hippocrates, Praesagiorum liber I and II (I.20 and 33);
- Galenus, De typis (I.82);
- De urinis ex Hippocrate, Galeno aliisque quibusdam (I.113).

According to Omont 1886-1888: 2.227, the Parisinus 2269 (= [1209]) does not contain Hippocrates, Praesagia, but rather (in the order of the folios according to Omont): (ff. 68r et seq.) Hippocrates, Praenotiones; (ff. 94r et seq.) Hippocratis, etc. excerpta de urinis; (ff. 128r et seq.) Galenii liber II. de praesagitione ex urinis.

De typis is not contained in the manuscript. The mistake comes from Ackermann 1821: CLI-CLII, no. 92 (without brackets or question mark) and cannot be explained.

[1212] 2270 I.61, 68, 73, 81, 82, 96, 101, 118, 129; II.6, 109.

Omout 1886-1888: 2.227; 3.397.

Also [1094] and possibly [1216].

[1213] [2270 (?)] I.93.

This codex is listed among the copies of Galenus, Ad Glauconem de medendi methodo, although this treatise does not seem to be contained in the Parisinus 2270 (= [1212]) (Omout 1886-1888: 2.227).

This information comes from Ackermann 1821: CXXIX, no. 57 (without brackets or question mark).

According to Omout 1898: 67, sub nomine Galenus, sub titulo, the work appears, instead, in the following Parisini graeci:

- 2156 (= [1073]);
- 2157 (= [1075]);
- 2158 (= [1077]);
- 2166 (= [1087]);
- 2260 (= [1198]);
- 2265 (= [1204]);
- 2269 (= [1209]);
- 2304 (= [1252]);
- 2308 (= [1257]).

The manuscript referred to here has been confused with one these items, possibly with 2260 (= [1198]).

[1214] 2271 I.61, 68, 73, 81, 82, 96, 101.

Omout 1886-1888: 2.227.

Possibly [1216].

[1215] 2272 I.80, 89, 91.

Omout 1886-1888: 2.228.

See [1216].

[1216] [2272 (?)] I.81, 82.

This codex is listed among the copies of Galenus, De totius morbi temporibus (I.81) and De typis (I.82).

The information on both works comes from Ackermann 1821: CLI (De totius morbi temporibus) and CLI-CLII (De typis) (without brackets or question mark in both references).

De totius morbi temporibus is not in Parisinus graecus 2272 (= [1215]) (see Omout 1886-1888: 2.228).

This item has probably been confused with one of the two Parisini that contain it according to Omout 1898: 68, sub nomine Galenus, sub titulo:

- 2269 (= [1209]), ff. 183r et seq. (Omout 1886-1888: 2.227);
- 2270 (= [1212]), ff. 71r et seq. (ibid.).

The text referred to here may also have been confused with De morborum temporibus contained in Parisinus 2271 (= [1214]), at ff. 75r et seq. (Omont 1886-1888: 2.227), unless it is an incorrect reference to De crisibus contained in Parisinus 2272 (= [1215]) (ff. 41r et seq.) (Omont 1886-1888: 2.228).

De typis is not contained in the manuscript either. This mistake, which also appears in Ackermann 1821 (above), results from some confusion that cannot be explained. It might be significant, however, that both treatises are mentioned on the same page in Ackermann 1821.

Four sphygmological treatises by Galen are referred to here (listed below in the order of Diels' catalogue; references to Diels' catalogue follow the titles):

- De pulsuum differentiis (I.87);
- De causis pulsuum (I.88);
- De dignoscendis pulsibus (I.88);
- De praesagitione ex pulsibus (I.89).

Similar information appears in Ackermann 1821: CV, no. 40 ctd. (without brackets or question mark, however).

None of Galen's sphygmological treatises are contained in Parisinus 2276 (= [1220]), according to Omont 1886-1888: 2.228.

Nevertheless, this Parisinus contains, according to Omont, ibid., a letter by Galen on the topic of sphygmology (Ad Teuthram epistola de pulsibus [ff. 199r et seq.]), which may have created confusion, unless the manuscript referred to here is either Parisini 2161 (= [1082]) or 2167 (= [1088]), both of which contain Galen's sphygmological corpus.

[1224] [2278 (?)] I.61, 74.

This item is listed among the copies of Galenus, Ars medica (I.61) and De placitis Hippocratis et Platonis (I.74).

The same information appears in Ackermann 1821: CXV, no. 50 ctd. (Ars medica), and XCII, no. 26 ctd. (De placitis Hippocratis et Platonis) without brackets or question mark in both cases.

Neither work appears in Parisinus 2278 (= [1223]) (see Omont 1886-1888: 2.229; for Ars medica, see also Boudon 2002: 197n109, where the author mentions that the manuscript does not contain the text contrary to Diels' catalogue; and for De placitis Hippocratis et Platonis, see De Lacy 2005, who does not mention this manuscript).

The manuscript referred to here has been confused with another one, probably with Parisinus 2277 (= [1222]), which contains both texts (Omont 1886-1888: 2.228-229, Boudon 2002: 199, and De Lacy 2005: 28-29).

The number 2280 results probably from a misreading of number 2260 (Parisinus graecus 2260 = [1198]).

 Since no indication of folio is provided in Diels' catalogue, the text referred to seems to be (ff. 87r et seq.) Nicephorus Blemmydes, Poema de urinis, on the basis of Omont 1886-1888: 2.232-233.

Contrary to Diels' catalogue, the Parisinus 2319 does not contain Galenus, De succedaneis (see Omont 1886-1888: 2.238).

This information, which comes from Ackermann 1821: CLXX, no. 138 (without brackets or question mark), is probably a mistake (misreading) for 2318 (= [1265]), the text of which is identified as follows in Omont's catalogue (ibid.):

Pauli Aeginetae fragmentum, ex Galeno, de succedaneis (ff. 72r et seq.).

[1297] 2545 (? = 2145 ? cf. Kühn 1.1) I.5.

This manuscript is listed among the copies of Hippocrates, Prognosticon.

The Parisinus 2545 does not contain Hippocratic treatises, but instead it contains Theodorus Gaza, Grammatica (Omont 1886-1888: 3.1). Alexanderson 1963 does not include this Parisinus in the list of the manuscripts containing the work.

As Diels' catalogue suggested (though with question marks), the information here refers to 2145 (= [1053]), where the Prognosticon can be found (ff. 268v-277v). See Alexanderson 1963: 81.

The reference is to Kühn: 1825-1827, volume 1, i.e., to the Historia literaria Hippocratis by Ackermann in Kühn 1825-1827: 1.I-CCVI.

While the volume number is correct, the page number does not correspond to any mention of a manuscript of Hippocrates, Prognosticon. The treatise is discussed on pp. XLVI–LV, with a list of its Greek manuscripts on pp. XLVII–XLVIII, where the Parisinus graecus 2545 can be found (p. XLVII), without brackets or question mark.

In Omont's catalogue (below) the treatise is entitled Praenotiones as in the ancient catalogue of the Bibliotheca Regia 1740: 2.452–453 (see 452, MMCXLV [= 2145], no. 19, for the title).

The Parisinus 2145 appears in Diels I.5 among the copies of the Prognosticon.

See Omont 1886–1888: 2.203–204, and Alexanderson 1963: 81.

Same as [1053].

[1298] [2545 (?) = 2145 ?] I.4, 11 (2), 12, 13.

The codex Parisinus 2545 appears in the list of the manuscripts containing the following five Hippocratic treatises (listed here in the order of Diels' catalogue; references to Diels' catalogue follow the titles):

- De prisca medicina (I.4)
- De fracturis (I.11);
- De officina medici (I.11);
- De articulis (I.13);
- Aphorismi (I.13).

The manuscript is quoted by Ackermann 1825 (without brackets, question marks or the possible correspondence with Parisinus 2145) among the manuscripts of these treatises (same order as above):

- De prisca medicina: CLVIII, no. 52;
- De fracturis (De fractis in Ackermann): CXXI, no. 7 ctd.;
- De officina medici: CXIX, no. 6 ctd.;
- De articulis: CXXII, no. 8;
- Aphorismi: LXIV.

The Parisinus 2545 does not contain these works, but instead it contains Theodorus Gaza, Grammatica (Omout 1886–1888: 3.1).

The manuscript referred to here is Parisinus 2145 (Omout 1886–1888: 2. 203–204) (= [1053]) as Diels' catalogue suggested, though with question marks.

The manuscript Parisinus 2545 is thought to contain the following 22 Hippocratic treatises (order of citations in Diels' catalogue; references to Diels' catalogue follow the titles): De diaeta (regimine) acutorum (I.8); Iusurandum (I.18); Lex (I.18); De humoribus (I.20); Praesagiorum liber I (I.20); Coa praesagia (I.20); De arte (I.21); De natura hominis (I.21); De flatibus (I.22); De morbis I (I.23); De morbo sacro (I.24); De victus ratione I–III (I.25); De insomniis (I.26); De morbis II et III (I.26); De natura pueri (I.29); De morbis liber IV (I.29); De sterilibus (I.30); De virginum morbis (I.30); De superfoetatione (I.31); De exsectione foetus (I.31); Praesagiorum liber II (I.33); De alimento (I.33); De visu (I.34); De ossium natura (I.34); De decenti ornatu (I.35); Praeceptiones (I.35); De diebus iudicatoriis (I.35).

It is listed in Ackermann 1825 (without brackets, question marks or the possible correspondence with Parisinus 2145) among the manuscripts of these treatises (same order as above): De diaeta (regimine) acutorum: XCIX; Iusurandum: CLXII, no. 47 ctd.; Lex: CLXV, no. 48 ctd.; De humoribus: CXVI, no. 3 ctd.; Praesagiorum liber I: LVIII; Coa praesagia: CXIV, no. 2 ctd.; De arte: CLXIX, no. 53; De natura hominis: CXLVII, no. 34 ctd.; De flatibus: CXL, no. 29; De morbis I: CXXXIII, no. 18 ctd.; De morbo sacro: CXXXVII, no. 24 ctd.; De victus ratione I-III: CXLIII, no. 32 ctd.; De insomniis: CXLIV, no. 33; De morbis II et III: CXXXIII, no. 18 ctd.; De natura pueri: CLIX, no. 44 ctd.; De morbis liber IV: CXXXIII, no. 18 ctd.; De sterilibus: CXXXVI, no. 22 ctd.; De virginum morbis: CXXXV, no. 20 ctd.; De superfoetatione: CXXXVI, no. 23; De exsectione foetus: CXXVI, no. 13; Praesagiorum liber II: LVIII; De alimento: CL, no. 35 ctd.; De visu: CXXX, no. 17 ctd.; De ossium natura: CLIV, no. 38 ctd.; De decenti ornatu: CLXVI, no. 50; Praeceptiones: CLXVII, no. 51; De diebus iudicatoriis: CXVIII, no. 5.

None of these works appears in Parisinus 2545, which contains Theodorus Gaza, Grammatica (Omont 1886-1888: 3.1).

As Diels' catalogue suggested (though with a question mark), these texts can be found in Parisinus 2145 (= [1053]) (Omont 1886-1888: 2. 203-204).

[1300] [2546 (? = 2146 ?)] I.27, 28.

This manuscript is listed among the copies of Hippocrates, De septimestri partu (I.27) and De octimestri partu (I.28).

The Parisinus 2546 is listed in Ackermann 1825: CLX, no. 46, among the manuscripts of De octimestri partu (without brackets, question marks or the possible correspondence with Parisinus 2146).

The manuscript does not contain these two works, but instead it contains grammatical works, and Excerpta e canonibus SS. Apostolorum et conciliorum, SS. Basilii et Joannis Chrysostomi (Omont 1886-1888: 3.2).

The two Hippocratic treatises can be found instead in the following Parisini:

- 2140 (= [1041]; Omont 1886-1888: 2.199-200);
- 2141 (= [1043]; ibid.: 2. 200-201);
- 2142 (= [1045]; ibid.: 2. 201);
- 2143 (= [1048]; ibid.: 2.201-202);
- 2144 (= [1051]; ibid.: 2.202-203);
- 2145 (= [1053]; ibid.: 2.203-204);
- 2146 (= [1055]; ibid.: 2.204);
- 2254 (= [1187]; ibid.: 2.223-224).

It is probable that the present reference is to Parisinus 2146 (= [1055]) as Diels' catalogue indicates, though with question marks. See Grensemann 1968: 14.

[1301] [2548 (?)] I.30.

This codex is listed among the copies of Hippocrates, De mulierum affectibus.

The same information (without brackets or question mark) appears in Ackermann 1825: CXXXIV, no. 19 ctd.

This manuscript does not contain the work (Omont 1886-1888: 3.2), which appears, instead, in the Parisini 2140-2146 (= [1041], [1043], [1045], [1048], [1051], [1053], [1055]) and in 2254 (= [1187]).

The manuscript referred to here cannot be identified.

This manuscript is listed among the copies of Galenus, De antidotis libri II.

According to Omont 1886-1888: 3.22, Parisinus 2664 contains an anonymous lexicon.

This manuscript may have been confused with another of the Parisini containing Galen's work (see Omont 1898: 66, sub nomine Galenus, sub titulo), possibly 2164 (= [1085]), which is listed in Ackermann 1821: CXLVII, no. 81.

It might be significant that Parisinus 2164 is not listed in Diels I.99 among the manuscripts of De antidotis.

These glosses are not Theophilus' commentary (Ead., contrary to Ihm 2002: 213-216, no. 257 [especially 215]).
 Same as [1310].

[1312] [2682 (?)] II.17, 18 (2), 19.
 This item is supposed to be a copy of Aretaeus.
 Parisinus 2682 contains the Ilias with some other related texts (Omont 1886-1888: 3.25).
 The shelfmark here is probably a mistake for that of one of the Parisini that actually contain Aretaeus and cannot be identified. See Hude 1958: VII-X:

 - 2186 (= [1111]; Omont 1886-1888: 2.211);

[1313] [2699 (?)] I.41.
 This codex is supposed to contain Hippocrates, Epistula ad Ptolemaeum regem de sanitate tuenda.
 Manuscrit Parisinus 2699 contains Eustathii Thessalonicensis commentarius in Homeri Iliadis libros XIV-XIX (Omont 1886-1888: 3.27).
 Number 2699 appears in the catalogue of the Bibliotheca Regia published by Montfaucon 1739: 2.724-743. Its description (ibid.: 2.735) includes "Hippocratis, vel Alexandri Medici Epistola de Diaeta".
 According to Omont 1898: LXXII, number 2699 in the Bibliotheca Regia corresponds to current 2240 (= [1167]), which contains the Hippocratic letter and is mentioned in Diels' catalogue in the same paragraph as the present item.

- [1319] [2828 (? = 2228 ?)] I.5.
This is supposed to be Hippocrates, Prognosticon.
The same information (without brackets, question mark or the possible equivalence with Parisinus 2228) appears in Ackermann 1825: XLVIII, with the mention “quo usus est Bosquillon (in praef. laud. p. 18)”.
The reference is to the edition (Paris, 1784) of Hippocrates, Aphorismi et Praenotionum liber by Edouard-François-Marie Bosquillon (1744-1814). The citation is not correct, however. At 18n1, Bosquillon refers to manuscript 2228 which contains, according to him, Galen’s commentary on the Hippocratic Praenotiones.
Codex Parisinus 2828 does not contain the Hippocratic treatise, but works by Aristophanes (Omont 1886-1888: 3.46).
Codex 2228 (= [1153]), meanwhile, does not contain the Hippocratic Prognosticon (it is not listed in Alexanderson 1963), but Galen’s commentary on it (ff. 66 et seq.) as Bosquillon rightly stated (see Omont 1886-1888: 2.217).
The Parisinus 2228 is listed in Diels’ catalogue (I.103) among the copies of Galen’s commentary on the Hippocratic Prognosticon.

According to Diels' catalogue, this is a copy of Hippocrates, Aphorismi.
The same information (without brackets or question mark) appears in Ackermann 1825: LXIV (with a reference to "Montf. II. p. 739" [= Montfaucon 1739: 2.739]).

The graecus series of the Bibliothèque nationale de France currently contains 3117 items.

As the reference to Montfaucon 1739: 2.739 in Ackermann 1825 reveals, no. 3140 (“Hippocratis Aphorismi, cum Scholiis & alia opuscula”) is the shelfmark of the manuscript in the Bibliotheca Regia.

According to the table of concordance provided in Omont 1898: LXXVII, the number 3140 of the Bibliotheca Regia corresponds to the current 2257 (= [1194]), which contains the Aphorismi and is mentioned in the same paragraph as the present item in Diels’ catalogue.

Same as [1194].

[1332] [3170 (?)] I.5.

This is supposed to be copy of Hippocrates, Prognosticon.

The same information (without brackets or question mark) appears in Ackermann 1825: XLVIII.

It is incorrect, since the Parisinus graecus series contains 3117 manuscripts.

Number 3170 was a shelfmark in the Bibliotheca regia (see Montfaucon 1739: 2.740, no. 3170: “Hippocratis prognostica, & alia variorum opuscula medica”), which, according to Omont 1898: LXXVII, corresponds to current Parisinus graecus 36 (= [0957]). This manuscript contains Hippocrates, Prognosticon and is mentioned in the same paragraph of Diels’ catalogue as the present item.

Same as [0957].

Manuscript by Minoide Mynas. |

[1381] 728 (Minas IZ) I.47.

This manuscript is listed among the copies of Hippocrates, Ad Galenum discipulum liber de pulsibus et de temperamentis corporis humani, whereas it does not contain this text. It is a copy of the catalogue of manuscripts owned by Minoïde Mynas (Omont 1886-1888: 3.305).

A note following the mention of this manuscript in Diels' catalogue refers to "Costomiris Revue des ét. gr. II [1889] p. 353". There, Costomiris provides the following information:

Ce traité pseudonyme (i.e. Hippocrates, Ad Galenum discipulum liber ...) existe dans un des mss. de M. Minas [sic], qui ne se trouve pas à la Bibliothèque nationale. Il est désigné ainsi: ms. IZ, du XIV^e siècle, en papier in-12 (catalogue des mss. de M. Minas, suppl. gr. 728, f^o 28).

A manuscript listed in codex Paris, Supplementum graecum 728, f. 28r, corresponds to Costomiris' description. Interestingly enough, it is numbered IZ (= 17). The list of its contents includes (f. 28r, l. 20) the text mentioned in Diels' catalogue:

IZ Manuscrit in 12 cartaceus [sic] du 14^{ème} siècle contenant

14^ο Ἰπποκράτους πρὸς Γαληνὸν περὶ σφυγμῶν καὶ κράσεων

...

Diel's catalogue misinterprets Costomiris' information, because it gives a reference to f. 28 as if it were the beginning of the text of Hippocrates, Ad Galenum discipulum liber ..., in the Paris manuscript, whereas it is the reference to the folio where Mynas' manuscript is listed in the catalogue of his collection that Mynas himself compiled (which is the manuscript Supplementum graecum 728).

A modern handwritten note in the margin of the Supplementum graecum 728 identifies manuscript IZ as Supplementum graecum 1254 (= [1397]). This manuscript contains the Pseudo-Hippocratic text listed here. It is included among the witnesses of this piece at the same page as the present one in Diels' catalogue.

Same as [1397] and [1382].

[1382] 754 (Minas) I.47.

This manuscript is identified as a copy of Hippocrates, Ad Galenum discipulum liber de pulsibus et de temperamentis corporis humani, which is not the case (Omont 1886-1888: 3.307).

A supplementary note following the mention of this manuscript in Diels' catalogue refers to "Costomiris Revue des ét. gr. II [1889] p. 353" as in [1381].

There, Costomiris mentions the following:

Un autre exemplaire de ce traité existe au Mont-Athos, dans un ms. du couvent Iberon, en papier, in-12, entre autres traités non médicaux (Minas [sic], suppl. grec de Paris 754, fol. 523), si ce n'est pas le même ms. emporté par Minas du Mont-Athos: les deux mss. cités par Minas contiennent tout à fait les mêmes traités. Mais peut-être y avait-il deux exemplaires semblables dans la Bibliothèque du couvent Iberon.

The manuscript Supplementum graecum 754 contains only 314 folios. The reference to f. 523 by Costomiris is thus incorrect. On f. 12r, ll. 22-24, under number IZ, the Supplementum graecum 754 contains the description of a manuscript which corresponds to that of [1381] in the Paris, Supplementum graecum 728, as Costomiris rightly mentions.

However, the manuscript number IZ in the Supplementum graecum 754 is not listed in the catalogue of the Ivron library contained in codex Paris, Supplementum graecum 754, ff. 37r-106v (title f. 37r, ll. 1-3: "Catalogue des manuscrits de la bibliotheque [sic] du Couvent Ιβηρος [sic] le 13 juillet 1841"), but rather in a list of books that Minoïde Mynas stored in Thessalonica. See f. 11v, ll. 1-3 for the title of this list: «ouvrages et effets contenus dans la malle en peau que je laisse aussi dans le même magasin de Mrs Abbot frères à Salonique», and ff. 11v-12v, l. 17 for the whole list.

This manuscript is the same as [1381], and it is Paris, Supplementum graecum 1254 (= [1397]).

The manuscript Parisinus, Supplementum graecum 1197, does not contain this text, but Aphthonius and Hermogenes (Astruc and Concasty 1960: 372).
This is most likely a mistake for graecus 1297 (= [0989]) where Dioscorides' text appears.

- N.43.

This item without any identifier does not seem to refer to any of Aetius manuscripts listed in Diels' volume II.

The note related to this unidentified Patmiacus specifies that this manuscript consists of only two folios (Book I), according to Skevos Zervos (1875-1966).

Although there is no precise indication in that sense in Diels' catalogue, this might be a reference to Zervos 1905: 262, where the author mentions that a manuscript of Aetios is made of 2 folios. The only Aetius manuscript in Patmos according to Sakkelion 1890: 333, is current Patmiacus 277 (= [1406]). However, this is not a two-folio codex.

Strangely enough, Zervos 1905: 261-262, does not make reference to Sakkelion 1890.

The item referred to here cannot be identified.

[1402]

11 (bei Coxe, Mss. gr. of the Levant) N.59.

Refers to II.67 (= [1400]) where the copy of Nemeseus Emesenus, De natura hominis is not identified by means of an exact number.

Besides the reference to Coxe 1858b: 62 (no. 11), Diels' catalogue provides a further information about the identification of this item: "vgl. no. λ' bei Migne, Patrol. gr. 149, 1049". This is the catalogue of Patmos library published in Migne's Patrologiae cursus completus, Series graeca posterior, volume 149 (1865), cols. 1048-1052.

As stated in the title (cols. 1048-1049), this catalogue reproduces the publication by "May, Biblioth. nov. P.P., tom. VI" (= Mai 1853: 537-539). A historical explanation follows:

Confectus fuit hic Catalogus regnante Joanne Palaeologo, qui anno 1355 floruit; nec liber recentior occurrit.

This catalogue is contained in codex Vaticanus latinus 1205. Number λ' (mentioned by Diels) contains (see cols. 1049-1050) Nemeseus Emesenus, περὶ φύσεως ἀνθρώπου (De natura hominis).

It is probably the current Patmiacus 202 (see p. 264).

This is a copy of Gregorius Nyssenus, De hominis opificio.

The number KΓ mentioned in Diels is not a shelfmark, but a sequential number in the same catalogue as [1402], col. 1049.

Gregorius Nyssenus, De hominis opificio is not contained in the current Patmiacus 23 (= KΓ), but rather in the current Patmiaci 27 and 47 (below). The current Patmiacus 23 contains Basilus, Orationes, Predicationes and Epistulae (Kominis 1988: 57-59).

 The number 111 comes from Guérin 1856: 111, in the catalogue of the manuscripts of Patmos library (see 101-119 for the catalogue).
 This manuscript of Paulus of Aegina described as “fort ancient” is most probably current Patmiacus 208 (below).

The collection of the Lobkowicz family, which dates back to Bohuslav Hasištenský z Lobkovic (1461-1510), was preserved since 1657 at the Lobkowicz castle in Roudnice, north of Prague. During World War II the castle was confiscated by the German troops in 1941. The library was evacuated and it was deposited at Prague University Library which was first renamed as the State Library of the Socialist Czech Republic in Prague (Státní knihovna CSR), and then as the National Library of the Czech Republic in 1990 (Národní knihovna České Republiky Praha), where it was identified as the Roudnice Lobkowicz Library collection (Roudnická lobkowiczská knihovna). In 1992, it was returned to the Lobkowicz family, and it is currently preserved at the Nelahozeves Castle (Zámek Nelahozeves), north of Prague, as the Lobkowicz Library (Lobkowiczská knihovna) (on which see above, pp. 164-165).

 This manuscript listed without collection name and shelfmark in Diels' catalogue is a copy of Hippocrates, Opera varia.
 The source of this information is Papageorgios 1887 (see Diels I.XXIII). There, the identification of the manuscript is somewhat more precise (Papageorgios 1887: 116, 2nd paragraph on the page, item no. 2 [β']):

This manuscript mentioned without collection name or shelfmark in Diels' catalogue is listed as a copy of Galen, De demonstrationibus.

Mention of this manuscript is accompanied by references to "Foerster de antiqu. et libris mss. Constantinopol. und Costomiris a. a. O. p. 383" (that is, Rev. des ét. gr. II).

The first reference is to Foerster 1877: 29, col. 1, l. 4-31, that is, the edition of one of the lists of manuscripts contained in codex Vindobonensis, historicus graecus 98, ff. 51r-54r. For a more recent edition of this list, see Papazoglou 1983: 403-409.

This list is about an unidentified collection in Raideostos (Rodosto, now Tekirdag in Turkey), which was considered to be the Episcopal Library.

The item referred to here is no. [140] identified as follows (Foerster 1877: 31, col. 1, l. 4):

γαληνοῦ περὶ ἀποδείξεων ἱατρῶν

See also Papazoglou 1983: 408, no. 140.

Diels' reference to Costomiris is to Costomiris 1889: 383, which refers to Foerster 1877: 31, and repeats the title of the work as above.

Although the Rodosto Episcopal Library and School Library contained some manuscripts (for a bibliography on these libraries and their holdings, see Olivier 1995: 778-779, sub nomine Tekirdağ, and, secondarily 281, sub nomine Eleuthéroupolis), they did not hold all the items in the list of manuscript Vindobonensis, historicus graecus 98 (see Papadopoulos-Kerameus 1886: 5), which is a forgery (Krumbacher 1897; Przychocki 1938; Maas 1938; Lauxtermann 2013: 275-276). See, however, Papazoglou 1983: 161-182.

Fonds Colonna (Fondo Colonna [Colonna Collection])

[1417]

12 II.89.

This manuscript mentioned without library name in Diel's catalogue appears among the copies of Rufus, De corporis humani appellationibus. It is the Vaticanus Ottobonianus graecus 235 (= [1456]).

The identification of this manuscript as "Fonds Colonna 12" most probably comes from Charles Daremberg (1817-1872), who first referred to it in 1850: 229, and 1850/2: 265, without any number however:

(1850: 229) ... J'ai fait un dépouillement scrupuleux des catalogues grecs ... des fonds ... Ottobomins [sic] ... j'ai collationné sur deux manuscrits le traité de Rufus, Du nom des parties du corps humain ...

Further on, Daremberg identified this manuscript with nr. 12 (1852: 5 = 1853: 125). This information was repeated in the edition of Rufus' works prepared by Daremberg and posthumously published by Charles-Emile Ruelle (1833-1912), with several statements (Daremberg 1879):

(XXXIII): ... Ms. de Rome. Fonds Colonna n° 12 ...

(LIV): Dénominations de la nature de l'homme. — Dès 1852, M. Daremberg signalait ce texte inédit dans les Archives des missions (t. III, p. 5). Il l'a tiré d'un ms. du Vatican (fonds palatin, n° 302, fol. 84 r°). puis collationné sur une copie du fonds Colonna, n° 12 ...

(237): SCHOLIES SUR LE TRAITÉ DU NOM DES PARTIES DU CORPS. I. SCHOLIES COLONNA. Ces scholies proviennent d'un manuscrit (bibliothèque du Vatican, fonds Colonna. n° 12) dont personne jusqu'ici n'a parlé; je les ai copiées en 1849; elles ont un grand intérêt, puisqu'elles nous fournissent plusieurs fragments inédits du livre de Soranus Sur les noms des parties du corps ...

Interestingly enough, the manuscript Vaticanus Ottobonianus 235 is also mentioned in Daremberg 1879, in the list of the copies of Rufus' treatise Des noms du partie du corps (Daremberg 1879: XXII-XXIV for the list of the manuscripts, and XXIII, nr. 5 for the Ottobonianus manuscript, and nr. 18 [same page] for the Colonna codex) and in the Index siglorum (pp. XXIV-XXV, for the list; XXV, sub "O", for the Ottobonianus; and, [same page], sub "Col. Ms. de Rome", for the Colonna codex).

The Ottobonianus manuscript is listed in Diels' catalogue among the copies of Rufus' treatise (II.89).

The identification of the manuscript as in Diels' catalogue refers to its first identified owner, Cardinal Ascanio Colonna (1560-1608), who owned a collection of Greek manuscripts in Rome. His library went through different hands between 1611 and 1748 (except some items identified as the Columnenses manuscripts at the Vatican Library [= Vaticani graeci 2162-2254] which had a different history [Lilla 2011: 605-606]). After Ascanio Columna's death it was sold to the Duke Giovanni Angelo d'Altemps (d. 1620) in 1611. The Bibliotheca Altempsiana (on which see Serrai 2008) was bought in 1690 by Pietro Ottoboni (1610-1691, who became Pope Alexander VIII in 1689). The collection was donated by the pope to his homonymous nephew Cardinal Pietro Ottoboni (1667-1740) (see Montfaucon 1739: 1.186 C 17-18 for the present item, in the list [1.183-1888] entitled [1.183] In Bibliotheca Eminentissimi Cardinalis Ottoboni). After the latter's death, the Ottoboni collection was bought by Pope Benedict XIV (1675; elected 1740; d. 1758) in 1748, and it entered the Bibliotheca Vaticana.

Bibl. Angelica (Biblioteca Angelica [Angelica Library])

In Diels' catalogue, identifiers of the manuscripts of this collection are made of two different elements:

- a number in Arabic numerals;
- a composite shelfmark between parentheses, made of a Latin capital letter, followed by two numbers in Arabic numerals separated by a period sign.

The second of Diels' identifiers goes back to the organization of the Angelica library in the 19th century (Piccolomini 1896: 27-29). These shelfmarks are no longer used. The shelfmarks currently used are the sequential numbers in the catalogue by Franchi de' Cavalieri and Muccio 1896 (Arabic numerals, which correspond to the identifiers in Diels' catalogue according to the first system above). These numbers are preceded by an abbreviation that distinguishes the different collections according to the language (here "gr." for Greek).

Bibl. Barberina (Biblioteca Barberiniana [Barberini Library])

The Barberini library in Rome, which dates back to Francesco Barberini (1597-1679), was purchased in 1902 by the Biblioteca Apostolica Vaticana, where it forms the Barberiniana collection (D'Aiuto 2011: 1.338-339).

For items [1422]–[1436], the shelfmarks used in Diels' catalogue are those given to the Barberini manuscripts by Sante Pieralisi (1802-1887) sometimes around mid 19th-century (Pieralisi n.d.). These shelfmarks are no longer used. The current ones were introduced on the occasion of the transfer of the Barberini collection to the Vatican Library. For a table of concordance of Pieralisi and current shelfmarks, see Canart and Peri 1970: 112-116.

For some items ([1423], [1426]–[1429] and [1434]), Diels' catalogue adds (with or without a “=” sign) a number in Arabic numerals between parentheses. These are the so-called “segnature antiche” (old shelfmarks) of the manuscripts which date back to the 18th century and can be found in the inventories of the collection in the manuscripts Barberiniani latini 3137-3139. A table of concordance is provided in Canart and Peri 1970: 108-112.

In [1437] and [1439] the old shelfmark is followed by Pieralisi's shelfmark.

For item [1438], Diels seems to use these old shelfmarks. However, this number (with the content mentioned in Diels' catalogue) does not correspond to any identifiable manuscript.

For two manuscripts, Diels uses both systems of shelfmarks as if the numbers attributed to these two manuscripts in each system referred to two different items:

[1423] and [1437];

[1429] and [1439].

For one manuscript ([1425]), Diels uses Pieralisi's shelfmark. In the next item ([1426]), he uses this shelfmark followed (between parentheses) by the previous one of the same item, as if [1425] and [1426] were two different manuscripts.

This manuscript is now Barberinianus graecus 72 (see Capocci 1958: 79-80).
This is not a medical work, but the incipit of the Byzantine novel Στεφανίτης καὶ Ἰχνηλατής (Stefanitês and Ichnelatês) (actually the Greek translation of the Arabic tales best known as كليلة و دمنة [Kalila wa Dimna] in the version published by Stark 1697 and identified as number II by Puntoni 1889: III-IV), as Mercati 1916: 211 (no. 10) noted. See Capocci 1958: 80:
Quae leguntur de codice nostro et de Perzoe τῷ σοφῷ apud H. Diels (Handschriften d. ant. Ärzte, II, p. 81) falsa sunt, v. etiam Ioh. Mercati in Bessarione, XXXII, 1916, p. 211.
This manuscript was used by Puntoni 1889 to publish version IV of the novel (see pp. V-VI, XII about the manuscript, and pp. 3-47 for the edition).
See also Sjöberg 1962: 42, and Condylis-Bassoukos 1997: XXVII (where the manuscript is identified as Barberinianus I 72).

Palimpsest (Canart 2004: 47).
Scriptio inferior: unidentified text.
Capocci 1958: 186-218.
Current shelfmark: Barberinianus graecus 127.
Possibly also [1438].
- [1432] I 152 I.121.
Capocci 1958: 263-265.
Current shelfmark: Barberinianus graecus 152, part III.

Current shelfmark: Barberinianus graecus 522. See above, p. 54.
- [1436] VI 5 II.67.
Current shelfmark: Barberinianus graecus 566. See above, p. 54.
- [1437] 136 (= I 11) I.5.
Same as [1423].
- [1438] 276 I.3.

This manuscript is listed as a copy of Hippocrates, Opera varia.

The old shelfmark 276 corresponds to current Barberinianus 252 which contains Eunapius and Porphyrius (Mogenet 1989: 100-101).

In the Barberini collection, the following items contain Hippocratic works:

- 5 ([pp. 1-83] Aphorismi) (Capocci 1958: 6-7);
- 11 ([ff. 1v-46v] Aphorismi) (Capocci 1958: 11-12);
- 127 ([f. 250v] De sterilibus [frg.]; [ff. 313r-332v] Hippocratis operum fragmenta) (Capocci 1958: 186-218);
- 220 ([ff. I-II] Aphorismi) (Mogenet 1989: 161);
- 272 ([ff. 143, 142r, 143r, 144] Prorrheticum) (Mogenet 1989: 116-117, 166).

The item referred to here could be Barberinianus graecus 127 (= [1431]), if it were not for the inexplicable fact that it does not correspond to ancient number 276.

[1439] 382 (I 91) II.88; N.64.

The old shelfmark 382 corresponds to four manuscripts (Canart and Peri 1970: 111, sub numero 382):

- 91 (= Pieralisi I.91);
- 92 (= Pieralisi I.92);
- 132v (= Pieralisi I.132);
- 404 (= Pieralisi III.404).

From the correspondence between old and Pieralisi's shelfmarks (I.91, rightly mentioned in Diels' catalogue) and the description of the content, it appears that it is Barberinianus 91.

Possibly same as [1429].

[Bibl.] Passioneian. (Bibliotheca Passioneiana [Passionei Library])

[1442] 2 I.68.

This is a copy of Galenus, De usu partium in the collection of Cardinal Domenico Passionei (1682-1786) in Rome (on which, see Serrai 2004 and Sciarra 2009).

In 1788, this collection was acquired by the Biblioteca Angelica in Rome, where this manuscript had the shelfmark C.1.5. Whereas most of the Cardinal's collection is currently at the Angelica (on which see above, pp. 270-271), some items were taken from the collection during the years 1833-1836. The copy of Galenus, De usu partium was among them (Sciarra 2009: 275).

The manuscript later entered the collection owned by Giovanni Francesco de Rossi (1796-1854), which was donated to the Societas Jesu by his widow in 1855. The Jesuit collection was moved from Rome to Vienna (Austria) in 1877, and relocated in the Collegium Societatis Jesu in 1895 in Lainz (a town in the periphery of Vienna, which was absorbed into the city as a part of its 13th district in 1890/92). The Galen manuscript had the shelfmark XI.132 (see below, under [1742]). In 1921, however, the collection was moved back to Città del Vaticano, Biblioteca Apostolica Vaticana, where this copy of Galen is now codex Ross. 982 (see p. 55). On the history of the library, see Grafinger 1997.

The number 2 attributed to the codex in Diels' catalogue does not correspond to any shelfmark of the manuscript, but probably comes from Piccolomini 1898: 182, where the manuscript is listed as number 2 among the codices graeci Bibliothecae Angelicae deperditi (ibid.: 180-184). This number is repeated by Helmreich 1907-1909: 1.XII, who identified the manuscript as a Vaticanus Passioneianus (probably because of the imprecision in the location of the library in Diels' catalogue ["Rom"], as for the many Vaticani listed in the catalogue). However, Helmreich added that he does not know what he should think about the codex ("Quid de reliquis codicibus, quos H. Diels ... p. 68 commemorat, ... Vaticano Passioneiano 2 ... statuendum sit, nescio"), making it clear that he did not know its location at that time.

Bibl. Vallicellana [sic] (Biblioteca Vallicelliana [Vallicelliana Library])

Apart from the first manuscript [1444], identifiers of the manuscripts in this library in Diel's catalogue are made of two elements:

- a number in Arabic numerals;
- another made of two components: a capital letter (Latin alphabet) followed by a number in Arabic numerals.

The first identifier is not a shelfmark, but the sequential number attributed to the manuscripts in Martini 1902: 1-200 (mentioned in the list of catalogues of manuscripts consulted to compile Diels' catalogue, I.XVII). Only the second identifier is a shelfmark. This shelfmark is still used in the present day.

[1444]

- (Allatianus) II.68.

This manuscript listed without collection name (except its identification as "Allatianus") or precise shelfmark appears among the copies of Nepualius, De sympathicis et antipathicis.

No manuscript in the Appendix Allatiana (that is, notulae by Leo Allatius [ca. 1586-1669]) at the Biblioteca Vallicelliana appears to contain a text under Nepualius' name. However, codex Allatianus VI (on which see Martini 1902: 201-202) contains notes by Allatius on a De sympathicis et antipathicis treatise attributed to Democritus. The two authors and their respective works have been transmitted together in several manuscripts and sometimes mixed up in modern scholarly literature.

This codex is identified as a copy (ff. 1r et seq.) of Galenus, In Hippocratis prognosticum commentarii III, which is not the case (Stevenson 1885: 91, according to whom the codex contains Plato).
This seems to be a mistake. If this is a Palatinus, it might be 157 (= [1473]), which contains (ff. 2r et seq.) the Galenic commentary on the Hippocratic Prognosticon and which is listed in Diels for this treatise. Most probably, however, it might be a Reginensis, all the more because Reginensis 173 (= [1495]) contains the work on ff. 1r et seq., and is not mentioned in Diels' catalogue for this treatise, whereas it is (rightly so) for other works.

This item is supposed to contain of Paulus Aegineta, Epitome medica, 7.25 (De succedaneis), on f. 296.

The Vaticani Urbinae graeci collection contains 165 numbers.

The manuscript referred to here is not the Vaticanus Urbinae graecus 294, but most probably Vaticanus graecus 294 (= [1538]), which contains Paul of Aegina (on f. 296 as indicated in Diels).

Mercati and Franchi de' Cavalieri 1923: 412-415.

Vatic. (Vaticani graeci)

[1510] Vatic. N.46.

According to Diels' catalogue, this manuscript listed without shelfmark contains S. Basilus, Ad Eustathium medicum. A reference is made to "Migne, patrol. gr. 32, p. 684 ff. Ep. 189" (= Migne 1857: 683/684-695/696 [columns, but not pages as in Diels]).

This is Letter 189 of S. Basilus (= Clavis Patrum Graecorum 2900 for the whole collection of Letters), edited by Courtonne 1961: 132-141. According to Courtonne 1957: xxii, the Maurists responsible for the 1730 edition (reproduced by Migne 1857: 683/684-695/696, cited by Diels) used the Vaticanus graecus 434 (on which see Fedwick 1993: 53-57).

The letter is addressed to a certain Eustathius medicus (in the Bibliotheca Basiliana Universalis by Fedwick 1993: XVI, it is identified as EustArc 2/189, that is, Basilus' Letter 189, being the second addressed to Eustathius archiater). This letter is of dubious authenticity and may be by Gregorius Nyssenus (= Ad Eustathium de sancta trinitate [= Clavis Patrum Graecorum 3137]; edition by Mueller 1958: 1-16).

This is a theological text not medical in nature. It was probably included in Diels' catalogue because of the medical profession of its recipient.

[1511] [-] II.41.

This manuscript listed without shelfmark is a copy of Harpocraton, De facultatibus naturalibus animalium et herbarum et lapidum.

The only Vatican manuscript containing such text seems to be Palatinus graecus 226 (= [1477]) f. 194 (Stevenson 1885: 120-122).

Possibly same as [1477].

[1512] - (Puschm. I p. 89) II.12.

According to Diels' catalogue, this manuscript without precise identification is a copy of Alexander Trallianus, Epistula de lumbricis.

The reference is to Puschmann 1878-1879.

This item seems to be Ottobonianus graecus 89 (= [1449]).

Feron and Battaglini 1893: 55, which lists Alexander Trallianus, Opera without further precision.

[1513] ? (Vgl. Daremb. I p. LVIII und 124) II.108.

This manuscript listed without shelfmark in Diels' catalogue is supposed to be a copy of Xenocrates, De alimento ex aquatilibus.

The reference is to Bussemaker and Daremberg, Oeuvres d'Oribase, tome 1 (1851). On p. LVIII, a Vatican manuscript is identified as follows:

V^a. Ms. soi-disant du Vatican. Mêmes remarques que pour le précédent.

The previous manuscript referred to ("le précédent") is a manuscript of Paris cited at the same page, about which Bussemakers provides the following information:

Ms. ... qui n'existe plus ... Les variantes recueillies par un anonyme se trouvent dans les éditions de Franz et d'Ancora.

The editions referred to are those by Johann Georg Friedrich Franz (1737-1789) (Leipzig: Sommer, 1774 [with a second print in 1779]) and Gaetano d'Ancora (1751-1816) (Neapoli: regiis typis, 1794).

No further information is provided in Daremberg p. 124 (beginning of the edition of the text [Greek with French translation]), contrary to what Diels' reference to this page suggests.

Franz 1779: ff. *5v-[*6]r, provides the following information about the Vatican manuscript:

Casu quodam fortuito, nobis hanc curantibus editionem, in manus inciderunt variae lectiones a Viro quodam docto ad marginem editionis Gesneri ubi reliqua graeci textus verba, quae apud Gesneri desiderantur, erant adscripta, ex Codice Regio Parisiensi et Vaticano notatae ... de codice Vaticano simul Xenocratis libellum περὶ λίθων ... comprehendente, nihil nobis constat; nec praeter Labbei relationem aliquid de eo reperire potuimus.

Note : v. Labbei Bibl. Nou. MSS. p. 174 et 127.

The references are to Gessner, 1559 (on which see Wellisch 1975: 213, no. 28, and 1984: 87-88, no. 48), and Labbé 1653: 127-128 (without mention of a Vatican manuscript) and 174 (where Xenocratis, De alimento ex aquatilibus and De lapidibus are listed with the information "in Vaticana").

Variant readings of this Vatican manuscript are found in Franz 1779 in the footnotes passim (see for example, pp. 7, 8, 16, 19, 21, 23, 27, 29, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 38, 40, 41, 53, 57, 62, 64, 69, 71, 73, 82, 83, 92, 93, 96, 97, 99, 101, 102 and 103).

d'Ancora 1794: VIII-IX, commented on Franz's Vatican manuscript as follows:

... nimiam certe praestavit fidem variis lectionibus, quas invenisse dicit a viro quodam docto ad marginem editionis Gesneri adscriptas ex Mss. ... Vaticanae. Haud enim ignorabat Franzius neminem post Labbeum vidisse, aut memorasse Codicem Vaticanum, et ne nobis quidem ... de eo codice nullum indicium detegere fas fuit ...

d'Ancora nevertheless reproduces in the footnotes of his edition the variant readings cited by Franz as coming from the Vatican manuscript (see, for example, pp. 10, 25, 26, 29, 39, 40, 44, 45, 48, 49, 51, 71, 72, 78, 84, 87, 93, 98, 99, 107, 109, 114, 118, 120, 121, 122, 123, 125, 126, 128, 131, 132).

It is unclear whether this is a manuscript now lost (according to Daremberg cited in Diels), a mistake (possibly by Labbé), or a forgery (by Franz [?], possibly on the basis of a mistake in Labbé 1653: 174 [?]), as no manuscript of Xenocrates' text seems to be available or traceable at any point in time among the holdings of the Vatican Library.

In spite of d'Ancora, some 19th-century bibliographies and encyclopedias still mention that a manuscript of Xenocrates' work can be found in the Vatican Library (see for example, Hoffmann 1836: 771, and the Penny cyclopedia 1843: 620).

[1514] [apud Montfauc. p. 28] I.135.

This item listed without shelfmark is Galenus, De hominis natura.

The reference is to Montfaucon 1739: 1.28, where manuscripts of the Vatican Library are listed, specifically the manuscripts from Christina, Queen of Sweden (see Montfaucon 1739: 1.14 "Incipit Catalogus Manuscriptorum Codicum Bibliothecae Reginae Sueciae in Vaticana").

Montfaucon 1739: 1.28 lists one item containing the following:

649. Ejusdem (i.e. Galenus [see no. 648]) Prognosticon de diaeta in acutis, de Sanitate fruenda & de natura hominis.

Whereas the information in Diels' catalogue does not allow for any identification, the description provided by Montfaucon suggests that this manuscript is the current Vaticanus Reginensis graecus 173 (= [1495]) as its contents indicate (Stevenson 1888: 116-117):

- Galenus, In Hippocratis Prognosticon commentariorum libri III;
- Galenus, De antidotis libri II;
- Galenus, In Hippocrates de diaeta in morbis acutis librum commentarii quattuor;
- Galenus, In librum Hippocratis de natura humana commentarii II;
- Galenus, In librum Hippocratis de victu salutari commentarius;
- Galenus, De sanitate tuenda;
- [Galenus], De ptisana.

Same as [1495].

[1515] [ap. Montfaucon p. 34 (de motu animalium)] I.121.

According to Diels' catalogue, this is Galenus, De animalibus.

The reference is to Montfaucon 1739: 1.34, where manuscripts of the Vatican Library are listed, specifically the manuscripts from Christina, Queen of Sweden (see Montfaucon 1739: 1.14 “Incipit Catalogus Manuscriptorum Codicum Bibliothecae Reginae Sueciae in Vaticana”).

Montfaucon 1739: 1.34 lists one item containing the following texts:

947. Galenus in prognostica Hipocratis [sic]. Item in Hippocratem de praedictionibus. Item de difficultate respirationis & motu animalium.

Based on this description, it appears that the item referred to here may be the Vaticanus Reginensis graecus 175 (= [1497]), which contains the following texts (Stevenson 1888: 118):

- Galenus, In Hippocratis Prognosticon commentarii III;
- Galenus, In Hippocratis Prorrhethicon commentarii III;
- Galenus, De difficili respiratione;
- Galenus, De respirationis causis;
- Galenus, De musculorum motu.

The reference to Galenus, De motu animalium in Montfaucon 1739 is probably a mistake for Galenus, De musculorum motu. If so, Diels’ information might be a further transformation of Montfaucon’s incorrect title.

[1519]

[216] I.22, 34.

This manuscript is supposed to contain the following two Hippocratic works:

- De flatibus (1.22)
- De ossium natura (1.34).

The same information appears in Ackermann 1825 (without brackets):

- CXL, no. 29 (De flatibus), with the following source “memorat Foësius in not. in libr. de ossium natura”
- CLIV, no. 38 ctd. (De ossium natura).

The current Vaticanus graecus 216 (above) does not contain these works, but rather (ff. 41r et seq.) the Geoponica (Mercati and Franchi de' Cavalieri 1923: 279-282).

The manuscript referred to here is probably Vaticanus graecus 278 (= [1523]) identified in Mercati and Franchi de' Cavalieri 1923: 369, as “olim 216”, in which the two treatises can be read (Mercati and Franchi de' Cavalieri 1923: 369-372):

- (f. 520r et seq.) De flatibus;
- (ff. 542v et seq.) De ossium natura.

The Vaticanus graecus 278 is correctly listed among the manuscripts of these two treatises in Diels' catalogue.

223 (ff. 147r et seq.) Epiphanius, De duodecim gemmis.

Mercati and Franchi de' Cavalieri 1923: 290-292.

224 (ff. 241v et seq.) Epiphanius, De duodecim gemmis; (f. 303v) Remedia.

[1520]

269 I.115.

This manuscript is listed among the copies of Galenus, De ponderibus et mensuris.

The Vaticanus graecus 269 contains commentaries on Aristotelian works and Theocritus, Syrinx (Mercati and Franchi de' Cavalieri 1923: 353-356).

This is a mistake, most probably for Vaticanus graecus 296 (= 1540]), which contains on ff. 475 et seq. Galenus, De succedaneis and De ponderibus et mensuris (see Mercati and Franchi de' Cavalieri 1923: 416).

Probably the same as [1540].

This item is listed among the copies of the following works (in the order they are cited in Diels' catalogue; references to Diels' catalogue follows the folio numbers):

- Hippocrates, Aphorismi, f. 95 (I.14);
- Hippocratis Aphorismi et Galeni in eos commentarii VII, f. 31 (I.105);
- Galenus, De succedaneis, f. 237 (I.114);
- Galenus, Lexicon botanicum, f. 237 (I.117);
- Galenus, De venae sectione, f. 213 (I.134);
- Magnus Emesenus, Prognostica, f. 280 (II.59);
- Magnus Emesenus, De urinis ex ore Theophili, f. 280 (II.60);
- Magnus Emesenus, De febribus, f. 280 (II.60);
- Paulus Aegineta, Excerpta varia, f. 214 (II.80).

In Diels' catalogue, this manuscript is considered lost ("Verbleib unbekannt" or "Hic codex deest"). At II.80, however, the information Hic codex deest is followed by the following: "Verwechslung mit Palat. 279?".

According to Stevenson 1885: 154-156, the Vaticanus Palatinus graecus 279 (= [1480]) contains some of the texts referred to here as being contained in the Vaticanus graecus 279 (titles are listed below according to the order of folios):

- (ff. 1r et seq.) Hippocrates, Aphorismi, et Galenus, Commentarium;
- (f. 212v) De phlebotomia ex Galeno;
- (f. 266r) Ex Galeno, De succedaneis;
- (f. 271r) Lexicon botanicum;
- (f. 280v) Magnus Emesenus, De urinis;
- (f. 312v) De febrium diagnosi et curatione ex Aetii libris.

On the basis of this comparison, it is by no means certain that the manuscript referred to here has been confused with the Vaticanus graecus 279, even though the Vaticanus has been moved into the Palatina collection for a certain period of time and was thought to be lost (Mercati and Franch de' Cavalieri 1923: 378, last paragraph on the Vaticanus 279). At any rate, the Vaticanus graecus 279 contains the texts listed in Diels' catalogue, and several others not listed, and thus needs to be taken into consideration.

On the Vaticanus, see Mercati and Franchi de' Cavalieri 1923: 372-378; on the Palatinus, see Stevenson 1885: 154-156.

517 II.108.

This manuscript appears among the copies of Ioannes Zacharias Actuarius, Opera varia.

According to Devreesse 1937: 372-373, it contains Iohannes Chrysostomus, In Genesim Homiliae.

In Diels' catalogue, reference is made to "Costomiris, Rev. des ét. gr. X p. 435" (that is, Costomiris 1897), where the following can be read:

Actuarius graecus ... 517 ... Bibliotheca Alexandri Petavii in Vaticana, dont la plus grande partie se trouve, à Rome, dans la Bibl. Reginae Sueciae in Vaticana with a note referring to Montfaucon, Bibl. mss., p. 92, e.

The reference is to Montfaucon 1739, 1.92, where the following entry can be read:

Actuarius Graecus. 1191, 1194, 517.

This entry appears under "Anonymi" (ibid.) in the catalogue of the manuscripts once owned by Alexander Petau (d. 1672) entitled as follows (Montfaucon 1739: 1.61):

Catalogus alphabeticus Manuscriptorum Codicum qui extabant in Bibliotheca Alexandri Petavii, ac deinde divenditi in Sueciam sunt transportati, nunc autem plurimâ parte asservantur Romae in Bibliotheca Reginae Sueciae. 1660.

For the catalogue see Montfaucon 1739: 1.61-96 with Addenda at 1.96-97.

Alexander Petau has catalogued his own manuscripts (ed. de Meyier 1947: 172-175). Three Actuarius entries are listed (de Meyier 1947: 174, no. 151).

According to de Meyier 1947: 174 note ad no. 151, one of them is current manuscript Glasgow, Hunterian Museum, U.5.11 (= [0387]). Another may be the copy of Actuarius in the collection of the Queen of Sweden Christina now at the Vatican Library (see [1499]). The Leiden library currently contains one copy of Actuarius: Voss. gr. F. 32 (= [0512]). However, this item does not seem to have been owned by either Alexander Petau or his father Paul (1568-1614). The third copy of Actuarius could be the present item 517, the location of which is unknown.

This manuscript is listed as a copy of Hermes Trismegistus, Canon.
According to Allaci 1614-1630: 555-557, it contains the following:
(pp. 1 et seq.) Maximus Planudes, De urinis; (pp. 184 et seq.) Medicinalia varia.

- [1557] 1028 I.92.
According to Diels' catalogue, this manuscript contains on f. Ir "Lib. X c. 10 vel exc. ex hoc capite" of Galenus, Methodus medendi.

However, according to Amati et al. 1800-1834: f. 21r-v, it contains Aristoteles, De physica auscultatione (also Wartelle 1963: 131, no. 1767). Nevertheless, according to Amati et al. 1800-1834: f. 21v, the codex includes the following:

Subiciuntur non numeratae chartae tres ... Galeni περὶ δυνάμεως τῶν τροφῶν ... et aliud περὶ ἐκτικῶν πυρετῶν.

A handwritten note pencilled by a modern hand in the manuscript in the upper margin of f. I' recto reads as follows:

Ff. I-III, quae e Vatic. 279 avolsa fuerant, in suum locum reposita sunt m. aprili an. 1918.

These folios are indeed in manuscript Vaticanus graecus 279 (= [1524]), as Mercati and Franchi de' Cavalieri 1923: 378 already mention.

1052 II.108.

Whereas this codex is listed as a copy of Opera varia by Ioannes Zacharias Actuarius, it actually contains Theon Alexandrinus, Commentarius in Ptolemaei expeditos canones, and Isaac Argyrus, Tabellae astronomicae novae.

Amati et al. 1800-1834: f. 54r. Also Tihon 1992: 49.

In Diels' catalogue, reference is made to "Costomiris, Rev. des ét. gr. X p. 435". In Costomiris 1897, the paragraph on this manuscript reads as follows:

«1052. Actuarii opera Medica graeca. Item alia opera Medica quae Galeni esse videatur.» Il existe dans la Bibliotheca Reginae Sueciae in Vaticana.

This paragraph includes a footnote referring to "Montfaucon, Bibl. mss., p. 36, c.", that is, Montfaucon 1739: 1.36, where the description provided by Costomiris above does appear in the "Catalogus Manuscriptorum Codicum Bibliothecae Regiae Sueciae in Vaticana" (see Montfaucon 1739: 1.14 for the title; 1.14-61 for the catalogue; and 1.36 for the present item).

Number 1052 is not a shelfmark but a sequential number in Montfaucon's list of manuscripts of Queen Christina of Sweden in the Vaticana (Montfaucon 1739: 1.14-61).

The only codex of Actuarius in the collection of the Queen of Sweden seems to be the Reginensis graecus 181 (= [1499]) (see Stevenson 1888: 206 sub nomine).

[1562] 1065 I.41.

This manuscript appears in the list of the copies of Hippocrates, Ad Ptolemaeum regem epistula.

Its contents are not identified in Amati et al. 1800-1834, f. 44v, as the manuscript no longer was in the Vatican collections at that time (“desideratur”). Nevertheless, as a further note mentions, it has been returned to the Vatican library from Paris (“Parisiis redux”).

CCAG V.4 (Weinstock) 1940: 14.

[1563] 1066 I.40, 96, 113; II.43; N.36, 52.

According to Diels’ catalogue, this manuscript contains the following four texts (listed below according to the order of folios; references to Diels’ catalogue follow the titles):

- Hippocrates, Epistula de hominis fabrica, f. 7v (I.40);
- Hermes Trismegistus, Methodus, f. 18 (II.43; cfr. v. N.52: f. 18v);
- Galenus, Prognosticum, f. 78 (I.113; cfr. N.36);
- Galenus, De simplicium medicamentorum temperamentis et facultatibus, ff. 168 and 169 (I.96).

According to Amati et al. 1800-1834, ff. 55v-46v, it contains these texts on ff. 7v, 18r, 78r and 169r, respectively, together with several others that are medical in nature.

CCAG V.1 (Cumont and Boll) 1904: 74-79; see also 239-240.

1085 (ff. 187v-191v) Hippocrates, Epistulae.

The contents of the manuscript are not listed in Amati et al. 1800-1834, f. 61v, as it was no longer in the library at that time (“Desideratur. Parisiis”).

The manuscript has been returned to the Vatican Library since then, and does contain the text.

[1567] 1191 II.108.

This manuscript is listed among the copies of Ioannes Zacharias Actuarius, Opera varia.

According to Amati et al. 1800-1834: 221v, it contains Theophylactus Bulgarus.

In Diels’ catalogue, reference is made to “Costomiris, Rev. des ét. gr. X p. 435” (that is, Costomiris 1897), where the following can be read:

Actuarius graecus ... 1191 ... Bibliotheca Alexandri Petavii in Vaticana, dont la plus grande partie se trouve, à Rome, dans la Bibl. Reginae Sueciae in Vaticana with a note referring to Montfaucon, Bibl. mss., p. 92, e.

The reference is to Montfaucon 1739, 1.92, where the following entry can be read:

Actuarius Graecus. 1191, 1194, 517.

This entry appears under “Anonymi” (ibid.) in the catalogue of the manuscripts once owned by Alexander Petau (d. 1672) entitled as follows (Montfaucon 1739: 1.61):

Catalogus alphabeticus Manuscriptorum Codicum qui extabant in Bibliotheca Alexandri Petavii, ac deinde divenditi in Sueciam sunt transportati, nunc autem plurimâ parte asservantur Romae in Bibliotheca Reginae Sueciae. 1660.

For the catalogue see 61-96 with Addenda at 96-97.

Alexander Petau has catalogued his own manuscripts (ed. de Meyier 1947: 172-175). Three Actuarius entries are listed (de Meyier 1947: 174, no. 151). According to de Meyier 1947: 174 ad 151, one of them is current manuscript Glasgow, Hunterian Museum, U.5.11 (= [0387]). Another may be the Actuarius copy in the collection of the Queen of Sweden Christina now at the Vatican Library (see [1499]). The Leiden library currently contains one copy of Actuarius: Voss. gr. F. 32 (= [0512]). However, this item does not seem to have been owned by either Alexander Petau or his father Paul (1568-1614). The third copy of Actuarius could be the present item 1191, the current location of which is unknown.

See [1548] and also [1568].

This manuscript is listed as a copy of Ioannes Zacharias Actuarius, Opera varia. Reference is made to “Costomiris, Rev. des ét. gr. X p. 435”.

According to Amati et al. 1800-1834: 225r, it contains Iohannes Chrysostomus, Epistulae.

The situation of this item is the same as that of the supposed Vaticani graeci 517 and 1191 (= [1548] and [1567], respectively).

This manuscript is listed among the copies of the following works (order of folios in the manuscript; references to Diels' catalogue follow the folio numbers):
- Galenus, Prognostica de decubitu ex mathematica scientia, f. 22v (I.113);
 - Hermes Trismegistus, Iatromathematica, f. 217 (II.44);
 - Galenus, De chirurgorum operationibus et de decubitu infirmorum, f. 223 (I.135);
 - Pancharius, De decubitu infirmorum: f. 235v (II.76);
 - Theophilus, De principiis mundi collectanea: f. 243v (II.101).
- Amati et al. 1800-1834: 398v, do not provide a detailed list of content.
Although the codex does not contain the Galenic Prognostica de decubitu ex mathematica scientia on f. 22v, it contains the other treatises listed in Diels' catalogue at the folios mentioned in Diels. The reference to f. 22v about the Galenic work might be a confusion with f. 222v where a title "... γαλινοῦ ... περὶ κατακλίσεως νοσούντων" can be read.

Giannelli 1950: 278-279.
- [1581] 1692 B I.113; II.10, 44.

This manuscript is listed as a copy of the following three works (order of the folios in the manuscript; references to Diels' catalogue follow the folio numbers):

- Hermes Trismegistus, Iatromathematica, f. 1 (II.44);
- Galenus, Prognosticon, f. 7 (I.113);
- Alexander Aphrodisiensis, Excerpta, f. 34 v (II.10).

The Vaticanus graecus 1692 (with "B" omitted from its shelfmark, whatever "B" means [2nd volume?]) does not contain such texts, but it contains instead the following ones (order of folios):

(ff. 1r-85) In evangelium secundum Mattheum catena;

(ff. 88r-144r) Iohannes Chrysostomus, Interpretatio evangelii secundum Iohannem;

(ff. 144r-177r) Pseudo-Titus Bostrensis, Commentarius in Lucam;

(ff. 177v-196) Catena in evangelium secundum Marcum

(Giannelli 1961: 12-14).

The manuscript referred to here is Vaticanus graecus 1702 (see p. 302), which contains the texts listed in Diels' catalogue for the Vaticanus 1692 (order of the folios):

- (ff. 1r-6v) Hermes Trismegistus;
- (ff. 7r-15r) Pseudo-Galenus, Prognostica de decubitu ex mathematica scientia;
- (ff. 34v-36r) Alexander Aphrodisiensis, Quaestionum et solutionum, 2. 23 (De pietra Heraclea).

According to Giannelli 1961: 51 (last paragraph of the description), a number 1692 followed by the letter B appears on the spine of Vaticanus 1702:

... praebet in dorso: notam 1692 ... impressam (littera B paullo inferius plumbo adiecta) ...

This manuscript is listed with the following contents (order of folios in the manuscript; references to Diels' catalogue follow the folio numbers):
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Rufus, Excerpta, f. 26 (II.91); • Galenus, De succedaneis, f. 33 (I.114); • Galenus, De urinis, f. 78v (I.128); • Galenus, Remedia, f. 79v (I.133). The identification of the content in Cozza Luzi n.d.: 216v is insufficient to allow for an identification ("ιατρικὰ διαφορά").
The manuscript contains the following three texts:
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • (ff. 33r, l. 10-35v, l. 8) Galenus, De succedaneis (frg.); • (ff. 78v, l. 7-79r, l. 6) De urinis; • (ff. 79r, l. 7-79v, l. 18) Antidotorum methodus. The text identified as Rufus, Excerpta at f. 26r-v, is not by Rufus of Ephesus, but is instead a "ἱερὰ τῶν περὶ μελαγχολικῶν ρουφῶν" extracted from the Efodia . |
| [1602] | 2259 | II.24, 95 (2).

This manuscript is mentioned under the following works (order of folios in the manuscript; references to Diels' catalogue follow folio numbers):
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Stephanus Alexandrinus, De mundo, f. 16 (II.95); • Stephanus Alexandrinus, Epistula ad Theodorum, f. 25 (II.95); • Cleopatra, De mensuris et ponderibus, f. 132 (II.24). Whereas Cozza Luzi n.d.: 217r-v, mentions only the first and third texts, the manuscript does also contain Stephanus, Epistula ad Theodorum at ff. 25r-41r. |
| | 2291 | (ff. 247r et seq.) Nicander, Theriaca ; (ff. 271v et seq.) Nicander, Alexipharmaca .

This manuscript was Vaticanus Chisianus R.VIII.59.
Franchi de' Cavalieri 1927: 100-101 (no. 50). |

[1603] 2304 [olim 2217] I.18; II.7, 27, 89, 101.

This manuscript appears among the copies of the following works (in the order of Diels' mentions; references to Diels' catalogue follow the folio numbers [according to Diels]):

- Hippocrates, Iusiurandum, f. 1 (I.18);
- Aëtius Amidenus, Excerpta, ff. 8, 17-19, 9-16v, 19 (II .7);
- Democritus, Prognosticon, f. 6 (II.27);
- Rufus, De corporis humani appellationibus (frg.), f. 6v (II.89);
- Theophilus, De pulsibus, f. 1v (II.101).

Whereas Cozza Luzi n.d.: 231v, mentions only “Σχεδιάσματα τινα, Ὁριβασίου τινα, περὶ τῶν ζώων διαφορά”, the manuscript does contain the works listed in Diels' catalogue.

A number 2217 (deleted) appears on f. Ir. As Cozza Luzi n.d.: 231v mentions, this is the shelfmark of the manuscript when it was in the Colonna collection (“Columnensis olim 2217”).

On the provenance of this manuscript (Colonna collection), see Lilla 1985: XXIn36, and XLVII, no. 40.

[1604] 3062 N.43.

This codex is listed as a copy of Aetius Amidenus, Libri medicinales.

As Mercati 1917: 53-54 has demonstrated, this is actually a Parisinus graecus, which contains a catalogue of the Greek manuscripts in the Biblioteca Vaticana. This catalogue lists a Vatican copy of Aetius Amidenus, Libri medicinales.

This information probably comes from Costomiris 1890: 176.

See also [1605].

Same incorrect information as above [1604].

See Mercati 1917: 53-54, and Costomiris 1890: 176.

[1606] 4423 I.111.

This item is identified as a copy of Galenus, Definitiones medicae.

This is not the Greek text of the treatise, but its early 16th-century Latin translation by Euphronymus Boninus (Frosino Bonino [fl. 1497-1525]).

Durling 1993: 299.

[1607] 7152 II.65.

This copy of Mercurius monachus, De pulsibus is not in Greek, but in Latin.

It is listed in Diels' catalogue with a reference to "Daremborg, Not. et Extr. I p. 143 sq." (= Daremborg 1851-1853: 143), where the manuscript is mentioned on the basis of "cardinal A. Mai (Classici auct. T. IV, p. XIII)", that is, Mai 1831: XII-XIV.

As Mai 1831: XIII explicitly mentioned, this item is not a Vaticanus graecus, but a Vaticanus latinus ("... 7152, seriei latinae ..."). It contains on ff. 90-91 the text referred to in Diels' catalogue, but in Latin and under the title Abytiani sive Mercurii Monachi dissertatio De pulsibus.

 Graux, ed. Martin 1892: 153-154.
 Current shelfmark: M 7.
- [1612] (Epistt. septem) II. 70.
 This manuscript listed without shelfmark under Oribasius, Opera varia, seems to be current codex M 567 in the Biblioteca General Histórica of the Universidad de Salamanca.
 A note “Oribasius. De medicina epistola VII” appears in this manuscript, f. IIr, although no such text can be found in it (see Tovar 1963: 82 “unde idem auctor [i.e. Diels] hauserit notitiam Salamantini cuiusdam codicis continentis epistulas septem Oribasii nescio”; also Martínez Manzano 2005: 290-291).
 The information probably comes from the list of manuscripts at Salamanca, University library, compiled by Volger 1859, where a manuscript identified as follows is listed (see p. 377, sub Oribasio):
 Oribasio. De medicina epistolae septem. (Un tomo en fol. pasta antigua, en tabla, bien cons. sin foliar, en griego).
 Although such text is not present in it, the manuscript referred to here seems to be current M 567. The source of the identification of this manuscript as a copy of Oribasius’ supposed Epistolae septem is unknown.
 Same as [1610].

17 II.40.

On September 3-4, 1890, a fire ravaged the Gymnasium (Serruys 1903: 73, 77). It did not destroy the holdings of the library (contrary to Congourdeau 1996: 99n1), although it damaged many of them (Serruys 1907: 12-13, 77-78). The manuscripts were catalogued in 1903 by Serruys. Their numbers (from 1 to 79) have been introduced by Serruys.

For the present item, see Serruys 1903: 28-30.

Most of the manuscript of this collection are now in Athens, at the National Library (Olivier 1995: 781 no. 2287).

This item is currently Αθήνα, Εθνική Βιβλιοθήκη της Ελλάδος ΕΒΕ (Athens, National Library of Greece–EBE), 2086 (see above, p. 14).

[1615] nr. 209 I.38.

This is a copy of Hippocrates, Epistulae.

As Diels' catalogue mentions, this is a 17th/18th-century manuscript.

It contains (ff. 107r-138v) Hippocrates, Epistula ad Damagetem.

Catalogue général des manuscrits 1887: 187.

It is a French translation of a manuscript owned by the French scholar, numismatist, and curator of medals at the king's numismatic cabinet Marc-Antoine Oudinet (1645-1712) (see ibid. "traduction d'un manuscrit d'Oudinet, graveur des médailles du Roi").

[1616] Miscell. 187 I.5.

The mention “Miscell.” does not belong to the shelfmark of this manuscript, which is listed as a copy of Hippocrates, Prognosticon.

This is a printed edition (Paris, 1560) of Methodus sex librorum Galeni in differentiis et causis morborum, with commentaries by Jacques Dubois (better known as Sylvius) (1478-1555) with 17th-century handwritten notes in Latin, also including the following according to the catalogue (below):

(No. 4) Fol. 328. “Aphorismi ex libro Prognosticorum ... Hippocratis.”

The text is contained on ff. 328r-356r.

Catalogue général des manuscrits 1887: 184-185; Alexanderson 1963: 89-90.

Turin (Torino [Turin]) (IT)Bibl. Nazionale (Universitaria) (National University Library)

Shelfmark systems changed over time. The first system can be found in the catalogue published in 1749 by Pasini et al. (where the manuscripts also have a sequential number appearing before the shelfmark). The second system (currently used) appears in the catalogue by Cosentini 1922 (in which manuscripts are also numbered sequentially, with their previous shelfmark [= Pasini et al. 1749]. There is no table of concordance between ancient and new shelfmarks). Tables of concordance for all of the library's shelfmark systems can be found in Eleuteri 1990.

Apart from [1621] and [1622], which are not identified by any shelfmark, the manuscripts of Torino are identified in three different ways in Diels' catalogue:

- Items [1623]–[1624] and [1627]–[1631] are identified by their sequential number in Pasini et al. 1749 (this number is written in Arabic numerals in Diels' catalogue, whereas it is in Roman numerals in the 1749 catalogue). This number is followed by the shelfmark of the manuscripts according to Pasini et al. 1749. In [1624], this shelfmark is followed by the recent one;
- Manuscripts [1625] and [1626] are identified by the sequential number as assigned in the catalogue of Zuretti 1896, followed by their new shelfmark;
- Codices [1632]–[1634] are identified by their new shelfmarks. For [1632] and [1633], this shelfmark is followed, between parentheses, by the sequential Arabic number and the shelfmark from Pasini et al. 1749. For [1634] the shelfmark is followed, between parentheses, by the shelfmark in Pasini et al. 1749.

There are 3 pairs of duplicates (manuscripts identified according to two of the systems used in Diels' catalogue as above):

- [1623] is the same as [1624], the latter adding the new shelfmark;
- [1629] identified according to Pasini et al. 1749 is the same as [1632] identified according to its new shelfmark;
- [1630] and [1633], the former identified according to Pasini et al. 1749 and the latter according to its new shelfmark.

Several manuscripts were destroyed in the fire that ravaged the library in 1904 (see Gorrini 1905 and, more recently Eleuteri 1990).

[1621]

? II.71.

This manuscript listed without any identifier is supposedly a codex of Oribasius, Medicae collectiones ad Iulianum.

According to the index in Cosentini 1922: 199–219, the only Taurinensis containing a text by Oribasius is B VII 36 (on which see ibid. 34 [no. 278]). This codex does not contain the Medicae collectiones ad Iulianum, but a text identified as follows by Cosentini:

Oribasius, Anatomica ex libris Galeni desumta.

This text is not listed in the short description by Pasini et al. 1749: 415–416 (no. CCCXXXIII with shelfmark b. I. 1).

Probably same as [1631].

- [1622] - («zitiert bei Montfaucon 1837 ‘Gal. I.64. de IV elementis’; nicht verifiziert»)

This manuscript identified by means of a reference to a not otherwise identified work by Montfaucon and the title of a Galenic work is supposed to be a copy of Galenus, De elementis secundum Hippocratem.

The information may come from Ackermann 1821: LXXV, no. 8, where a manuscript “In Taurin.” is mentioned (without brackets) without further element of identification.

The reference to Montfaucon in Diels’ catalogue is to Montfaucon 1739. However, the number 1837 is incorrect as Montfaucon, Bibliotheca bibliothecarum contains only 1669 pages. Nevertheless, a work similar to the one referred to here and described as follows can be found at page 1397:

Ejusd[em] (i.e. Galeni) lib. de quattuor elementis, in-4°. graec.

This codex appears in a list published in Montfaucon 1739: 2.1393-1402 under the following title (on this list see Blume 1824-1827: 1.80):

Catalogus Manuscriptorum Serenissimi Principis Sardiniae Regis accepti ab ejus Bibliothecario P. Josepho Roma Ordinis Minimorum, Viro eruditissimo, in Taurinensi Universitate Regio Professore ...

This item might correspond to B. V. 39 (see above, p. 315), in which a text identified as follows can be found according to Pasini et al. 1749: 379-380, no. CCLXXV with shelfmark c. I. 29 (reproduced in Cosentini 1922: 27-28 [no. 222]):

Varia primo loco habentur opuscula, seu potius excerpta ab ipso Darmario ad medicinam spectantia, in quibus de natura hominis, de quattuor elementis, de partibus humani corporis, aliisque similibus agitur, parvi tamen momenti.

On this manuscript, see Pasini et al. 1749: 379-380, no. CCLXXV. c. I. 29; Cosentini 1922: 27-28 (no. 222).

- [1623] 6 b IV 6 I.126; II.63.

This item has a sequential number VI in Pasini et al. 1749: 70, with a shelfmark b. IV. 6. See also Cosentini 1922: 13-14 (no. 84).

Current shelfmark: B. I. 6.

Same as [1623].

- [1625] 8 B V 31 (B VI 29) I.111.

This codex is sequentially numbered 8 in Zuretti 1896: 205-206, with shelfmark B. V. 31 (B. VI. 29).

Although Diels’ catalogue does not mention it, this manuscript (with shelfmark B. V. 31) is no longer available as it was destroyed in the fire that ravaged the library in 1904 (it does not appear in Cosentini 1922; see also Eleuteri 1990: 31).

- [1626] 17 B VII 22 (B I 12) I.48, 49, 56, 96, 132, 134, 149; II.41, 58, 64.
 This manuscript bears a sequential number 17 in Zuretti 1896: 211-215, with shelfmark B. VII. 22 (B. I. 12).
 It was B. VII. 22, but it is no longer available as Diels' catalogue noted (Verbrannt) (it is not listed in Cosentini 1922; see also Eleuteri 1990: 32).
- [1627] 156 b II 10 I.5; II.63, 110.
 This item is numbered sequentially CLVI in Pasini et al. 1749: 243-344, with shelfmark b. II. 10.
 Cosentini 1922: 42 (no. 356).
 Current shelfmark: C. VI. 10.
- [1628] 177 b II 31 I.41.
 This manuscript has a sequential number CLXXVII in Pasini et al. 1749: 261-265, with shelfmark b. II. 31.
 This manuscript has been preserved contrary to Diels' information (Verbrannt).
 See Cosentini 1922: 25-26 (no. 206); Eleuteri 1990: 31.

- [1631] 333 b I 1 II.59, 74, 89, 93.
 This item is sequentially numbered CCCXXXIII in Pasini et al. 1749: 415-416, with shelfmark b. I. 1.
 Its shelfmark was B. VII. 36.
 Whereas Diels' catalogue mentions that it was much damaged by fire ("Durch Feuer stark beschädigt") and Cosentini 1922: 34 (no. 278) marks it with an asterisk (*) indicating that it was heavily damaged by the 1904 fire (see Id.: 5n(8): "I manoscritti preceduti da un asterisco * sono assai danneggiati dall'incendio del 1904"), it is listed between brackets by Eleuteri 1999: 32, meaning that it is currently unavailable (see Id.: 39n10: “Le parentesi quadre stanno ad indicare che il codice non è attualmente presente”).

Urbini et Pisauri (Urbino and Pesaro) (IT)

Bibl. Ducis (Bibliotheca Ducis [Duke's Library])

- [1639] - II.40.
 According to Diels, this copy of Gregorius Nyssenus, De conditione hominis is lost (Verbleib unbekannt).
 The Duke of Urbino and Pesaro is Francesco Maria II Della Rovere (1549-1631). His collection of manuscripts was assembled by Federico da
 Montefeltro (1422-1482), and was transferred to the Vatican Library in 1631 (D'Aiuto 2011/2).
 No Greek copy of Gregorius Nyssenus, De conditione hominis seems to appear among the Greek Urbinati manuscripts (see Stornajolo 1895, especially 339, the Index Auctorum, Operum et Rerum Notabilium, sub nomine Gregorius).
 Similarly, no such copy of the work appears among Federico de Montefeltro's manuscripts listed in the so-called "Inventarium vetus" (or "Indice Vecchio") compiled ca. 1487 and published by Stornajolo 1895: CLX-CLXXV (Greek manuscripts).
 However, one item with a similar title appears among the Latin manuscripts listed in the "Inventarium vetus" (Stornajolo 1895: LIX-CXXXIX), sub no.
 109. Its description reads as follows (Stornajolo 1895: LXXVII):

109 Basili Hexameron Episcopi neo Caesariensis a Rufino In latinum Conversum. Gregorii Niceni De homine sive Conditione hominis. In Purpureo.

This item corresponds to the current Vaticanus Urbinas latinus 485 (Stornajolo 1902: 494-495, especially 494 for the correspondence between item 109 of the “Inventarium vetus” and current shelfmark).

[1640] cod. Venetus I.60.

In the section on the manuscripts of Galenus, De optima secta ad Thrasybulum liber, reference is made to a codex Venetus considered still unidentified (bisher nicht identifiziert).

Information is not sufficient to allow for any identification.

Bibl. Andreae Asulani (Bibliotheca Andreae Asulani [Andrea Asulanus' library]).

This is a manuscript owned by Andrea Torresanus (also known as Asulanus, 1451-1529), the heir of the Aldine press in Venice.

[1641] - I.59.

This is the manuscript unicum that was the source of Galenī paraphrastae Menodoti suasoria ad artes oratio in the 1525 Aldine edition of Galen published by Andrea Torresanus (on this edition, see Cataldi Palau 1998: 639-640).

According to Diels' catalogue the location of this manuscript is unknown (Verbleib unbekannt). More recently, see Boudon 2002: 46-47.

Bibl. Andreae de Rubeis (gr.?) (Bibliotheca Andreae de Rubeis [Andrea de Rubeis' Library])

Diels' catalogue mentions one manuscript owned, according to Tomasini 1650, by an apparently unknown Andrea de Rubeis (de' Rossi [?]), who possessed, according to the same, 10 manuscripts (most of which apparently in Greek).

[1642] - I.67.

This item, which Diels listed without knowing whether it was a Greek manuscript, is a copy of Galenus, De ossibus ad tirones.

Such a manuscript is listed by Tomasini 1650: 103, among the books “Apud V. Cl. Andream de Rubeis” as “Galenus de ossibus”.

According to Garofalo and Debru 2005: 9n28, this manuscript cannot be found (“reste introuvable”).

Bibl. Josephi de Aromatariis (Bibliotheca Josephi de Aromatariis [Giuseppe degli Aromatari's Library])

Diels' catalogue lists six manuscripts as being owned by Josephus de Aromatariis, who can be identified as the physician Giuseppe degli Aromatari (1587-1660). It does not provide any element of identification other than the texts they contain.

These manuscripts have been listed by Tomasini 1650: 94-95 (Manuscripta Graeca & Latina, quae extant in Bibliotheca Viri celeberrimi D. Iosephi de Aromatariis apud Venetos), which is most likely the source of Diels' information.

On this basis, it is possible to establish a correspondence between Diels' and Tomasini's items.

[1643] - I.67 (2), 70 (2), 84, 109, 113.

These references could refer to a unique manuscript containing a corpus of Galenic treatises (the treatises are listed below in the order of Tomasini's catalogue; references to Diels' catalogue follow the titles):

- De foetus formatione (I.70);
- De musculorum dissectione (I.109);
- De nervorum dissectione (I.67);
- De venarum arteriarumque dissectione (I.67);
- De pulsibus ad Antonium (I.113);
- De causis respirationis (I.70);

These titles correspond to the following entry in Tomasini 1650: 94, col. 1, ll. 16-27 (except "De Hominis structura", "De Quinque sensibus", and "De Respiratione difficili"):

- Galenus de conformatione fetus;
- De Hominis structura;
- De Musculorum resectione, tyronibus;
- De Nervoru[m] dissectione;
- De Venarum resectione;
- De Pulsibus ad Antonium Philologum, & Philosophum;
- De Quinque sensibus;
- De Respirationis causis;
- De Respiratione difficili.

According to all citations in Diels' catalogue, the manuscript cannot be located ("Verbleib unbekannt"). See also Formentin 1978: 23-24, 53 (about De nervorum dissectione), 54 (on De causis respirationis), 57 (on De difficultate respirationis), 63 (on De musculorum dissectione ad tirones), and 64 (on De pulsibus ad Antonium).

[1644] - II.17, 18 (2), 19.

This manuscript contains Aretaeus, De causis et signis acutorum morborum, De causis et signis diuturnorum, De curatione acutorum morborum and De curatione diuturnorum morborum.

This item corresponds exactly to the description by Tomasini 1650: 94, col. 1, ll. 8-15:

Aretaeus Cappadox de Causis & Signis Acutarum Affectionum. Idem de Causis & Signis Diuturnarum Affectionum. Idem de Acutarum affectionum curatione. Idem de Diuturnarum affectionum curatione.

While this manuscript, according to Diels, cannot be identified (Verbleib unbekannt), according to Formentin 1978: 24 and 76, it is now Berlin, SBB-PKB, Phill. gr. 1531 (= [0127]), which actually contains the four treatises by Aretaeus. See also Cutolo 2012: 26n19.

[1645] - II.49.

This copy of Herophilus, Definitiones pulsuum is described by Tomasini 1650: 94, col. 1, ll. 8-7 ab imo as follows:

Herophili definitiones Pulsuum. Fragmentum.

According to Formentin 1978: 83, this manuscript cannot be located and is probably incorrectly identified as the work is not known by any other copy. Although Herophilus did write on sphygmology (von Staden 1989: 262-288, T262), no manuscript of the work has been located so far.

[1646] - II.96.

This is a copy of Stephanus Alexandrinus, Scholia in Hippocratis praenotiones.

It corresponds to the following entry in Tomasini 1650: 94, col. 2, ll. 1-3:

Scholia, cum Deo, in Prognosticum Hippocratis, ex auditione (sive ore) Stephani Atheniensis.

The work or fragments of it are preserved in nine manuscripts (Duffy 1983: 13-19):

- Florentinus Laurentianus 59.14 (= [0304]) probably acquired by Janus Lascaris (1445-1534) in 1491-92 for the Medici library (Fryde 1996: 646, 790);
- Londinensis Wellcome 354 (see p. 122) attributed to Andreas Darmarios (b. 1540) (Moorat 1962: 225), with the text under Damascius' name;
- Mediolanensis Ambrosianus A 27 inf. (= [0662]) from the Pinelli collection (Martini and Bassi 1906: 882);
- Mediolanensis Ambrosianus L 30 sup. (= [0637]) owned by Girolamo Mercuriale (1530-1606) and purchased in Pisa, where Mercuriale taught (Martini and Bassi 1906: 566);
- Mediolanensis Ambrosianus Trotti 373 (see p. 136), owned by the Trivulzio family (Pasini 1997: 78-79);
- Parisinus graecus 2296 (= [1244]) owned by Gian Francesco d'Asola (Asulanus; ca. 1498-1157/58) and transferred to the Bibliothèque royale in Paris sometimes in the 1540s (Cataldi Palau 1998: 385-389);
- Vindobonensis medicus graecus 15 (= [1778]) purchased by Augier de Busbecq in Constantinople (Hunger and Kresten 1969: 59);
- Yalensis Scholae medicae 50 (see p. 166) attributed to Andreas Darmarios (Escobar Chico 1993: 85), with the text ascribed to Damascius and an ex-libris of Sra Isabel Reyna Hungria, dated 1779 on the anterior plate of the binding, internal side.

None of these descriptive elements suggests the identity of the item under discussion here, which remains unknown as Formentin 1978: 91 considered.

[1647] - II.101.

This manuscript of Theophilus, De pulsibus is described in Tomasini 1650: 94, col. 1, l. 5 ab imo as follows:

Theophilus de Pulsibus.

According to Formentin 1978: 24 and 94, it is now Berlin, SBB-PKB, Phil. gr. 1531 (= [0127]). See also Cutolo 2012: 26n19.

[1648] - I.115, 119, 125, 133.

Diels' catalogue mentions four more Galenic treatises as pertaining to Giuseppe de Aromatari (listed here in alphabetical order by titles; references to Diels' catalogue follow the titles):

- De consuetudinibus (I.119);
- De quinque sensibus (I.115);
- De victu mensium (I.125);
- Remedia (I.133).

Only the first title appears in Tomasini 1650: 94, col. 1, l. 28, among the items of de Aromatari's library, under the title that the treatise had in historiography at that time: "Claudius Galenus de Moribus".

It is not known if the other three treatises were either in the same volume but not listed by Tomasini, if each was a volume in its own right and none were catalogued by Tomasini, or if this is a mistake in Diels' catalogue.

Formentin 1978: 65 (on De quinque sensibus) and 66 (about De consuetudinibus) determines that these volumes cannot be located.

Bibl. Mon. St. Michael. (Bibliotheca Monasterii Sancti Michaelis [Library of St. Michael's Monastery])

[1649] [-] I.64.

This manuscript listed without shelfmark in Diels' catalogue is supposed to be a copy of Galen, De elementis secundum Hippocratem.

It does not appear in Mittarelli 1779. The information comes from Ackermann 1821: LXXV, no. 8 (without brackets), where the manuscript is identified as mont. S. Mich. without any other element of identification.

Ackermann's spelling mont. S. Mich. instead of monast. St. Michael. as in Diels I.14 (= [1650]) or Monast. St. Michaelis prope Murianum as in Diels I.92 (= [1651]), seems to refer to the library of the monastery of Mont Saint-Michel (montis Sancti Michaelis, abbreviated mont. S. Mich.) in France (actually, Avranches), rather than to the monastery of San Michele in Murano, Italy.

The Avranches library owns a copy of De elementis Hippocratis secundum Hippocratem (shelfmark: 232), listed in Diels I.64 among the Latin copies of the Hippocratic treatise, under Avranches.

On this manuscript, see Catalogue général des manuscrits 1872: 543-545; see 544, no. 9 for the text referred to here. Also Thorndike and Kibre 1963: 1274 (under Quoniam elementum minima est particula ...), and Kibre 1985: 135.

Bibl. monast. St. Michael. (Bibliotheca monasterii Sancti Michaelis [Library of St. Michael's Monastery]).

Although there is no mention of Murano as in [1651]-[1652], this is a reference to the library of San Michele of Murano, which has been dispersed (Merolla 2010).

[1650]

104 I.14.

This is a copy of Hippocrates, Aphorismi.

It is listed in Mittarelli 1779: 508:

Hippocrates Chius. "Aphorismata." Ext. in Cod. 104.

Similar information (without the number 104, however) is found in Ackermann 1825: LXV (including the reference to Mittarelli 1779: 508), where it is among additions by K. (= Kühn).

Formentin 1978: 23, conjectures that this item could be the manuscript of Oxford, Bodleian Library, Holkham 106 (p. 181 and also [0406]) which contains indeed Hippocrates, Aphorismi. However, since Mittarelli 1779: 508, does not mention that it is in Greek (as he usually does when such is the case), this item seems rather to be a Latin manuscript (as Formentin 1978: 43 mentions; see also Magdelaine 1994: 88n1 and 185n3).

Given the paucity of the information, the present item cannot be identified with any of the Latin manuscripts of the treatise listed by Kibre 1985: 29-90. No identification is provided in Merolla 2010: 98. The manuscript is possibly lost.

Mioni 1958: 319; Merolla 2010: 98.

Bibl. Monast. St. Michaelis prope Murianum (Bibliotheca Monasterii Sancti Michaelis prope Murianum [Library of St Michael's Monastery, in Murano]), now San Michele di Murano (St. Michael of Murano).

The manuscripts of this library are no longer at the Monastery.

[1651]

93 I.92.

This is a copy of Galenus, Methodi medendi libri XIV.

This manuscript is listed in Mittarelli 1779: 424, item 2 sub nomine Galenus, where it is described as follows:

Idem [i.e. Galenus]. "Methodus Therapeutice." Codex Graecus chartac. in fol. Sec. XIV. Num. 93. cum notis marginalibus Graecis, aliquibus autem Latinis. Initio Codicis legitur: Iste liber est mei Jani Podocathari Equitis regii & legum Doctoris, nunc autem mei Francisci Barbari. Ad calcem bis legitur Graecis vocibus: Hic liber est Johannis filii domini Manuelis ...

It is now London, British Library, Add. 6898 (= [0527]).

Richard 1952: 6; Mioni 1958: 334-335; Diller 1963: 259 (no. 1600); Formentin 1978: 22-23, 58; Merolla 2010: 93.

[1652]

132 I.74.

This is a copy of Galenus, De placitis Hippocratis et Platonis libri IX.

The manuscript is listed twice in Mittarelli 1779: 424, item 1 sub nomine Galenus:

Galenus. "De Hippocratis & Platonis dogmatibus libri septem." Codex Graecus in folio num. 132. sed initio & fine mutilus, atque desunt primus, & initium secundi libri.

and 508, sub nomine Hippocrates:

It is now Berlin, SBB-PKB, Ms. Ham. 270 (= [0116]).

Mioni 1958: 335; Formentin 1978: 22; De Lacy 2005: 12-18; Merolla 2010: 108-109.

Bibl. Nazionale Marciana (Biblioteca Nazionale Marciana [Marciana National Library]), now Biblioteca Nazionale San Marco (San Marco National Library)

Diels' catalogue identifies most of the items of this collection by their sequential number in the catalogue of Zanetti and Bongiovanni 1740. In [1665] and [1667], however, it includes a second number between parentheses, with the precision “jetzt” (= “now”), as if this second number was a new shelfmark. This number is the so-called “collocazione”, which is part of the complete identification of the items in the Biblioteca Nazionale Marciana.

The list of all the Marciani of this collection that are mentioned here is given again (together with other Veneti codices not mentioned by Diels) under Venezia, Biblioteca Nazionale San Marco, with the so-called Zanetti number followed by the “collocazione” (see below, pp. 338-345).

[1653]

[Marcian.] I.20 (2).

This manuscript listed without shelfmark in Diels' catalogue is Hippocrates, Coacae praenotiones and Praenotiones, liber I.

Similar vague information appears in Ackermann 1825: LIX (Praedictiones), and CXIV, no. 2 ctd. (Coacae praenotiones), in both cases without brackets:

in bibl. S. Marci

in bibl. D. Marci Ven.

According to Formentin 1978: 43 and 44, this manuscript could be Marcianus gr. 269 (= [1662]).

See also [1654] and [1656].

[Marcian.] I.124.

According to Diels, this manuscript listed without shelfmark is a copy of Hippocrates, Praenotiones, liber II.

This item should probably be grouped with [1653] and could be Marcianus gr. 269 (= [1662]), according to Formentin 1978: 46.

See [1653] and also [1656].

[1655]

[Marcian. ?] I.10.

This item listed without shelfmark in Diels' catalogue is a copy of Hippocrates, De morbis popularibus, I et III.

The paucity of the information does not allow for an identification. It may be the same as [1657]. In this case, it is not a copy of the Hippocratic treatise, but of the Galenic commentary on it.

[1656] [?] I.33.

This manuscript listed without shelfmark in Diels' catalogue is a copy of Hippocrates, Praenotiones, Liber II.

According to Formentin 1978: 46, this could be Marcianus graecus 269 (= [1662]).

The text is listed in the index of the manuscript, but is no longer present because of the loss of folios after f. 408.

Also [1653] and [1654].

[1657] [ap. Montf. I 472] I.10.

This manuscript listed without any other element of identification than a reference to a work by Montfaucon not otherwise identified, is a copy of Hippocrates, De morbis popularibus, I et III.

The same information is found in Ackermann 1825: XXXIX (without brackets), who mentions "in bibl. D. Marci Ven, teste Montfauc. I. p. 472" with no further element of identification.

The reference is to Montfaucon 1739: 1.472, col. 1, item 5, where the following item can be found:

Galenī expositio in epidemias Hippocratis, in papyro

This is not a copy of the Hippocratic treatise, but of Galen's commentary on it (see also Formentin 1978: 42).

Four Marciani contain Galen's commentary on the Epidemiae:

- gr. 283 (coll. 631) (= [1680]), on paper, from Bessarion's collection;
- gr. 285 (coll. 708) (= [1683]), on parchment, from Bessarion's collection;
- app. gr. V.5 (coll. 1053) (= [1714]), on parchment, from the library of the San Giovanni e Paolo monastery;
- app. gr. V.15 (coll. 1299) (= [1727]), on paper, from the Nani collection.

Based on the medium and the provenance, the item listed by Montfaucon could correspond to gr. 283 (coll. 631) (= [1680]), unless it is another copy that is now lost. See, however, [1655].

[1658] 92 II.25, 30, 32, 79.

This codex is listed among the copies of the following four works (alphabetical order of author's name; references to Diels' catalogue follow the titles):

- Cratevas, De herbis (II.25);
- Dioscorides, De materia medica (II.30);
- Pseudo-Dioscorides, De venenis (II.35);
- Paulus Aegineta, De succedaneis ex Galeno (II.70).

Manuscript Marcianus graecus 92 (coll. 425) contains Iohannes Chrysostomus (Mioni 1981: 135-136).

The manuscript referred to here is current Marcianus appendix graeca XI, 21 (coll. 453) (see p. 344) (Mioni 1959: 374n70; Formentin 1978: 3, 77, 79; Touwaide 1981: 150-153).

Contrary to the indication in Diels' catalogue ("Venedig Marcian."), this manuscript was not originally among the holdings of the Biblioteca Nazionale Marciana in Venice, but in the collection of Giacomo Nani (1725-1797) catalogued by Mingarelli 1784. However, the manuscript Nanianus XCII (= 92) described by Mingarelli 1784: 180-182, contains Patrum vitae et narrationes. As Mioni 1967: XXV indicates, it corresponds to current appendix graeca II.70 (described in Mioni 1967: 197-204).

From the content in Diels, it appears that the manuscript referred to in Diels' catalogue was Nani CCLII (see Mingarelli 1784: 445-447). It was bequeathed to the Biblioteca Marciana (with Nani's whole collection). Mioni 1967: XXVI establishes the identification with current appendix graeca XI.21 (coll. 453) (on which see below, p. 344).

The number 92 in Diels' catalogue may come from Wellmann 1897: 23. It is repeated in much of the subsequent literature (among others Premierstein 1906: 185; Wellmann 1906-1914: 2.XX; Singer 1921: 65; Kourilas 1935: 28-29) until Mioni 1959: 374n70, who established the correspondence with current Marcianus appendix graeca XI.21 (coll. 453) (nevertheless, see MacKinney 1965: 180, no. 9, where the manuscript is identified as MS 92).

appendix graeca

Diels' catalogue includes a mention "olim Nanian." in [1709], [1722] and [1724], and "olim Na." in [1726]. This mention is followed by a number in Arabic numerals. This information refers to the collection of Giacomo Nani (1725-1797) catalogued by Mingarelli 1784 and bequeathed to the Biblioteca Marciana. These manuscripts entered the library after Nani's death. A table of concordance can be found in Mioni 1967: XXV-XXVI. This reference to Nani's collection is not part of the current shelfmark of the manuscripts.

 According to Diels' catalogue, this manuscript listed without any identifier is a copy of Hippocrates, Aphorismi.
 The library of San Antonio monastery in Venice held the collection formed by Cardinal Domenico Grimani (1461-1523). Several catalogues and inventories of this collection have been published by Diller et al. 2003. In the first catalogue (probably compiled in 1522 when the cardinal's collection was moved from Rome to Venice), a manuscript of the Hippocratic Aphorismi can be found (see p. 157, no. 331). The text is listed in the analytical index of San Antonio library possibly compiled ca. 1545 (Diller et al. 2003: 177 [H27], shelfmark 3.11.331). It is no longer included in the list dating to 1598 (published in Diller et al. 2003: 191-195) or in the library catalogue compiled by Giovanni Filippo Tomasini and published in 1650 (ff. 15v-18v, reproduced in Diller et al. 2003: 197-203).
 Whereas this manuscript was considered lost by Formentin 1978: 21-22, according to Diller et al. 2003: 157 (no. 331), it corresponds to current manuscript Vienna, historicus graecus 130 (= [1763]). According to Hunger 1961: 133, the manuscript contains a note referring to a 1490 acquisition. See also Magdelaine 1994: 90 and 162-163.
- [1736] [-] I.20.
 This manuscript listed without shelfmark in Diels' catalogue is a copy of Hippocrates, De humoribus.
 A mention of this manuscript is made in Ackermann 1825: CXVI, no. 3 ctd.: "in bibl. S. Anton. Ven."
 This manuscript was in the collection of Cardinal Domenico Grimani (on which see [1735]). It is listed in the 1522 catalogue (Diller et al. 2003: 120, no. 69, l. 1) and in the 1545 ca. analytical index of San Antonio library (Diller et al. 2003: 177 [H5], shelfmark 3.6.69). It no longer appears in the subsequent catalogues (1598 and 1650).
 Considered to be lost by Formentin 1978: 21-22, it corresponds to the current manuscript Paris, graecus 2253 (= [1184]) according to Diller et al. 2003: 120, no. 69, and Jackson 2009: 105.

Omont 1891: 6-7; Mioni 1965: 2.498-499; Marchi 1996: 216.

[1738] 57 II.108.

This is a copy of Ioannes Zacharias Actuarius, Opera.

According to Formentin 1978: 27-28, Diels' catalogue probably reproduced one item taken from Montfaucon 1739: 1.490. There (line E9), Montfaucon mentions the following item:

57. Actuarius

This manuscript appears in a collection identified as follows (Montfaucon 1739: 1.490): In Museo Joannis Saibante. According to the same, the information was reproduced from the following source:

In Verona Illustrata V. CL. D. Scipionis Maffei, parte tertia pag. 242.

In Maffei, Verona Illustrata, Parte terza, 1732 (in-folio edition), the manuscript referred to here did not belong to the Biblioteca Capitolare of Verona contrary to Diels, but to the 18th-century Veronese book collector Giovanni Saibante (fl. 1732). His collection is catalogued in Maffei 1732: 3.241-244, and the manuscript numbered 57 appears in column 244 (and note 242 as in Montfaucon 1739). This catalogue of Saibante's collection in Maffei 1732 is directly followed by the list of the Manoscritti Capitolari (Maffei 1732: 3.244-251), something that may have created confusion in Diels.

Whereas Formentin (above) considers this manuscript lost, it is Oxford, Bodleian Library, Auct. T. 4. 3 (= [0862] and [0863]), as was clear from Coxe 1853: 774-809; more recently, Jeffreys 1977: 258.

Mazzatinti 1892: 10.

This is not a Greek copy of Oribasius (II.71) and Rufus (II.89), but a Latin translation of Oribasius, De cerebro eiusque tunicis and De ossibus, de musculis et de nervorum distributione, and Rufus, De partium corporis appellationibus, as Formentin 1978: 28 noticed. Instead of Rufus, however, she mentions Paul of Aegina, whose text is not present in the manuscript according to Mazzatinti's catalogue.

Bibl. Zamoyski (Bibliotheca Zamoyski [Zamoyski Library])

[1740] 142 I.61.

According to Diels' catalogue, this is a copy of Galenus, Ars medica.

Although most manuscripts of this library were destroyed during World War II, codex 142 has been preserved (Aland 1956: 20). After the war, the remaining items of the Zamoyski library were transferred to the Biblioteka Narodowa (see p. 347).

The codex 142 (Current shelfmark:BN BOZ 142) does not contain Galen's Ars medica (Foerster 1900: 444; Aland 1956: 22; Canart 1974: 554-555), but mostly Herennius, Commentarius in Aristotelis Metaphysicae libros. Aland 1956: 22. For an analysis of the manuscript, see Foerster 1900: 435-448.

Contrary to Boudon 2002: 197n109 ctd, this manuscript can, in fact, be found. The information contained in Diels results from an unaccountable mistake.

37 Gregorius Nyssenens, De hominis opificio (frg.).

A bifolium (actually the first of a quire signed as number 8 on the verso of the current second folio). Black and white reproduction in Jaeger 1947: plates I-IV.

A description (with an incorrect identification of the text) is provided in de Ricci and Wilson 1935: 211.

This bifolium is incorrectly quoted in the literature under the sequential number 60 that it received in de Ricci and Wilson 1935: ibid. (see for example Jaeger 1947; Mercati 1956; Olivier 1995: 830; and, more recently Canart and Lucà 2000: 43).

As Jaeger 1947 noticed, this bifolium comes from manuscript Vaticanus graecus 2066 (see p. 304).

[1741] (bei Berth.-Ruelle, Alchim. gr. I p. 56-69) II.100.

This manuscript listed in Diels' catalogue without library name and shelfmark, is vaguely identified in Berthelot and Ruelle 1888 referred to in the catalogue.

In the edition of Synesius Cyrenensis, Ad Dioscorum, scholia in librum Democriti (published in Berthelot and Ruelle 1888: 56-69), reference is made (p. 56) to an unidentified Vienna manuscript ("le ms. de Vienne").

In the edition of Pelasgius, De chrysopoeia contained in the same work (Berthelot and Ruelle 1888: 253-261), reference is made to the Vienna codices 51 and 52 (ibid.: 253).

Also, in the edition of Ostanes, De chrysopoeia that follows (Berthelot and Ruelle 1888: 261-262) reference is made (ibid.: 261) to one manuscript (“le ms. de Vienne dit Codex medicus gr. 51”).

No mention of one or more Vienna manuscript(s) is made in the “Note préliminaire sur les abréviations, les sigles des manuscrits, etc.” (Berthelot and Ruelle 1888: 2), which precedes the several editions contained in the same volume.

The Vienna collection owns two manuscripts (twin codices dating back to 1564) that contain Synesius Cyrenensis, Pelasgius, and Ostanes:

- medicus graecus 2 (see below, p. 357): (ff. 47v-53r) Synesius Cyrenensis; (ff. 37r-40v) Pelasgius; (ff. 40v-41r) Ostanes;
- medicus graecus 3 (= [1767]): (ff. 36v-40r) Pelasgius; (ff. 40v-41r) Ostanes; (ff. 47v-52v), Synesius Cyrenensis.

The reference to “le ms. de Vienne” (singular, in Berthelot and Ruelle 1888: 56) and to the “Codex medicus 51” (ibid.: 261) seem to indicate that only the manuscript medicus graecus 2 was intended in Diels’ catalogue, although medicus graecus 2 and 3 are almost identical (on both manuscripts, see Hunger and Kresten 1969: 41-43 and 44-46 respectively).

See below (p. 357) for medicus graecus 2 and [1767] for medicus graecus 3.

XI.167 N.27 (2), 28, 30, 39, 51, 56 (2), 63 (2), 65, 66.

Diels’ catalogue confuses two different manuscripts:

- all references (except N.30) are about the item with shelfmark XI.167;
- N.30 is about Galenus, De usu partium, which is not in XI.167 (Gollob 1908: 1-12), but in another codex of the same collection: XI.132 (on which Gollob 1908: 12-13).

Both manuscripts are now Città del Vaticano, Biblioteca Apostolica Vaticana (table of concordance of shelfmarks in Canart and Peri 1970: 322-323):

- XI.167 is now Rossianus 1018;
- XI.132 is now Rossianus 982. On this codex, see also [1442].

On these two manuscripts see pp. 55-56, Città del Vaticano, Biblioteca Apostolica Vaticana.

- N.27.

This miscellaneous manuscript contains on ff. 143r-162v Hippocrates, Epistulae. When Diels’ catalogue was compiled, it belonged to Eduard Gollob (1856-1922), in Krems (Gollob 1903: 29-31).

It is now in Wien, Österreichische Nationalbibliothek, Supplementum graecum 179 (Hunger and Hannick 1994: 313–315) (see below, p. 366).

Hofbibliothek (Court Library), now Österreichische Nationalbibliothek (National Library of Austria)

In the list of the manuscripts preserved by that library, Diels' catalogue refers to three different printed catalogues about items [1744]–[1757]:

- in [1744]–[1751], references to Lambec. are to Petri Lambecii, Commentariorum de Augustissima Bibliotheca Caesarea Vindobonensi Liber primus [secundus and sextus]. Vindobonae: Typis Matthaei Cosmerovii, 1665, 1669, 1674 respectively;
- in [1752]–[1754], references to Lambec. ed. Kollar are to Petri Lambecii Hamburgensis, Commentariorum de Augustissima Bibliotheca Caesarea Vindobonensis Liber primus (secundus, ... usque ad octavum). Editio altera opera et studio Adam Francisci Kollarii ..., 8 vols. Vindobonae: Typis et sumptibus Ioan. Thomae nob. de Trattnern, 1766–1782;
- in [1755]–[1756] (to which [1757] must be added), references to Nessel are to D. Danielis de Nessel, Breviarium & Supplementum Commentariorum Lambecianorum, Sive Catalogus aut Recensio specialis Codicum Mstorum Graecorum, nec non Linguarum Orientalium Augustissimae Bibliothecae Caesareae Vindobonensis ..., 2 vols. [1744]

[ap. Lambec. I 181] I.65, 83, 89.

This manuscript is supposed to contain the following three Galenic treatises (order of Diels' catalogue):

- De facultatibus naturalibus (I.65);
- De marcore (I.83);
- De crisibus libri III (I.89).

The information comes from Ackermann 1821 (where the same reference to Lambecius can be found, without brackets) (same order of texts as above):

- LXXXI, no. 14 ctd.: De facultatibus naturalibus;
- CXXXIII, no. 61: De marcore;
- CVIII, no. 43: De crisibus libri III.

The notice about this manuscript in Lambecius, Liber primus, p. 181 (published in 1665) reads as follows (ll. 14–24):

Claudii Galeni Opuscula quaedam Medica; nempe ... de Marasmo sive marcore, ..., de Facultatibus naturalibus, ..., de Crisibus, ...; translata ex Arabica in Hebraicam linguam à R. Chanim Ben Isaac ante annos plùs minùs sexcentos ... Codex prestantissimus partim in membranâ, partim in chartâ; fol. N. 24.

According to this description, this is a Hebrew manuscript which contains the Compendium Alexandrinum of Galen's works translated from Arabic into Hebrew. Ackermann 1821: CXXXIII, no. 61 (who lists the manuscripts under "graeci" with a reference to "Lamb. I. p. 181") includes it in the same paragraph as "Hebraicus cod. Ex arabico versus a R. Chanin ben Isaac ... in bibl. Vind. Lamb. Ed. Koll. I, p. 290).

The current shelfmark at the Österreichische Nationalbibliothek is Cod. Hebr. 29.

See Schwarz 1925: 187-191.

[1745]

[ap. Lamb. II c. 6] I.98.

This is supposed to be a copy of Galenus, De compositione medicamentorum secundum locos libri X.

The information comes from Ackermann 1821: CXXIV, no. 54 ctd. (without brackets), mentioning that the Vindobonensis referred to by Lambecius II. c. 6 contains only books VI-VIII (“Libri VI. VII. VIII. Codex est in bibl. Vindob. Lamb. II. c. 6.”)

The reference seems to be to Liber Secundus, Chapter 6 in Lambeck 1669 (= p. 465-519). This chapter is entitled “De Henrici Gundelsingij Historia Austriaca hactenus inedita, cujus Codex Mstus ... est inter Mstos Codices Historicos Latinos trecentusimvs vigesimus primus”, where there is no mention of any Greek manuscript containing a treatise by Galen.

The only manuscript containing Galenus, De compositione medicamentorum secundum locos libri X in the current collections of the Österreichische Nationalbibliothek is medicus graecus 15 (= [1778]). However, it contains only fragments of books 1-10 of the work (Hunger and Kresten 1969: 55-59).

No other Vindobonensis seems to contain the treatise. See:

- Hunger 1961: 454 for the Vindobonenses historici and philosophici et philologici;
- Hunger and Kresten 1976: 186 for the theologici 1-100;
- Hunger, Kresten and Hannick 1984: 507 for the theologici 101-200;
- Hunger, Lackner and Hannick 1992: 496 for the theologici 201-337;
- Hunger and Hannick 1994: 379 for the Supplementum.

There was a mistake in Ackermann 1821 (above) followed by Diels, in the reference to Lambeck. It should not have been “II c. 6” (seemingly referring to Liber Secundus, Capitulum 6), but “Pars Secunda Libri VI” (= Lambeck 1674) where a manuscript identified as XXXIV is described (pp. 141-143). This manuscript contains books VI-VIII (as per Ackermann 1821: CXXIV, no. 54 ctd.) of a treatise on medicines by Galen (see Lambeck p. 142). However, this treatise is not De compositione medicamentorum secundum locos but De simplicium medicamentorum temperamentis et facultatibus.

The codex identified as XXXIV in Lambeck (above) corresponds to the current medicus graecus 48 (= [1811]) (Hunger 1953: 31). This manuscript contains (ff. 46r-60v, 62v-114r, 126v-164r) books VI-VIII of De simplicium medicamentorum temperamentis et facultatibus (see Hunger and Kresten 1969: 100; for a description of the whole manuscript, see ibid.: 100-101).

Same as [1811].

[1746]

[Lamb. VI 85] I.8.

This is a copy of Hippocrates, De diaeta (regimine) acutorum.

In Lambeck, Liber sextus, 1674: 85, there is no mention of this treatise in the description of the codex then identified as medicus I. However, De victus ratione (and not de victus ratione acutorum) is mentioned (p. 86) as being in the same codex, ff. 174v-241r.

The codex medicus graecus I of Lambeck 1674 corresponds to the current medicus graecus 4 (Hunger 1953: 31) (= [1768]). This codex contains indeed Hippocrates, De victus ratione on ff. 174v-233v (and not 174v-241r as in Lambeck 1674: ibid.).

Same as [1768].

[Lambec. VI p. 93] I.149.

According to Diels' catalogue, this codex contains Excerpta of Galen.

The reference is to Lambeck, Liber sextus, 1674: 93, ll. 11-16, in the description of codex medicus VIII (ibid.: 92-93) which reads as follows:

Tertiò, et quidem à fol. 11 pag. 1 usque ad fol. 121 pag. 1, Excerpta varia ex Galeno, inter quae praecipuè est Epitome alphabetica (1) Libri sexti, septimi, octavi et noni περι τῆς τῶν ἀπλῶν φαρμάκων δυνάμεως, sive, de Simplicium medicamentorum facultatibus; ...

The manuscript medicus VIII in Lambeck 1674 corresponds to the current medicus 25 (Hunger 1953: 31) (= [1789]). However, according to Hunger and Kresten 1969: 71-72, medicus graecus 25 does not contain any text that can be identified as Galenic excerpta. Nevertheless, the identification in Lambeck 1674 (above) may correspond to the following texts (by Galen or incorrectly attributed to Galen) actually contained in the manuscript (order of the folios in the manuscript):

- (f. 11r-v) Galenus, De theriaca ad Pisonem (frg.);
- (ff. 12r-103r) Paulus Aegineta, Epitome medica (frgs.), inter alia tabula plantarum ex tractatu De simplicium medicamentorum facultatibus desumpta;
- (ff. 103r-131r) Aetius Amidenus, Libri medicinales (frgs.).

It is possibly the same as [1789].

[1748]

[Lambec. VI p. 100] I.149.

This codex is supposed to contain Galenus, Excerpta.

The reference is to Lambeck, Liber sextus, 1674: 100, where four medici manuscripts are described: XI (partim), XII, XIII and XIV (partim). The only one for which Excerpta of Galen are mentioned is XIII, with the following content:

... Continentur eo anonymi cuiusdam Autoris Eclogae sive Excerpta ex variis Hippocratis & Galeni Operibus, ut & ex Aristotelis Problematibus Physicis. Primum inter hasce Eclogas tenent locum Eclogae ex Galeni Libris de Locis affectis.

If this is the text identified as “Excerpta” in Diels' catalogue, medicus XIII of Lambecius is the manuscript referred to here. It corresponds to current medicus 15 (Hunger 1953: 31) (= [1778]).

Also [1755].

[1749] [v. Lambec. VI 145] I.42.

This manuscript is supposed to contain Hippocrates, Medendi methodus.

This text does not appear in Lambeck, Liber sextus, 1674: 145, in the description of the manuscript medicus XXXV (ibid.: 144-152), corresponding to current medicus 16 (Hunger 1953: 31) (= [1780]). It does not appear in the index of Lambeck 1674: 205-206 sub nomine Hippocratis, either.

The current Vindobonensis medicus graecus 16 (= 1780]) does not contain either a text identified (or identifiable) as Hippocrates, Medendi methodus, or the treatise with the same title by Galen.

Diels' catalogue might have merged two different items found in Ackermann 1825: CLXXVII:

- Methodus curandi Hippocratica, for which Ackermann provides the following reference to a manuscript: "... in bibl. Narcissi, archiep. Dublin, nr. 1709". This manuscript is [0230], and is an Arabic manuscript that, according to C.M.A. 1697: 2.2.61, contains a treatise entitled as in Ackermann;
- Hippocrates therapeutica (on the same page in Ackermann 1825), with the following reference to a Vienna manuscript: "in biblioth. Vindob. Lambec. VI. p. 145". This is the information that appears in Diels I.42, but for a treatise entitled Medendi methodus, that is, a title similar to that above, which is provided by Ackermann 1825 for the Dublin manuscript.

[1750] [Lambec. VI p. 151] I.149.

This is a copy of Galenus, Excerpta (Anonymus tabula in libros Galeni).

The reference is to Lambeck, Liber sextus, 1674: 151, where Tabulae Divisionum related to several of Galen's works are mentioned on ff. 329r-359v, in the description of the manuscript medicus XXXV (ibid.: 144-152) corresponding to current medicus 16 (Hunger 1953: 31).

This is the current medicus graecus 16 (= [1780]), where such tables can be found ff. 329r-359v.

[1751] [Lambec. VI p. 153] I.149.

This manuscript is supposed to contain Galenus, Excerpta.

The reference is to Lambeck, Liber sextus, 1674: 153, where the description of the manuscript medicus XXXVII includes the following mention:

... anonymi cuiusdam Autoris Eclogae miscellanea ex Hippocratis, Galeni, aliorumque veterum Medicorum et Philosophorum Operibus ...

The number XXXVII of Lambeck corresponds to the current medicus 13 (Hunger 1953: 31) (= [1776]), which contains a compilation of medical extracts, including by Galen.

[1752] [Lambec. ed. Kollar I p. 272] I.123.

According to Diels' catalogue, this is a copy of Galenus, Iatrosophia.

The reference is to the edition of Lambecius by A. F. Kollar, tome 1 (= 1776), col. 272 (and not p. as in Diels), where this item appears among the corrections made by Kollar to the list of manuscripts in the Constantinopolitan collection of an unidentified Grammaticus published by du Verdier 1585: 57-59 (see [0440]–[0441]). Kollar 1766-1782: 1.272, ll. 1-4, reads as follows:

Ibidem (i.e., “In Catalogo librorum 174, a Grammatico quodam exhibito [Kollar 1766-1782: 1.269, ll. 1-2]); Galenī Medicinale ad Hippocratem. In Codice Caesareo (i.e. in Vindobonensis historicus graecus 98) legitur ‘Ἱατροσόφιον Γαληνοῦ καθ’ Ἱπποκράτους.

This is a correction of du Verdier 1585: 57, col. 2, l. 35, which reads:

Galenī Medicinale ad Hippocratem.

The first edition of this catalogue is by Hartung 1578: Bii recto, no. 13. Recent editions by Foerster 1877: 20, no. ιδ’, and Papazoglu 1983: 380.

The title Galenī Medicinale ad Hippocratem appears in Ackermann 1821: CLXXXVII, § 6, where a reference to “Verdier II 57” can be found.

Since this catalogue is considered to be a forgery (see above, on [0440]–[0441]), this item probably does not correspond to any preserved manuscript. See Papazoglou 1983: 186, no. 14.

[1753]

[ap. Lambec.-Kollar I p. 273] I.124.

This is supposed to be a copy of Galenus, Hippocratis liber resolutionis, quem Galenus explicat.

The reference to “Lambec.-Kollar I p. 273” is to Kollar 1766-1782: 1.273, ll. 12-17 (col. and not p. as in Diels), that is, to Kollar’s correction of the description of this item in du Verdier 1585: 59, col. 1, ll. 48-49 (see above, about [0440] and [0441]).

Diels’ catalogue mistakenly considered that Kollar’s notice refers to a manuscript in the Imperial Library in Vienna, whereas the present item is a correction of the title of item [0440] supposedly in a Constantinopolitan collection.

Since the catalogue in which item [0440] is listed is considered to be a forgery (see above [0440]–[0441]), the item [1753] does not correspond to any extant manuscript.

[1754]

[Lambec. ed. Kollar I p. 275] I.149.

This is supposed to be a copy of Galenus, Excerpta, which, according to Diels’ catalogue, “seems to have pertained to Michael Cantacuzenus” (“Videtur fuisse Mich. Cantacuzeni”).

The reference to “Lambec. ed. Kollar I p. 275” is to Kollar 1766-1782: 1.275 (col. and not p. as in Diels), where corrections to the list of manuscripts once owned by Michael Cantacuzenus published by du Verdier 1585 can be found.

No item specifically identified as containing Excerpta of Galen appears in Kollar 1766-1782: 1.275, unless this is a reference to the manuscript described ibid. as follows (275, l. 41-276, l. 7):

Ibidem (i.e. In Catalogo librorum Michaelis Cantacuzeni ... [275, l. 41-276, l. 7]): Joannici sacri monachi, itemque Cardani et Protesyngeli Corcyrae Insulae, collecta omnia necessaria a tribus Medicis, Hippocrate, Galeno et Melchio [sic].

Quae verba sic supplenda et mutanda sunt: Ἱατροσόφιον, Ἰωάννου ἱερομονάχου τοῦ καὶ ἐπὶ κλῆν Καρτάνου, καὶ Πρωτοσυγκέλλου γενομένου τῆς τῶν Κερκυραίων νήσου, συναχθέν καὶ ἐκλεχθέν ἀπὸ τῶν τριῶν ἱατρῶν Ἱπποκράτους, Γαληνοῦ καὶ Μελετίου.

This notice is about du Verdier 1585: 62, col. 2, ll. 30-34, which reads:

Ioannicis sacri Monachi, itémque Cardani et Prothesingeli Corcyrae Insulae, omnia necessaria à tribus medicis: Hippocrate, Galeno et Melechio: praeterea de astris, Sole et Luna, et de Dieta XII. mensium, et de sectione vena in ipsis (in charta bibacina.)

First edition of this item in Hartung 1578: Eii verso, ll. 12-16. Recent editions by Foerster 1877: 28, cols 1-2, no. μβ', and Papazoglu 1983: 401.

The current location of this item is unknown. See also Papazoglou 1983: 346, no. 42, and above [0442] and [0443].

[1755] [ap. Nessel P. III] I.102.

This manuscript is supposed to contain Galenus, In Hippocratis librum de acutorum victu commentarii V.

The information comes from Ackermann 1821: CLXXXIV, no. 15 (without brackets).

The reference is to Nessel 1690, part III, entitled as follows:

Catalogi Bibliothecae Caesareae Manuscriptorum Pars III, quae complectitur Manuscriptos Medicos Graecos.

No manuscript containing this text is listed in Nessel 1690, part III. According to the Index ... alphabeticus in Id., part VI, pp. 3-119, sub nomine Claudius Galenus (= pp. 54-55), there is only one codex containing this treatise (only Book I) in Kollar's catalogue: philosophicus et philologicus 208, ff. 123r-134r (described in Id., part IV, p. 114; see no. 7 for this specific text) (on this manuscript, see Hunger 1961: 317-318)

Nevertheless, according to Hunger and Kresten 1969: 55-59, especially 59, the current medicus graecus 15 (= [1778]) contains a fragment of Galen's commentary on Hippocrates, De acutorum victu (f. 134r-v). However, in Nessel 1690, Part III, p. 26, no. XV, the list of the texts contained in this manuscript does not include any specific mention of this treatise:

... Continentur eo Anonymi cuiusdam Autoris Eclogae sive Excerpta ex variis Hippocratis & Galeni Operibus, ut & ex Aristotelis Problematibus Physicis. Primum inter hasce Eclogas tenent locum Eclogae ex Galeni Libris de Locis affectis.

This manuscript is described in the same way in [1748], without mention of the text listed here, however.

Same as [1778].

[1756] [ap. Nessel III 27 (?) no. 5] I.80.

This manuscript is supposed to contain Galenus, De differentiis februm libri II.

The information comes from Ackermann 1821: CI, no. 2 (without brackets or question mark).

The reference to Nessel is to Nessel 1690, part III, page 27, text no. 5, which is contained ff. 49r-55v in the manuscript medicus 16 (described ibid., at pp. 26-28).

The manuscript corresponds to the current medicus graecus 16 (= [1780]) where the text of Galen appears at ff. 49r-55v (Hunger and Kresten 1969: 60-62 for the manuscript, 60 for the text).

Same as [1780].

[1757]

[38 (?)] I.80.

This codex is supposed to contain Galenus, De differentiis febrium libri II.

This information is probably an incorrect reproduction of the item identified as follows in Ackermann 1821: CI, no. 2, ctd. (without brackets or question mark):

Alius cod., isque integer, est no. 28. vid. De Nessel P. III. p. 38.

On this basis, it appears that, contrary to Diels' catalogue, the number 38 is not a shelfmark (supposedly corresponding to medicus graecus 38 = [1801]), but a reference to page 38 in Nessel 1690, part III.

Nessel 1690, part III, pp. 38-40 describes the codex medicus graecus XXVIII (as correctly noted by Ackermann 1821: CI, ll. 6-7) as containing (ff. 18r-26v) a Liber de Febrium differentiá, attributed by Nessel to "Eiusdem", that is, Theophilus.

This codex corresponds to the current medicus graecus 28 (= [1792]), on which see Hunger and Kresten 1969: 76-78. In this catalogue, the text of ff. 18r-26v is identified as Anonymus, πόσαι διαφοραὶ τῶν πυρετῶν β'. The manuscript opens with texts by Theophilus Protospatharius (ff. 2r-17v) and Galenus (f. 17v), the first of which may have induced Nessel to attribute the text of ff. 18r-26v to Theophilus.

69 B 101 I.3.

This item is a copy of the 1538 Froben (Basel) edition of Hippocrates, Opera omnia, with handwritten notes by Janus Cornarius (ca. 1500-ca. 1558) in the margins, particularly in De regimine and De morbo sacro.

Current shelfmark is *69.B.101.

[1759]

131 I.79.

This is a copy of fragments from Galenus, De morborum causis.

The number 131 does not seem to correspond to any shelfmark in the present collections of the Österreichische Nationalbibliothek. Among the medici graeci manuscripts of the library, Galenus, De morborum causis appears in the codex no. 15 (= [1778]) ff. 75r-77r according to Hunger and Kresten 1969: 55-59, especially 56.

The number 131 might be an incorrect transformation of 231 as the codex medicus graecus 15 (= [1778]) is described in Lambeck ed. Kollar vol. 6 (1780) on colls. 230-231.

Possibly the same as [1778]. Also [1760].

- [1760] [131] I.126.
 The manuscript here is supposed to contain Galenus, De morbis excerpta.
 This item might be the same as [1759], and the text referred to here might be De morborum causis.
 Possibly the same as [1759] and [1778].
- [1761] [179] I.44.
 This manuscript is supposed to be a copy of Hippocrates, Prognostica.
 The number 179 does not seem to correspond to any shelfmark in the current collections of the Österreichische Nationalbibliothek. Among the medici graeci manuscripts of the library, the Hippocratic Prognostica appear in the no. 15 (= [1778]), ff. 169r-174v, according to Hunger and Kresten 1969: 55-59, especially 59.
 The number 179 might be an incorrect reproduction of 169, that is, the folio where the text starts in the codex medicus graecus 15.
 Possibly the same as [1778].

- [1765] 4772 (tab. cod. III 382) I.14, 18.
This is a Latin manuscript. The mention tab. cod. III 382 is a reference to the catalogue of Latin manuscripts in Vienna, entitled Tabulae codicum manuscriptorum praeter graecos et orientales in Bibliotheca Palatina Vindobonensi asservatorum (Vindobonae: Caroli Geroldi Filius, 1869), vol. 3, page 382, where this manuscript is listed (actual reference is pp. 382-383). This codex contains the following texts on ff. 58r-109r:
Collectanea varia ex historia litteraria medica, videlicet: Vita Hippocratis, iusjurandum Hippocratis, graece et latine, Epistola Hippocratis de Microcosmo ad regem Ptolomaeum [sic], Epistola eadem ab anonymo metrica redacta, ... omnia a manu ipsius Cuspiniani perscripta.
Johannes Cuspinianus is Johan Spiesshaymer (1473-1529).

- [1779] [15] I.56; II.10.
This codex, supposedly containing Hippocrates, Excerpta varia (I.56) and Galenus, Defebribus (II.10), may very well be the medicus graecus 15 (= [1778]), containing among others (ff. 81v-83r) extracts from Galenus, De febribus, and (ff. 139r-182r) excerpts from several Hippocratic treatises (Hunger and Kresten 1969: 55-59).

Also [1750], [1756] and [1781], and possibly [1749].
- [1781] 16 (ol. 35) I.5; II.71.
This manuscript containing Hippocrates Prognosticon (I.5) and Oribasius, Opera varia (II.71) is the medicus graecus 16 (= [1780]), where the Hippocratic treatise and fragments from Oribasius, Collectiones medicae, can be found in the margins of ff. 185v-261v and on ff. 284v-287r, respectively (Hunger and Kresten 1969: 60-62; also Alexanderson 1963: 91 for Hippocrates).

The mention “ol. 35” is not part of its current shelfmark; it is the one attributed to the manuscript in Lambeck 1674: 144-152 (also Hunger 1953: 31, table Codices medici II, sub numero 35).

- [1793] [28 (?)] I.20, 114.
This codex is supposed to contain Hippocrates, De humoribus (I.20), and Galenus, De succedaneis (I.114).
According to Hunger and Kresten 1969: 111, sub nomine Galenos, and 112, sub nomine Hippokrates, no Vindobonensis medicus graecus contains these two treatises.
However, the codex medicus graecus 28 (= [1792]) contains Galenus, De humoribus ex Hippocrate on ff. 184r-186v.
As for Galenus, De succedaneis, it does not seem to be available in any Vindobonensis medicus (see Hunger and Kresten 1969: 111, sub nomine Galenos). Diels' information may be a transformation of Ackermann 1821: CLXX, no. 138 (where there are no brackets or question mark):
Excerpta ex Pauli Aeginetae libro VII. De medicamentis succedaneis secund. Galen. sunt in bibl. Vind. no. 28 de Ness. III. P. 39.
Ackermann's reference is to Nessel 1690, part III, p. 39, about the codex medicus 28 described on pp. 38-40 (corresponding to the medicus graecus 28). On p. 39, Nessel lists the following item:
Quinto ... item Excerpta ex (1) Paul Aeginetae Libro septimo de Medicamentis succedaneis secundum Galenum.
The codex medicus graecus 28 contains, ff. 138v-139v, a text entitled Γαληνοῦ ἐκ τὰ ἀντίβωλα, which corresponds to Paulus Aegineta, Epitome medica, 7.25 (De succedaneis).

179 II.114.

This item, which is not listed among the copies of De IV aetatibus praenotio in Diels' catalogue (I.49), appears in the Addenda (= II.114). There, the catalogue specifies that this text is an extract from De aere, aquis, locis (Littré 2.42-50).

The text does appear (f. 123v) in the manuscript Vindobonensis philosophicus et philologicus 179 (= [1824]). However, it is not a fragment from De aere, aquis, locis, but from Aphorismi (Littré 4.490-492) on prognosis (Hunger 1961: 288; on the text see Magdelaine 1994: 203n1).

Wolfenbüttel (DE)

Bibl. Guelf. August. (Bibliotheca Guelfi Augusti [August Guelph's Library]), now Herzog August Bibliothek Wolfenbüttel (Herzog August Library Wolfenbüttel)

Of the several collections preserved in Wolfenbüttel library, the following four contain Greek medical manuscripts (listed here in alphabetical order of their usual Latin designation):

- Augustei (Augustiani in Diels; see [1839] and [1840]);
- Gudian (see [1481]-[1485]);
- Helmstadiens (Helmstatenses in Diels; see [1851] and [1852]);
- Weissenburgerani (see [1853] and [1854]).

Diels' catalogue distinguishes them, and also uses the general designation Guelferbytani (referring to Wolfenbüttel) with the abbreviation Gud. (= Gudiani) (see [1842]-[1850]).

Diels also refers to the catalogue by Ebert 1827 (explicitly in [1841] and implicitly in [1842]-[1850]), and cites it as if it were a collection within Wolfenbüttel Library.

Diels' catalogue identifies the manuscripts according to three different systems and uses more than one such system for some manuscripts (generating duplicates):

- shelfmark in [1839] and [1853];
- shelfmark followed by the sequential number of the manuscript (between parentheses or not) in a catalogue in [1851];
- sequential number of the manuscript in a catalogue followed by the shelfmark (between parentheses or not) in [1840]-[1850], [1852] and [1854].

Augustiani

- [1839] [18, 1] I.38.
 Current shelfmark: 18.1 Aug. 4^{to}.
 von Heinemann 1900: 234-236.
 Also [1840].
- [1840] 3132 (18.1 Aug. 4°) N.27.
 The number 3132 is the sequential number of the manuscript in von Heinemann 1900: 234-236.
 Same as [1839].

Ebert

- [1841] 364 (7 und 8 Gud. lat.)N.29.
 The mention “Ebert” refers to the catalogue by Ebert 1827. The number 364 is the sequential number of the manuscript in this catalogue (Ebert 1827: 75).
 Current shelfmark: 7 and 8 Gud. Lat. 2°.
 This is the 1525 edition of Galen, Opera omnia (in Greek), Venetiis, in aedibus Aldi, et Andreae Asulani soceri, with marginal notes by Joseph Justus Scaliger (1540-1609).
 Köhler and Milchsack 1913: 81.
 Also [1844].

Guelferb. (Guelferbytani)

Under this designation, Diels’ catalogue lists items of the Gudiani collection. Numbers are not shelfmarks, but the sequential numbers in Ebert 1827. Following this number, Diels’ catalogue provides between parentheses the shelfmark as in Ebert 1827 (which does not exactly corresponds to current shelfmarks).

- [1842] 2 (47 Gud. gr.) N.62.
 The number 2 is the sequential number of the manuscript in Ebert 1827: 1.
 Current shelfmark: 47 Gud. graec. fol.
 Köhler and Milchsack 1913: 34-35, where Köhler hypothesizes that this manuscript might be [0903], 2nd part.
 Also [1843].
- [1843] 2 (Gud. 47) II.78.
 Same as [1842].
- [1844] 364 (Gud. 7 et 18) I.58.
 The number 364 is a sequential number in Ebert 1827: 75.
 Current shelfmark: 7 and 8 Gud. lat. 2° (and not 7 and 18).
 Same as [1841].

- [1845] 368 (11 Gud. gr.) N.33 (2).
The number 368 is the sequential number of the manuscript in Ebert 1827: 75.
Current shelfmark: 11 Gud. graec. fol.
Köhler and Milchsack 1913: 6.
Also [1846].
- [1846] 368 (Gud. 11) I.86, 87.
Same as [1845].
- [1847] 369 (Gud. 69) I.92.
The number 369 is the sequential number in Ebert 1827: 76.
Current shelfmark: 69. Gud. graec. 4^{to}.
Köhler and Milchsack 1913: 43-44.
17th-century manuscript, possibly autograph by Friedrich Lindenbrog (1573-1648).
Also [1848]-[1850].
- [1848] 369 (69 Gud. gr.) N.33.
Same as [1847].
- [1849] 369. 370 (Gud. 69) I.93.
The numbers 369 and 370 are sequential numbers in Ebert 1827: 76, where the same manuscript is dealt with in two different entries.
Same as [1847].
- [1850] 370 (69 Gud. gr.) N.34.
The number 370 is a sequential number in Ebert 1827: 76.
Same as [1847].
- Helmstatenses
- [1851] 757.837 I.73.
The number 757 is the shelfmark of the manuscript and the number 837 its sequential number in von Heinemann 1886: 193.
Current shelfmark: 757 Helmst.
von Heinemann 1886: 193.
Also [1852].
- [1852] 837 (757 Helmst.) N.31.
The number 837 is the sequential number of the manuscript in von Heinemann 1886: 193, and 757 its shelfmark.
Same as [1851].

Weissenb. (Weissenburgerani)

- [1853] 64 I.76.
 Palimpsest.
 Scriptio superior: Isidorus Hispalensis, Etymologiae.
 Scriptio inferior: Galenus, De alimentorum facultatibus (frg.).
 von Heinemann 1903: 295-296; more recently: Butzmann
 1964: 204-210; Harlfinger, Brunschön and Vasiloudi
 2006: 146-150.
 For other folios of the same manuscript, see [1608].
 Current shelfmark: 64 Weiss.
 Also [1854].
- [1854] 4148 N.32.
 (64 Weissenb.) The number 4148 is the sequential number of the manuscript in von Heinemann 1903: 295-296, and 64 is its shelfmark.
 Same as [1853].

- [1855] 1106 (ol. 562) II.89 (2), 90.
Graux, ed. Martin 1892: 212-213, no. 562.
The actual shelfmark at the Pilar was 562. When the collection moved to the Archivo-Biblioteca del Cabildo metropolitano (La Seo) in Zaragoza, the shelfmark was 11-35.
The number 1106 in Diels is of unknown origin (Olivier 1976: 56) and probably comes from an old catalogue. It is still used in Ihm 2002: 81, no. 39.
This manuscript is now New Haven, Yale University, Harvey Cushing/John

Index

The index references the library names as in Diels' catalogue and the census. The names cited in Diels, including some owners of manuscripts and collections that no longer exist, exactly reproduce Diels' usage (German, Latin, and transcription into Latin alphabet for Greek names). Library names in the census appear in their original language and alphabet (Armenian, Cyrillic, Greek, Latin). All library names are followed by a city name, unless the name of the library includes the name of the place (e.g. Uppsala Universitetsbibliotek). City names exactly reproduce the information provided in Diels (most often in German) or in the census (in the original language). As a consequence library names may be followed by a city name that does not correspond to current usage (e.g. Venedig as in Diels for Venezia [Venice]) and some library names may be followed by two different appellations of the same location (e.g. the libraries of the monasteries on Mount Athos, followed by Ἁγίον Όρος [Holy Mountain] as per the census and by Ἀθῶς [Athos] as per Diels). The English translation provided for all names in the present volume (place and library names) are included here.
